Tax Evasion To Have Role In Snaring of 138 Gamblers

'Big Stick' Due to Swing

By Murrey Marder
Post Reporter

The legal weapon which gamblers fear most—investigation for income tax evasion—is expected to play a major role in the grand jury probe of gambling which will be launched here May 17.

While income-tax evasion is only one of many charges which may result from the probe, in addition to charges of conspiracy, transporting contraband, and violation of Federal and District gambling statutes, it is regarded as the Government's "big stick."

Fay Guest of O'Dwyer.

Growing out of Friday's disclosure that police have given the United States attorney's office a list of 138 "bigger gamblers" in Washington alone was the probability that these lists can serve as a basis for a broad-scale check to determine possible tax evasion.

United States Attorney George Morris Fay, who called for the special gambling probe here, has said he is "not in a position to discuss whether we will go into the income-tax aspects of gambling."

Fay has made it clear, however, that "we are going into whatever we can find— we're in this all the way."

Yesterday, Fay extended his search for anti-gambling "ideas" by combining some business with his weekend trip to New York, where he is a guest of "old friend" Mayor William O'Dwyer at Gracie Mansion, the city's executive residence.

Fay Welcomes Maher's Help

O'Dwyer announced there that Fay, whom he met during World War II, was examining New York City's gambling files and also conferring with New York City Commissioner of Investigation John Murtagh.

Fay is scheduled to return here tonight, after attending the annual dinner of New York's "Anvil Chorus," an organization of judges, lawyers and physicians, similar in some respects to this city's Gridiron Club.

Chief Murphy Rejects Plan For Rotation

Fire Department Head Says Proposal Is 'Unsatisfactory'

By James E. Ficken
Post Reporter

Fire Chief Clement Murphy has rejected a Fire Department personnel rotation plan submitted by a committee of his critics which he appointed.

Under the plan, firemen would be transferred to a new battalion each year for their first six years, then be allowed to choose one of the battalions as a permanent station, he said.

Murphy rejected the proposal as unsatisfactory. "I'll not approve a thing like that," he declared.

The six-man committee was named by Murphy February 6 following his acquittal on "demoralization" charges by a special civilian trial board January 30.

Murphy's own program for transferring firemen, which his opponents said was not a "plan" at all, formed the basis for the broadest of nine "demoralization" charges at the trial.

The committee's program, he declared, is no answer to the need for additional training in the higher ranks of the department. "It doesn't provide for officers or prospective officers who have not had

Car Knocks Baby From Carriage; Sister, 5, Saved

A 5-year-old girl was snatched from the path of a careening automobile yesterday a moment before it struck the baby carriage in which her 1½-month-old sister lay sleeping.

The infant, Nastasia Hangmanole, of 1341 Underwood st. nw., escaped with minor bruises when she was knocked from her carriage at 5509 13th st. nw.

Her older sister, Helen, standing watch, was grabbed and drawn away from the auto's path by Miss Jane Colevas, of the 13th st. address, where the children's mother, Mrs. Emanuel V. Hangmanole was visiting.

Police said the automobile was knocked out of control when it was struck from the rear by another at nearby 13th and Kennedy sts. nw. Residents said they have been petitioning for more than two years for a traffic light at the intersection.

Biggest Airline

By John G. Norris
Post Reporter

A single, American military airline, spanning most of the globe, will be created June 1 in what well may be the "testtube for true unification" of the armed forces.

Defense Secretary James Forrestal announced yesterday that organization of the new "Military Air Transport Service" has been completed and it will begin operating on the first of the month. On that day the Air Transport Command and Naval Air Transport Servvice will pass out of existence and be merged into the new unit.

Under Gen. Vandenberg

MATS, which will operate directly under Gen. Hoyt Vandenberg, Air Force chief of staff, will be the world's greatest airline. Its main trunk lines will stretch more than 71,000 miles—as far west as Karachi, India, and eastward to Dhahran, Saudi Arabia.

Northward, MATS routes will extend to Thule, Greenland, above the Arctic Circle, and south to Rio de Janeiro. A total of 274 transport planes will be in operation initially—215 of them four-engined DC-4s and the remainder twin-engined DC-3s. Some 11,900 Air Force and Navy officers and men will be involved.

Maj. Gen. Laurence S. Kuter, USAF, commands the unified service, and will maintain his headquarters here. Rear Admiral John P. Whitney has been named vice commander, and two Air Force officers will serve as deputies.

Gen. Tunner In Charge

Maj. Gen. William [illegible] Tunner heads up the actual transport operations, while Maj. Gen. H. M. McClelland will command the support services, which include airways and air communications, air weather service, air rescue and flight service.

Officials hailed the merger as the first major, concrete result of unification. They said it may serve as a "pioneer" in developing a workable system for the armed services to actually get together into one force.

Assistant Secretary of Air Force Cornelius V. Whitney told reporters the "command function" of MATS "is unique."

"This is true unification," he said. "Naval officers can command Air Force people and vice versa. Our instructions are that there is

Jet Plane to Fly D. C. Mail to N. Y. In 25 Minutes

The postoffice is going to fly some mail next Saturday between New York and Washington in 25 minutes, hardly time enough for the ink to get good and dry.

Two jet planes are going to make the trip as part of the thirtieth anniversary of the starting of air mail service.

When the first air mail flight between the two cities was made on May 15, 1918, the trip took 3 hours and 20 minutes, including a 20 minute stop at Philadelphia.

The jet planes will make their trip Saturday without stops.

The speed demonstration will mark simultaneous anniversary ceremonies at Washington National Airport and New York's Idlewild Airport.

Accused of Singing Off Key

Sigma Nus Called Nuisance By Sleep-Bereft Neighbors

By Joseph Paull
Post Reporter

The lads at the Sigma Nu house, 1622 21st st. nw., have been staying up nights—but not to burn the midnight oil.

According to testimony of their neighbors, the fraternity brothers have been screaming, cursing their neighbors, banging doors and blocking an alley. Their girl friends are wont to giggle on the lawn at 2 o'clock in the morning.

Nearly a score of the neighbors came into the Corporation Counsel's office at Municipal Court yesterday, where they wiped their somewhat-bleary eyes and complained of the nighttime fraternity antics.

No matter what their other complaints were, the charge of the neighbors that hurt the fraternity men most was this:

"The men of Sigma Nu, they sing off key."

The Sigma Nus were quick to tell reporters that at the recent interfraternity sing at George Washington University, Sigma Nu didn't do as well as expected but did place third.

The "offkey" charge was made primarily by Mrs. Edith Sutton, 1619 21st st. nw., who is somewhat of an expert on Sigma Nus. She said she lived next to their house at the University of Texas, "but never have I known Sigma Nus to act like these Sigma Nus," she bemoaned.

"I do wish they would sing—if they must sing—in the same key or at least not try to sing different songs at the same time," Mrs. Sutton said.

Robert E. Lynch, attorney and owner of the apartment house at 1618 21st st. nw., had his own

On Two Bills

'Red' Riders Imperil 2200 Jobs in D. C.

Jobs of more than 700 District school teachers and 1500 Government Printing Office printers may be imperiled if riders attached to bills by the House Appropriations Committee become law.

The "Red" riders would ban payment of any funds to members of unions whose officers haven't signed the non-Communist affidavits required of unions wishing to use the services of the National Labor Relations Board.

The District's Fiscal 1949 Appropriations Act, passed by the House Wednesday, includes such a rider.

The legislative offices bill, which includes the GPO, has not been reported out, but the Appropriations Committee has indicated it will include such a rider on all bills. Officers of the International Typographical Union, with about 1500 members at the GPO, have not signed non-Communist affidavits.

Other "loyalty" developments include:

1. Announcement that the District Commissioners' Loyalty Committee will discuss plans early this week for a survey to determine if any city jobs or installations could be considered "sensitive" to national security.

2. Announcement that loyalty oaths for some 200 employes in the Agriculture Department's cafeterias will be discussed next Friday at the regular monthly meeting of the directors of Agriculture's Welfare Association.

Condon Asks Loyalty Note Be Released

Nothing He Wishes Concealed, Scientist Declares to Truman

Dr. Edward U. Condon, declaring "there is nothing about me or my activities that I wish concealed," has asked President Truman to make public the FBI letter reporting on Condon's loyalty.

In a letter to Secretary of Commerce Charles Sawyer, his superior Dr. Condon, head of the National Bureau of Standards, added that "I am desirous that there be a full and complete presentation of all the facts." He said he cannot believe that the letter "contains anything of a factual nature which challenges either my loyalty or discretion, because nothing of the sort exists."

The letter has been a source of conflict between Mr. Truman and the House. It was written last May 15 to the Commerce Department Loyalty Board after an investigation of Dr. Condon's background. The board decided unanimously on February 24 that "no reasonable grounds" exist to doubt Condon's loyalty.

The House Un-American Activities Committee on March 1 charged in a report that the Bureau of Standards director was "one of the weakest links" in the Nation's atomic security. It said he had associated "knowingly or unknowingly" with alleged Soviet espionage agents.

Permanent Truce Talks Due

Jerusalem Cease-Fire Order Quiets 5-Month Warfare Din

Jerusalem, May 8 (AP).—A cease-fire, agreed to by Arabs and Jews, protected Jerusalem and its shrines today for the first time in five months. It went into effect at noon (5 a. m. EST).

The arrangement was a temporary one designed to prevent hostilities until a permanent Jerusalem truce can be negotiated.

The Jewish Agency said it had learned that talks for a permanent truce in the Holy City would begin Sunday. The Jews are demanding free access from Jewish Tel Aviv to the Wailing Wall in Jerusalem's old walled area, the deportation of foreign Arab fighters and an open route from Jerusalem to Tel Aviv.

Gen. Sir Alan Gordon Cunningham, Palestine high commissioner, negotiated the cease-fire with Arab leaders in Jericho yesterday. The Jews did not attend the Jericho talks.

Cunningham sent word to the Jewish Agency of the Arab agreement to halt the fighting if the Jews did. An agency spokesman said Haganah, the Jewish militia, issued cease-fire orders to Jewish units in Jerusalem.

Last night there was widespread shooting and mortar fire throughout Jerusalem.

Ismail Safwat Pasha, former Iraq war minister, told a reporter in Amman, Trans-Jordan, today that he had resigned as commander of the Arab volunteer (Yarmuk) army in Palestine.

It was learned that an Egyptian army officer is due in Amman soon to confer with King Abdullah and other Arab League leaders before assuming command of the army.

30-Mile Penetration By Egyptians Claimed

Cairo, Egypt, May 8 (AP).—The "Command Volunteers, Southern Front Palestine," issued a communique today saying volunteer Egyptian forces had penetrated about 30 miles into the Holy Land.

"The people of Palestine received our troops enthusiastically and shouted for Arabism, Egypt and King Farouk," the communique said.

Britain Reported Asked To Halt Safad Siege

Beirut, Lebanon, May 8 (U.P.).—Lebanon has asked British authorities in Palestine to halt the Jewish siege of Safad, Arab city that dominates the Huleh Valley invasion route to the Holy Land, unconfirmed reports said today.

Arab sources said King Abdullah of Trans-Jordan had rushed troops and supplies to Safad's defenders.

The Safad battle is considered here as the fiercest encounter so far reported in Palestine.

5 Members Dissent

Action of Soviet leaders indicate they may be willing to risk an immediate showdown without waiting until they have the atom bomb, the House Armed Services Committee warned yesterday.

A majority report on the Andrews draft bill, signed by 28 members, asserted that the idea that peace was assured at least until 1952—when the Russians might be expected to have the atom bomb—seemed valid six months ago but could no longer be accepted in view of the "specific, aggressive and dangerous actions on the part of the government of the Soviet Union."

A minority report by five members took strong exception to the majority recommendations, declaring that peacetime conscription was "a program for war," and that adoption of the Andrews bill "is unnecessary at this time and will burden the Nation with a tax load and controls over industry which can destroy our democracy."

Termed 'Tragic Error'

The minority added that the proposed step would be "one of the most tragic errors which could be committed by Congress," and one which "will be interpreted by all nations of the world to mean that this country expects war."

In urging passage of the bill to draft men 19 through 25 to bring the armed services up to a total strength of 2,005,882, the majority report declared that Russian actions raised "the new and ominous possibility that the Soviet Union may now be willing to risk a showdown on the assumption that the future can bring only a worsening of the Soviet position."

"It must be recognized as plausible that time, in the view of the Russian government, may now be running against the Soviet Union," it added.

The report declared that "it is in order to deter any such rash decision on the part of the Soviet government that it is now imperative for the United States to transform a reasonable measure of its armed strength from potential to actual."

Estimates of Needs

The report summarized the present position of the United States armed services as follows:

1. The Navy and the Air Force can maintain their present strengths by voluntary means; the Army cannot.

2. The Air Force may be able to attain by voluntary means the increased strength proposed in this bill; the Navy and Army cannot.

3. The military establishment cannot therefore attain or thereafter maintain the proposed strength of 2,005,882 by voluntary means alone.

The majority emphasized that "the 70-group Air Force is not a substitute for selective service," adding: "the committee considers that nothing could be more danger-

White House Parley Fails on Rail Strike; Will Try Again Today

The Gallup Poll

Stassen Far Ahead of Truman In Nation, Near Draw in Dixie

(Vandenberg Talk Increasing. See Section II, Page 3)

By George Gallup
Director, American Institute of Public Opinion

Princeton, N. J., May 8.—The first full indication of the extent of the anti-Truman revolt in the South can be seen in the latest survey of political sentiment by the institute.

In the traditionally Democratic South a Republican candidate for President, Harold E. Stassen, runs neck-and-neck with President Truman in a presidential "trial heat" race. In 13 years of institute polling on political sentiment, nothing like that has ever been found before.

Throughout the nation as a whole Stassen runs considerably ahead of the President and shows a substantial increase of strength since February. Stassen's rise is reflected in three trial heat races over a four-month period, as follows:

If the Presidential election were being held today, and Truman were running for President on the Democratic ticket against Stassen on the Republican ticket and against Wallace on the Third Party ticket, how do you think you would vote?

	Feb. 15	Apr. 11	Today
Stassen	41%	44%	56%
Truman	45	39	33
Wallace	6	7	5
No opin.	8	10	6

The sectional results of the latest poll, showing the almost unprecedented situation of a Republican running as strongly in the South as the Democratic candidate, follow:

	Stassen	Truman	Wall.	No Op.
N. Eng. and M. Atl.	56%	32%	7%	5%
E. Cent.	59	32	4	5
W. Cent.	63	32	2	3
South	42	41	4	13
Mtn. & Pac.	57	32	5	6

The significance of the Southern figures in the poll can be appreciated when one remembers that only once since the Civil War has the Republican Party made any

April 6 Stands Hold

By Marshall Andrews
Post Reporter

Only 60 hours from Tuesday's rail strike deadline, a three-hour White House conference between union and management representatives ended at 6:15 p. m. yesterday in deadlock.

Immediately after the meeting, a spokesman for the operators said they had made their "final offer" and a union leader retorted that "the strike will go on" as scheduled.

Presidential Assistant John R. Steelman said he had asked management representatives to meet with him again at 10 a. m. today.

Code Established For Unions' Lodges

Cleveland, May 8 (AP).—Brotherhood headquarters said today code words have been supplied to their local lodges in connection with the strike called for Tuesday.

The code indicates the authenticity of any new instructions sent by telegraph.

In 1916 the code phrase was "eggs are 45 cents a dozen."

Union officials, he added, had been asked to stand by.

"So far," said Steelman, "it has been impossible to bring the parties to an agreement. We are going to try again tomorrow. I have asked both sides to think over the matter tonight and take it up again with their people."

Last night, at least, found both sides exactly where they stood last April 6, when three operating unions turned down a recommendation of a fact-finding board that they accept pay increases of 15½ cents an hour. The roads had ac-

Soviet Plans North Korea Withdrawal

Action Is Proposed To Force Similar U. S. Step in South

Seoul, Korea, (Sunday) May 9 (AP).—In the midst of preelection violence, the Russians announced they will withdraw their troops from North Korea to force American withdrawal from South Korea.

The Communist terrorism, arson and sobatage were aimed at wrecking Monday's election in South Korea.

American military authorities said there were no indications the Russians were actually packing. One called the move "just another propaganda shot" by the Russians.

The Americans have rejected previous proposals for simultaneous withdrawal on the ground this would hand all Korea over to the Russian-organized North Korean army.

Anderson Resigns Agriculture Post, Effective Monday

By the Associated Press

Secretary of Agriculture Clinton P. Anderson has resigned, effective after Monday, May 10.

The formal resignation, it was learned yesterday, was submitted to President Truman by Anderson at the regular Cabinet meeting Friday. Mr. Truman has not officially accepted it yet and has not designated a successor.

Anderson plans to return to New Mexico, where he is seeking the Democratic nomination for the United States Senate to succeed Senator Hatch (D., N. M.), who is retiring.

Frequently mentioned for the Cabinet post have been Undersecretary of Agriculture Norris E. Dodd, Assistant Secretary Charles Brannan, and Representative John W. Flannagan, jr., (D., Va.).

Conference Delegates Ask Legal Studies, Education Changes

By John W. Ball

Nine hundred delegates to the National Conference on Family Life went home yesterday with 10 recommendations for action for better family living.

The housing section indorsed the Taft-Ellender-Wagner bill, including its public housing program. It voted also to call for more homes to rent, more three-bedroom homes, a greater variety of dwellings for farms as well as cities, and more separate, self-sustaining communities.

The section on legal problems asked for a presidential commission to reexamine laws regulating marriage and divorce, modernized legal procedure, family and juvenile courts with specially trained judges, and extension of legal aid and low cost legal services.

The section on education decided that high school boys and girls should be given training for marriage and family problems. The lack of such training was termed "one of the most fundamental in education today." Until it is available, the section reported, "it will not be possible to stem the tide of

Russian Claims An 'Elixir of Life' In Plant Extract

Moscow, May 8 (AP).—Pravda reported today that a Soviet scientist, V. P. Filatov, has extracted a plant substance with great powers for healing human, animal and plant tissue.

The newspaper referred to the substance as an "elixir of life," but did not represent it as a cure-all.

Pravda said the extract was manufactured from aloe leaves taken from grown plants which are left in a dark room at a temperature of 3 degrees above zero Centigrade just before the plants are about to perish from lack of light. Pravda said the extract has a "healing influence" on the whole organism and individual parts. Filatov was quoted as saying:

"It is entirely evident that the threat of death changes the internal metabolism. Cold increases its deprivation and at the same time does not permit the organism to perish. At this moment from the organism's core there comes to the surface a last resource—a drop of unknown substance. Its strength is enormous and its action decisive. It is the last hope of dying life."

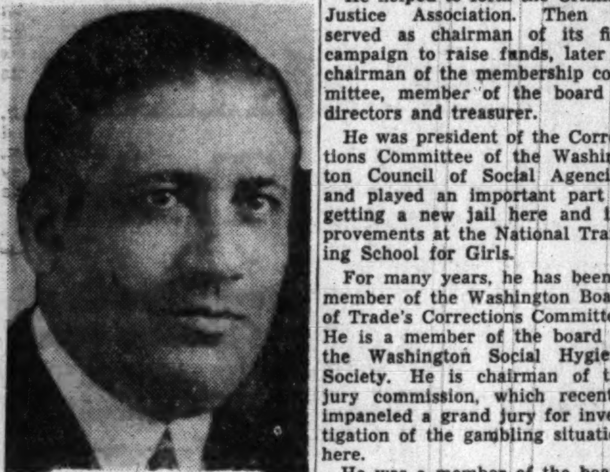
Twenty-four hours a day just aren't enough for Vincent Saccardi to accomplish all the things he'd like to do.

Crime Forum Plan

Saccardi Heads Justice Association



VINCENT SACCARDI

Vincent Saccardi, manager of the Washington district of the Metropolitan Life Insurance Co., has been elected president of the Washington Criminal Justice Association.

He was elected at the annual meeting of the board of directors, at which a plan to conduct crime forums, possibly next fall, was discussed.

According to the plan, public officials from the Police Department, courts, Department of Correction, etc., would be asked to speak on the trends in curtailment of crime here. At the same time the public would learn of the aims and functions of the association, board members learned.

Other officers elected to serve with Saccardi are: first vice president, Roger Robb; second vice president, Edward G. Kemp; secretary, Mrs. Hale Schenefield, and treasurer, Wilmer J. Waller.

Eugene Meyer was reelected honorary president and John A. Remon, whom Saccardi succeeds, was made an honorary member of the executive committee.

Col. Clifford M. Tuteur, U. S. A., ret., was elected to membership of the board of directors. The following board members were reelected for a two-year period:

Francis G. Addison, jr., George C. Clarke, Mrs. Elizabeth M. Cox, John W. Jackson, Milton King, Roger Robb, Robert C. Simmons, Odell S. Smith, Wilmer J. Waller, Fontaine Bradley, Minor Hudson, John J. Corson, Edward G. Kemp, George Maurice Morris, Mrs. Hale Shenefield, L. Mercer Smith, James C. Turner and Mrs. Harvey W. Wiley.

The board unanimously approved a resolution thanking Remon for his tireless work during his term as president of the association.

But with all of that, the newly-elected president of the Washington Criminal Justice Association has a list of accomplishments that do him credit.

Prominent civic and community worker, golf and hunting enthusiast, father of five sons and now grandfather of three girls, he has for many years taken an active part, particularly in work to curtail crime.

He helped to form the Criminal Justice Association. Then he served as chairman of its first campaign to raise funds, later as chairman of the membership committee, member of the board of directors and treasurer.

He was president of the Corrections Committee of the Washington Council of Social Agencies, and played an important part in getting a new jail here and improvements at the National Training School for Girls.

For many years, he has been a member of the Washington Board of Trade's Corrections Committee. He is a member of the board of the Washington Social Hygiene Society. He is chairman of the jury commission, which recently impaneled a grand jury for investigation of the gambling situation here.

He was a member of the board of the Washington Bureau of Rehabilitation and president of the Managers Association of the Metropolitan Life Insurance Co.

On the lighter side, Saccardi is chairman of the House Board of Governors of the Burning Tree Club, and goes out on the golf course every chance he gets.

He is also a member of the National Capital Skeet Club, where he practices for quail hunting in the South and grouse hunting in the North, when he can get away.

Perhaps the hardest time for Saccardi was during World War II, when four of his five sons were serving overseas. They are: Dr. William T. Saccardi, who was a captain in the Medical Corps; Carmin C. Saccardi, a Marine captain; Vincent Saccardi, an Air Forces captain, and Clarence R. Saccardi, an Army private.

Clarence was wounded and then reported missing in the Battle of the Bulge, but fortunately turned up safe and sound. A fifth son, Donald C. Saccardi, is now a student at Georgetown Preparatory School.

A native of New York city, Saccardi arrived in Washington as an insurance company manager 19 years ago. Ever since, he has followed one motto:

"Every citizen should take an active interest in his community and help to better it."

He is an example of just that. He lives at 4815 17th st. nw., with his wife, Mildred.

2 Rail Lines Cancel Long Express Runs

Two Eastern railroads last night announced cancellation of long-haul passenger express runs by Monday afternoon (as travelers here sought early homebound trains at Union Station.

Terminal Superintendent Sidney Kerl estimated an increase of 8 to 10 per cent over normal in number of travelers awaiting outgoing trains here, presumably to beat out the rail strike deadline set for 6 a. m., Tuesday.

From the New York Central came word that many long distance trains with Monday afternoon or night departures must be "canceled, combined or operated with shortened runs." They include the 20th Century Limited between New York and Chicago.

The New Haven and Hartford railroad company said its Montrealer and Washingtonian, between these cities, would be canceled Monday night. Both announcements were contingent on failure to halt the threatened strike.

Increase in passenger travel at Union Terminal was noted as additional carriers announced embargoes on such perishable freight as livestock, poultry, fruits and vegetables.

Some 82 of the Nation's railroads had announced the ban on such shipments up to late yesterday evening. Five of the six roads serving Washington stopped accepting perishables at 12:10 a. m. yesterday, but officials said the effect of the embargo would not be felt here to any extent until today or tomorrow. Earlier shipments continued to arrive.

If the strike materializes, District meat and produce wholesalers may have to use air and truck shipments to feed the area, which has about a 10-day supply of meat, according to Joseph B. Danzansky, counsel for the wholesale food division of the Merchants and Manufacturers Association.

First-class mail will be kept moving by air and by truck as well as possible in the event of a rail strike, an inspector at the Washington Postoffice said yesterday. Prearranged plans call for flying mail to central points in district 3 of the Railway Mail Service area, which services most of Maryland, Virginia, West Virginia and North Carolina from its Washington headquarters.

The letter mail, which may be restricted as to weight, will be distributed from the airfields by all available post office trucks, supplemented by Army vehicles where necessary. In previous rail strikes acceptance of other classes of mail was discontinued.

For nearby points, mail trucks will parallel present railroad routes, and smaller post offices will send trucks to distributing points to pick up their mail.

Air and bus lines, which are already receiving increased inquiries and reservations for passenger travel, are ready to add extra sections to their scheduled operations.

Swift Sees No Hope Of Settling Strike

Chicago, May 8 (U.P.).—Swift & Co., one of the Big Four packers against which the CIO United Packinghouse Workers are on strike, told its employes today that there is no prospect of reaching a settlement with the union.

Swift made the statement in a letter "to Swift production and maintenance people" as Federal mediators prepared for another attempt to end the 53-day Nation-wide meat strike.

A Washington announcement yesterday said the mediators had summoned packers and union to a new meeting here.

In its letter, signed by Manager L. W. Bermond, Swift said the company had told Cyrus Ching, director of the Federal Mediation and Conciliation Service, that its representatives would be unable to meet with him today, but could arrange to attend a meeting at a later date if it could be shown there is "anything specific to be talked about."

It "strongly" urged that no meeting be called "unless there is some reasonable basis for assuming the 9-cent offer would be accepted" by the union.

Rail Representatives Present Solid Front

ON THIS SIDE—MANAGEMENT—At the White House yesterday for the meeting that failed to settle issues in Tuesday's scheduled rail strike were these four spokesmen for the railroads. They are (from left), Daniel P. Loomis, W. T. Faricy, Heberty A. Enochs and Charles D. Mackay. Faricy is president of the American Railroads and others are regional conference representatives. Both sides in the dispute will be brought together again today

White House Parley Fails to Avert Rail Strike

cepted the board's recommendations March 30.

Shortly before Steelman announced continued deadlock, W. T. Faricy, president of the Association of American Railroads, told reporters the carriers would not go beyond the 15½-cent raise.

"That," he said, "is our final offer."

Fifteen minutes later the union leaders left the White House and announced they would not accept the operators' proposition.

"That's no settlement," declared Alvanley Johnston, head of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers. "As far as we're concerned the strike will go on."

Later Faricy issued a statement saying:

"If there's a Nation-wide strike, the responsibility for that catastrophe will rest squarely on the shoulders of the leaders of the three unions representing only 10 per cent of the railway employes who refuse to follow the recommendations of the President's board — recommendations which have been followed by the other 90 per cent of the industry."

Most of the Nation's railroads, meanwhile, had placed embargoes on shipments of perishable food, livestock and poultry to avoid spoilage and suffering by stranded stock. Fears of food shortages and skyrocketing prices were felt in the great cities of the East, while farm areas apprehensively regarded dangers of spoilage to harvested and unmovable truck crops.

U. S. Can Seize Roads

One hole card was left the Administration should negotiations fail to break the deadlock in the short time still remaining. That was Government seizure of the roads under a 1916 law adopted as a World War I emergency measure and still on the books.

Under that law the Government probably could operate the railroads with Army personnel, President Truman has been told by Attorney General Clark. Or the railroad men could be informed they were now working for the Government under a Supreme Court ruling in the coal mine case last year that the miners could not legally strike against the Government.

Yesterday's afternoon session was preceded by a meeting in the morning between Steelman and the operators, who had come here from Chicago at Steelman's request. The White House said the meeting reviewed the entire situation, "especially the recommendations of President Truman's fact-finding board."

Then at 2:45 p. m., both sides appeared at the White House and sat down in separate rooms to deliberate, with Steelman shuttling between them. The operators emerged first, leaving Steelman with the union leaders who came out about 15 minutes later.

The fruitless afternoon meeting was a case, apparently, of grasping at straws, Steelman said after the morning meeting with the operators that he had found no basis on which to bring the two sides together. The session, nevertheless, was held.

The three unions involved represent a hold-out 10 per cent of the railroad employes of the country. But with their members off the job, the roads could not operate or the other 90 per cent of their employes remain at work.

Unions involved are the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, the Brotherhood of Firemen and Enginemen and the Switchmen's Union. They represent 125,000 of the 1,350,000 employes of Class I roads.

Today's strike threat had its genesis last September 2 when approximately one million non operating employes accepted 15½ cents an hour after seeking a 20-cent increase. September 30 the five operating brotherhoods, representing engine crews, trainmen and conductors, demanded 30 cents more an hour with a $3-a-day minimum and changes in 44 working rules. Two months later, the two brotherhoods representing trainmen and conductors settled for 15½ cents an hour and four rule changes; the other three held out and began taking strike votes

February 1 Set as Date

Then on November 24 the Railway Mediation Board opened hearings in Chicago after notification by the carriers that negotiations were in deadlock. The board reported breakdown in negotiations January 16 and the three unions set February 1 as a strike date.

President Truman, under the National (Railway) Mediation Act, created an emergency fact-finding board, an act which automatically delayed the strike. Exactly two months later, on March 27, the board recommended the 15½-cent pay raise and some rules changes, which was accepted by the carriers and rejected by the unions. The latter, however, offered to resume direct negotiations with the roads until April 27 and meetings began at Chicago April 14.

By April 27, the compulsory 30-day "cooling-off" period expired, negotiations broke down and May 11 was set as the new strike date. White House efforts to bring the sides together then began, culminating in yesterday's meetings.

An injunction cannot be sought against the unions because they were not included under provisions of the Taft-Hartley Act, the National Mediation Act having been deemed sufficient to meet the railroad labor situation. Under pressure of the current strike threat, however, sentiment has been growing in Congress to put teeth in the National Mediation Act or to bring rail unions under the Taft-Hartley law.

Meat Strike, Now in 8th Week, Fails to Cut Supply Seriously

Chicago, May 8 (AP).—The meat packing industry strike is now in its eighth week, but the meat-eating public generally reports "'it doesn't hurt—much."

Struck packing plants have cut production from 20 to 100 per cent. Many of the approximately 100,000 strikers have gone broke and depend on financial and food support from citizens' groups and other unions.

But an Associated Press survey of more than 35 cities from coast to coast indicates there are few disturbing meat shortages. The public, for the most part, is paying higher prices on beef and less money for pork.

Substitutes Available

Bacon, sausage, and some higher grades of beef and lamb were scarce here and there, but most reports said substitutes were readily available.

The CIO Packinghouse Workers of America went on strike March 16 against some 65 plants in which they have contracts with the four biggest packers, Swift & Co., Armour & Co., Cudahy Packing Co., and Wilson & Co. At issue is a union demand for a wage increase of 29 cents an hour and a packers' offer of nine cents.

During the strike period farmers have complained they were losing money because they could not market their livestock. A Congressional investigation of the strike asked by Senator Johnson (D., Colo.) will be considered Thursday by the Senate Labor Committee.

Production Recovering

But meat production has been recovering steadily since the strike began. Under Federal inspection production was around 305,000,000 pounds the week before the strike started and dropped to 163,000,000 pounds the first week. By the sixth week it had recovered to 273,000,000 pounds, and is continuing to rise.

These are some of the reasons why the public has suffered little even though a large share of the meat processing capacity has been tied up:

Local butchers and small killers, independent packers, and big four plants under contract to the AFL Meat Cutters Union or the CUA Brotherhood of Packinghouse Workers have helped to fill the gap by working overtime.

Cold storage supplies of meat have been drawn on, the public has turned to poultry, canned meats, and other food sources.

Demand has dropped off as commodity prices in general have tended to rise during the eight weeks.

Long Lines Telephone Union Accepts Call for Mediation

New York, May 8 (AP).—There will be no immediate strike of some 23,000 long lines telephone workers despite expiration of their contract at 11 tonight, a union spokesman said.

John J. Moran, president of the CIO American Union of Telephone Workers, made his statement after the close of an unsuccessful mediation session between union officials and leaders of the American Telephone and Telegraph Co. to reach a new pact before the expiration deadline.

He said, however, there would be no immediate strike, since he had accepted an invitation from Cyrus S. Ching, head of the Federal Conciliation Service, to meet in Washington Tuesday with representatives of the service and the company in new talks.

There was no comment from the company on China's invitation.

The contract covers the 23,000 employes, handling the bulk of the Nation's long distance calls, in 42 States.

Meeting Set for Monday In Chrysler Negotiations

Detroit, May 8 (AP).—Federal conciliators, striving to avert a strike of 75,000 Chrysler Corp. auto workers set for Wednesday, announced late today that principals have agreed to meet Mondany to review the situation.

Federal Conciliator Leo Kotin said company officials and officers of the CIO United Auto Workers were agreeable to the Monday meeting.

The union broke off negotiations with Chrysler Thursday, asserting the two sides were "hopelessly deadlocked."

Boeing Again Refuses

Seattle, May 8 (U.P.).—The Boeing Airplane Co. today again refused to attend conferences called by Federal Mediation Director Cyrus Ching to settle the 16-day strike at Boeing's Seattle plants.

In reply to Ching's demand that the company take part "fully and promptly" in discussions at Washington Monday, Boeing president William M. Allen repeated his refusal of Thursday in which he declined to enter into collective bargaining negotiations with the striking machinists' union.

He said the section of the Taft-Hartley Act which provided for the Federal Mediation Service to bring about meetings between employers and employes "has no application to the present situation at this plant."

Trade Board Aid May Be Asked In Food Supply if Strike Comes

The Commissioners may ask the Washington Board of Trade to cooperate in handling the city's fresh food supply situation if the national railroad strike is called Tuesday morning as scheduled.

Engineer Commissioner Gordon R. Young said last night the board has helped the city in similar emergencies in the past and "probably" will be asked to do so again.

General Young said the Commissioners had discussed preparations for the strike "informally" last week and would meet again Monday to make final plans.

Purchasing Officer Roland Brennan said the District will buy canned goods "wherever they can be found" for city institutions if the railroad embargo on perishable food shipments cuts off the fresh meat supply here for more than two days.

Under plans being drafted by Brennan the District government would send its own trucks if necessary to pick up the supplies. Brennan said the plan will be the same as that prepared for use during the railroad strike crisis in May, 1946.

Brennan said canned meat, fish and poultry would be substituted for fresh meat on diets at District hospitals and other institutions.

Additional poultry supplies will be obtained from an Eastern Shore poultryman, whose contract with the District permits the city to increase its purchase amounts at any time, he said.

Arabs Face Choice Of War or Revolt

By Joseph C. Goodwin

Damascus, Syria, May 6 (Delayed) (AP).—The Arab world, rocked by Jewish military successes in Palestine and plagued by political bickering at home, appears to observers here to have jockeyed itself into the position of choosing between all-out war in the Holy Land or revolts at home.

The Syrian and Lebanese premiers now are in Riyad, Saudi Arabian capital. They apparently are seeking King Ibn Saud's support in internal problems as well as aid for Palestine Arabs.

Observers in Damascus generally agree that Syria and Lebanon are seeking Saudi Arabia's help in stemming attempts to unite the Arab lands of the Middle East under a single government headed by King Abdullah of Trans-Jordan. Such a unification would fulfill Abdullah's dreams of a "greater Syria."

Public Demands Action

Trans-Jordan and Iraq were reported to be unrepresented at the Riyad talks, although both countries apparently are cooperating in preparations for the proposed invasion of Palestine by regular Arab armies.

Besides worrying about Abdullah's ambitions, the governments of Syria and Lebanon are chafing under pressure from the public to send regular troops to Palestine immediately to prevent the formation of a Jewish state.

The demand now is intensified with the arrival of thousands of Arab refugees from Palestine. Recently there has been a number of demonstrations in Arab countries.

Since King Abdullah took the spotlight in prospective Palestine invasion plans, Syrian leaders have grown increasingly nervous. Reliable official sources said some of these leaders now are pressing for the use of regular troops in Palestine without waiting for the termination of the British mandate next Saturday.

Debate Three Problems

Informants said a recent secret conference of Arab leaders here spent most of its time debating these three problems:

1. The demands of Syria and Lebanon for the immediate dispatch of troops to the Holy Land "before the situation deteriorates further."

2. The insistance of Trans-Jordan and Iraq on waiting until the end of the British mandate to avoid possible clashes with British troops and to give the United Nations additional time to search for a peaceful solution.

3. The rejection by the exiled Mufti of Jerusalem, Haj Amin el Husseini, of any proposals which might postpone what he called "the inevitable settlement in blood in Palestine itself."

The Egyptians, observers said, may be playing a lone hand in the hopes of getting the United Nations' nod to take over the proposed Palestine trusteeship.

There still are virtually no regular troop activities along the southern frontiers of Syria and Lebanon.

Two Senators Hit U. S. Policy In Palestine

The Palestine policy of the United States was strongly condemned by two Senators yesterday.

One, Dennis Chavez (D., N. Mex.) charged that State Department officials "appeared to have participated" in conferences in which Arab League states planned invasion of the Holy Land.

The other, Wayne Morse (R., Oreg.) demanded that the Administration develop a "consistent" Palestine policy.

Chavez and Morse are co-sponsors with Sen. Charles W. Tobey (R., N. H.) of an "Emergency Conference to Propose a United States Policy for Palestine and the Near East" with "technical arrangements . . . organized by the American League for a Free Palestine."

Condemns Shifts in Policy

Morse, speaking at the opening of the conference in the Hotel Statler, declared that "we can no longer take a pro-Zionist line regarding Palestine on Monday, a pro-British line on Tuesday and a pro-Arab line on Wednesday."

He said such "oscillating from day to day" has weakened American prestige and "has had dire, if not fatal, complications for the United Nations."

Chavez, speaking at a luncheon, said "we cannot tolerate a situation in which our own public servants actively or by default contribute to the fomenting of disorders and trouble, and then ask the American people to send our Army to quell these disorders."

Lacks Confidence in Agency

He asserted the State Department Near Eastern Division "does not always deserve our unlimited confidence."

He said he was opposed to sending United States' troops to Palestine.

The conference will continue its closed sessions today with its conclusions announced at a public meeting at the Carlton Hotel at 8:30 p. m. Dr. Alvin Johnson, president-emeritus of the New School for Social Research, is chairman of conference sessions.

Strangling of Babies Laid to Guerillas

Athens, May 8 (AP).—War Minister George Stratos said tonight the Greek army had found the bodies of 40 babies strangled by guerillas during a retreat across Ghiona mountain early this week.

Stratos reported "prisoners said the babies of guerilla hostages and women guerillas were killed to prevent their cries from betraying the location of the guerilla band to pursuing army troops."

A reporter for the conservative newspaper Kathimerini wrote from Lamia that the bodies of 32 old men had been found and that they apparently had been killed by the guerillas.

U. N. Seeking Quick Peace In Holy Land

Lake Success, N. Y., May 8 (UP).—With partition of Palestine a generally accepted fact, the United Nations today concentrated on halting Arab-Jewish warfare as soon as possible.

Most delegates conceded that nothing could prevent the proclamation of a Jewish state one week from today and possibly of an Arab state as well.

It appears more and more likely that the U. N. would settle for the British solution of creating a "shadow" administration to succeed the mandate and push its on-the-spot efforts to settle the conflict.

Members of the subcommittee thrashing out proposals on Palestine planned private gettogethers over the weekend to work on a report to the General Assembly Political Committee.

Based on British Formula

It was believed the report would hinge on the new British formula.

The big question was whether the U. N. would accept the British suggestion that consuls of the United States, France and Belgium serve as the nucleus of the proposed neutral administration.

The only open objection to the British plan has come from Guatemala, a strong partition supporter. Its delegate, Jorge Granados, plumped for a neutral administration composed of individuals rather than nations, with the Jews and Arabs picking administrators for their areas and the UN naming a third.

So far the Soviet and its proteges have kept silent on the British proposal. The United States was reported trying to head off proclamation of a Jewish state and its possible recognition by one or more members of the Soviet bloc.

New U. S. Plan Reported

The American delegation is said to have circulated yesterday a new proposal for an overall Palestine truce. It would call for a political and military standstill for four months and an interim immigration of 2500 Jews a month.

There was virtually no chance the Jews would accept this figure even in the event the Arabs did.

UN officials continued negotiations with Arabs and Jews to find an emergency mayor for Jerusalem.

Navy Asked to Arrange City Communications

By The Associated Press

The State Department asked the Navy Saturday to set up communication facilities in Jerusalem.

"At the request of the State Department, the Navy is assigning 1 officer and 11 men to establish communication facilities at the United States Consulate in Jerusalem," the Navy said.

Morgenthau Didn't Want GIs To Occupy Reich, Says Book

By Edwin Hartrich

FRANKFURT, May 8 (NYHT).—A disclosure that the United States wartime high command at Washington felt American soldiers should not participate in the occupation of Germany because of their political and emotional instability was made here today. It was in the first release of the official European command headquarters history of postwar operations in Germany.

Former Secretary of the Treasury Henry L. Morgenthau was identified as the leading spirit among the group of President Roosevelt's advisers advocating that "non-European troops should be relieved as soon as possible in the forces of the occupation."

In a 157-page report, Army historians picture fears of the Allied high command that the American and British soldiers must be "protected against their own weaknesses."

On entering Germany on September 12, 1944, Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower, supreme commander, announced an official ban on fraternization with defeated Germans, especially their women.

This history points out: "The origin of nonfraternization is obscure and is attributed to Morgenthau in his capacity as a chief adviser to President Roosevelt. Though his plan makes no mention of fraternization . . . the writings of Morgenthau reveal that he considered the American soldiers to be unfitted for occupation duties and advocated their complete withdrawal . . .

"Our troops, it is said, could not be trusted to adopt a correct attitude towards the conquered people and so it was necessary to prescribe rigid rules of conduct to protect the soldier against his own weaknesses," the history added.

American soldiers proceeded quickly to ignore the rules, the historians wrote. In many military outfits "it became the rule rather than the exception" for American soldiers to have their liaisons, casual or serious with German girls.

The American soldier found the enemy that he had been taught to hate and to fear was a people with a culture and living habits so much like his own that their curiosity "moved them to play the role of tourists in Germany," this report points out.

German reaction, the study said, was the feeling that non-fraternization was proof of "the justice of the Nazi cause, or otherwise it would not have been necessary to take so much trouble to insulate the troops from German propaganda."

American Negro soldiers "embraced fraternization with enthusiasm" this report points out. Nazi racial doctrines soon broke down. "The Germans were quick to sense that on the whole, greater material advantages were to be gained from fraternizing with the Negroes than with the white troops," it said.

"There is not enough evidence available that the practice of fraternization has compromised the success of the occupation or threatened to compromise it in the near future," the report concludes.

Baruch Hails 'Congress' as Europe's Hope

The Hague, The Netherlands, May 8 (AP).—Bernard M. Baruch hailed the "Congress of Europe" today as a ray of hope for the survival of western civilization.

Baruch, adviser to U. S. Presidents, sent a message to the unofficial 22-nation forum discussing European union here. He said:

"European unity under the United Nations alone can assure the survival of civilization. You can kindle anew the hopes of all mankind and encourage American efforts to greater help for Europe, which will help itself back to enjoyment of life, liberty and happiness."

Former Premier Paul Reynaud of France proposed that each of the 16 Marshall Plan nations elect this year, by universal suffrage, one representative to a consultative European assembly for each million of its population.

"The urgent need for action is underlined by the present state of tension and the armaments race," Reynaud said.

Economic Commission Closes Third Session

Geneva, Switzerland, May 8 (AP).—The third session of the United Nations Economic Commission for Europe closed tonight in an atmosphere of East-West cordiality.

The two-week session was marked by frequent clashes between the Communist bloc and the West over political differences. But in most cases compromises were reached and all decisions on important subjects were given unanimous approval.

Communists Outshouted In Italian Parliament

Rome, May 8 (NYHT).—An outbreak of shouted insults between Communists and anti-Communists marred the opening session today of Italy's first post-Fascist Parliament.

The votes to elect presiding officers for the two houses of Parliament showed, however, that the anti-Communists will be able to pass almost any measure they desire.

Giovanni Gronchi, 61, a Christian Democrat and former head of Italy's Catholic labor movement, was elected president of the Chamber of Deputies over the Communist-front candidate, Ferdinado Targetti, by a vote of 314 to 134.

Ivanoe Bonomi, 75, now an independent, who served as premier both before Mussolini and during the allied occupation, was elected president of the Senate. He defeated Umberto Terracini, one of the founders of the Italian Communist Party, 198 to 111.

Soviet to Skip Allied Group's Next Session

Berlin, May 8 (AP).—The Russians announced today they will be unable to attend the next meeting of the Allied Kommandatura. American officials interpreted this as a new Soviet step toward wrecking the last functioning organ of four-power government in Germany.

The Russians advised the western Allies today their delegation will be unable to attend because of the illness of Maj. Gen. Alexander Kotikov, the Russian commander in Berlin.

They added he is expected to be "well enough" May 11—the day next meeting is scheduled—to attend a session May 15.

The British Control Commission rejected as a "typical example of Soviet distortion of facts" allegations in the official Soviet press that the Western powers are violating flying rules in their air traffic to Berlin.

U. S. Soldier Killed; Assailant Unknown

Frankfurt, Germany, May 8 (AP).—An American soldier was hit over the head and killed early today by an unknown assailant. Robbery apparently was the motive.

Stars and Stripes identified the soldier as Staff Sergt. Raymond O. Switzer, 35, of Lake Orion, Mich. The paper said Switzer was on furlough with his Austrian wife and child.

Hannover Workers Continue Food Strike

Hannover, Germany, May 8 (UP).—Representatives of 90,000 Hannover workers, who have struck over demands for more food, voted today to continue the walkout until Wednesday.

Nearly 9000 railway workers at Munich were out on strike to persuade Allied authorities to increase their rations.

Greece Defends Executions

Athens, May 8 (AP).—Constantine Rentis, Minister of Public Order, said today the halting of the executions of prisoners by the Greek government would be an admission that "terrorism" pays.

Rentis denied that 152 persons were executed in Greece Tuesday. He said 61 were executed for legal crimes this week. He said there also had been some military executions but that he did not know the number.

The government has announced those executed were convicted of murder and other crimes during the 1944 leftist uprising.

The British government yesterday asked for "details and an explanation."

(A Danish Foreign Ministery spokesman in Copenhagen said the Danish Minister in Athens had been authorized to make it clear to the Greek government that the executions had made a deplorable impression in Denmark.)

Rentis said the executions were not a reprisal for the assassination a week ago of Justice Minister Christos Ladas. He said none had been executed for political reasons, and "all were guilty of murders, all had exhausted every recourse in our courts."

[The United Press said the Greek army's Roumeli campaign—biggest offensive to date—has caused 2032 guerilla casualties against losses of 141 for the army, according to competent military sources.

[Athens newspapers declared army authorities had confirmed reports that "flying saucer" rockets had been sighted at several points on the north Greek frontier.

[King Paul, Greek chief of staff, Lieut. Gen. Dimitrios Yantzis, and Lieut. Gen. James A. Van Fleet, chief of the United States military mission, met today to discuss the military situation.]

Korea Red Tactics Same as in Greece

By James E. Roper

Seoul, May 8 (U.P.).—Korea is Greece all over again. Communist tactics in the two countries have been identical.

The only thing missing here so far is the heavy guerilla fighting that Greece suffered. And that could happen.

Greece and Korea are similar even in geography. Both countries are mountainous peninsulas. The Greek peninsula is attached to the Balkans where Communists rule. The Korean peninsula is attached to Manchuria — another cradle of trouble—where Communists rule.

Both Made Untenable

This situation makes both Greece and Korea untenable from a military standpoint. But for political reasons the western allies seek to preserve these democratic toeholds.

The western allies have sponsored free elections both in Korea and in Greece. In both countries the Comunists have tried to avoid a showdown by boycotting the elections.

The Korean Communists have threatened and attacked election officials and the police. That's exactly the way it was in Greece.

Raid Involved British

In Athens, December 3, 1944, police fired at leftist demonstrators. Vengeful leftists shot every policeman they could find. British soldiers, who liberated the country, were not involved until they raided other Communist Party headquarters.

Then the leftists started shooting the British reinforcements.

Lieut. Gen. John R. Hodge, American occupation commander, is trying to keep the Americans from being involved in violence here. So far he has been successful.

If the Americans can get past Monday's elections without harm they will make a long step toward succeeding where the British failed in Greece.

Salvation Army Campaign For $350,000 to Begin May 17

POSTMASTER ASSISTS, TOO—Mrs. A. Bowman Smith, representing the women's auxiliary of the Salvation Army, shows a campaign poster to Postmaster General J. M. Donaldson. The latter has accepted chairmanship of the Government division of the Salvation Army's campaign to raise a $350,000 rebuilding fund in Washington

The Salvation Army's general campaign to raise $350,000 to rebuild "outworn and overtaxed housing facilities" will get under way on May 17, local Salvation Army officials announced yesterday.

Eric A Johnston, president of the Motion Picture Association of America, and honorary campaign chairman, will be guest speaker at the kick-off luncheon to be held May 18, at 12:30 p. m., at the Hamilton Hotel.

Postmaster General J. M. Donaldson, chairman of the campaign's Governmen tdivision, will meet with keymen of the division on Wednesday at 4 p. m., to discuss plans for reaching Federal employes.

Frank A. Birgfield, treasurer of the Community Chest and general chairman of the drive, announced yesterday that the drive will be on "for a full month."

Stassen Leads Truman in Poll

substantial dent in the solid South. In 1928 when Alfred E. Smith headed the Democratic ticket, the Republicans polled a majority (52 per cent) of the major party popular vote in the 13 Southern states taken as a whole. On a comparable basis, with third party and no opinion vote excluded, Stassen's showing in today's poll closely approximates the 1928 performance.

In certain other years Southern Democrats have voiced complaints about supporting their party's candidate — as for example in 1944 when there was a small revolt against Franklin D. Roosevelt — but they ended up loyal to the party on election day. That of course might happen again this year.

In analyzing the impressive showing made by Stassen in the latest trial heat, several qualifications should be borne in mind.

1. The survey was conducted at a time when President Truman's popularity is at a low ebb and when Stassen's star has been rising. Whether Stassen can continue to hold such a lead over Truman in popularity through the weeks ahead remains to be tested in future polling.

2. Once before, in the autumn of 1946, President Truman's popularity sank to a low point in institute polls, but the President made a phenomenal comeback. There is always the possibility that he will stage another political recovery. The defection of the South acounts for much of his low standing. Any tendency of Southern voters to bury the hatchet and close up the ranks against the Republicans will strengthen Truman's position nationally in the public opinion polls.

3. Stassen's lead over Truman at present is not unique. Earlier surveys have shown Governor Thomas E. Dewey, Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg and Stassen all running ahead of Truman in trial heat races.

One significant sidelight in today's poll results is the comparatively low vote for Wallace.

With Stassen in the race he polls only 5 per cent nationally as of mid-April. In the section where he is strongest in the poll—the New England and Middle Atlantic areas —Wallace's figure is 7 per cent.

By occupation groups, Truman's strongest support comes from manual workers who, as a group, have been heavily Democratic. However, even in that group Stassen is shown with a small lead in the poll results.

The vote by occupation groups follow:

	Stassen	Truman	Wall.	No Cp.
Prof. & Bus.	69%	22%	5%	4%
White Collar	65	26	6	3
Farmers	53	38	2	7
Manual Workers	46	41	6	7

Many Expect Lid in China To Blow Off

By Fred Hampson

Shanghai, May 8 (AP).—Many believe the lid finally is about to blow off in China as the currency crashes and civil war defeats multiply.

In this land, where temporizing with disaster seems a national habit, one hesitates to agree with this prediction. Yet it is hard to see how the crackup can be postponed much longer, even with United States aid.

The Chinese currency, which was 2500 to $1 United States two years ago, passed the one million to $1 point this week. Next day former Mayor Roger D. Lapham of San Francisco was appointed administrator of a 338-million-dollar non-military United States loan to China.

Not even this spectacle of Uncle Sam riding to the rescue could level off or slow the plunge. The skid is continuing unchecked, with 1,150,000 to $1 the latest quotation.

Everything seems to be happening at once to push down the currency: The political split at Nanking, military reverses in the north, a vast shift of trade from legal to smuggling channels in the south, the flight of men from the farms and villages to escape conscription.

The defeat of the Kuomintang (government party) leaders in the National Assembly at Nanking was probably the biggest factor.

Gen. Li Tsung-jen's election as vice president of China despite the opposition of President Chiang Kai-shek is the biggest split yet in the government.

It would seem Li's election should have bolstered the currency. Overnight he became a national hero.

But economic and financial marketeers see Li's election only as a serious rift at a time when the Communists are hammering at the gates. So the money keeps falling.

Li Could Be Man of Hour

There is much speculation about Li. You hear that he has quietly got control of the army and may soon stage a coup. Li denies any such intentions, of course, and vows loyalty to Chiang.

If the war continues to be lost, however, and the army begins to abandon hope in Chiang, Li easily could become the man of the hour.

Li long has been a foe of the Reds, but he is a realist. Many think if he views the situation hopeless he might try to deal with the Communists to salvage some sort of coalition. Or he might be the man to reorganize for a final fight.

None thinks Chiang could or would try to make a deal with the Reds in the face of complete defeat. And some say his military leadership has been so bad lately he couldn't head a last-ditch fight.

To assay the war situation is to scrutinize half the picture and guess at the other half. The Reds certainly have been winning for many months, but they seem never to consolidate their gains.

Information about the Communists is scanty and often contradictory. Some say they are almost as bad off as the nationalists economically, and little better off militarily.

The most serious aspect of the war lately is the Red drive through northern Kiangsu Province to a point scarcely 100 miles from Shanghai. Reports hint at sizable Red forces uncomfortably close to Shanghai and Nanking.

no difference what uniform a man wears."

While disciplinary action will be taken through Air Force or Navy channels, the command chain will be mingled, he said. Unified commands existed during the war and still operate in some cases, but they were generally joined only at the top or were on a small, local scale.

The consolidation of ATC and NATS goes further than was originally planned. It was first contemplated that only the Air Transport Service of ATC would be merged with NATS into MATS. As announced yesterday, the airways, communications, weather and other services of ATC will become part of Kuter's command.

Soviet Plans To Quit Korea

observation, is to name 200 members of an assembly to create a Korean government.

The Russians who occupy the north half refused nation-wide elections leading to Korea's independence.

The Russian-controlled north has started forming its own government designed to cover all Korea.

More than two thirds of the population of about 30 million live in the American zone.

Since early February, about 400 persons in South Korea have died in sporadic, sharp attacks by roving bands on police stations, election headquarters and the homes of rightists.

No Americans have been involved. They are under orders to avoid crowds and stay away from trouble.

American authorities agree the aim of the attacks is to cause the United Nations observers to reject the election on ground that it was conducted in an atmosphere of fear and violence.

The anti-election violence burst with new fury on Saturday.

Military intelligence reported three persons were killed up to early Saturday night; at least 22 locomotives were damaged or wrecked by saboteurs; many telephone and telegraph wires were cut; a power station was damaged; and there were many fires. Four newspaper offices were burned out, including three in Seoul, the capital.

Communist labor leaders called widespread strikes in government offices, banks, schools and industries. But the weekend holiday minimized them.

More violence was expected, but Maj. Gen. William F. Dean, military governor of South Korea, declared:

"I am determined that an anarchic minority shall not prevent the majority of the Korean people from voting."

Heavy Vote Is Urged

He urged Koreans to show the world by a heavy vote that "Communist tactics of fear, terror and murder have failed again."

Lieut. Gen. G. P. Korotkov, Soviet occupation commander, made the "withdraw the troops" bid.

The north Korean radio broadcast a letter from Korotov to Kim Boo Bong, a leader of the so-called north Korean People's Committee. In it Korotov gave the Russian version of the long failure to unify Korea and ended by saying, "the government of the U. S. S. R., has had the necessary arrangements made for the immediate withdrawal of its troops from Korea in order to make American troops withdraw from Korea simultaneously.

General Hodge drily pointed out that it did not say Soviet troops had withdrawn or were withdrawing.

The north Korean radio also repeated earlier threats to cut off electric power supplied to south Korea from the north.

11 of ERP Nations Pledge Cooperation

Pledges by 11 Marshall Plan countries to cooperate constantly in a joint European recovery program in return for receiving American aid were officially disclosed yesterday. The State Department and the Economic Cooperation Administration made them public.

The pledges were given in an exchange of notes between the United States and Britain, France, Italy, Austria, Denmark, Iceland, Ireland, Luxembourg, the Netherlands, Norway and Sweden.

Also, officials said that notes had also been exchanged with Belgium containing the same commitment but that authority had not yet been received from Brussels to make the Belgian letter public. Notes have yet to be exchanged with Greece, Portugal, Switzerland and Turkey and with the western zones of Germany, all of which are under the recovery program.

The series of letters brought out in addition to the basic pledge of cooperation, these other major commitments on the part of the Marshall Plan countries:

1. That each of the receiving nations will conclude in the near future a detailed formal agreement with the United States covering American aid and the variety of ways in which each country will work with all the others to make the aid program a success.

2. That each country which receives American goods free—that is, in the form of grants—will set aside in its own currency a sum of money equal to the dollar value of the assistance granted. The money in each of these pools will be used by the United States to defray the expenses of its economic aid mission in each country and for other purposes of which the country and the United States may jointly agree upon.

These other purposes were not defined yesterday.

Three Are Appointed To Paris Staff of ECA

Three appointments to the Paris staff of the Economic Cooperation Administration were announced yesterday.

Arthur W. Marget was named finance officer, John L. Tappin, executive assistant, and Martin M. Rosen assistant finance officer.

Marget, a former lieutenant colonel in charge of financial planning for the Military Government in Austria, was economic adviser to the United States Conference of Foreign Ministers in London and Moscow last year.

Tappin goes to ECA from the Commerce Department, where he was assistant to the Undersecretary. During the war he was a colonel in the French subsection of the General Staff liaison section.

Rosen, a former Treasury Department employe, was loaned to ECA by the International Bank for Recovery and Development where he is now employed.

"HIT THE SILK!"—Paratroopers from Fort Bragg, N. C., blossom out from three C-82 "flying boxcars" over Camp Campbell, Ky. In mass airborne maneuvers, some 2200 troops parachuted to the Army base menaced by a mock invader. No paratrooper was injured

Camp Campbell, Ky., May 8 (AP). Some 2200 airborne troops from North Carolina parachuted today to the relief of this Army base menaced by a mock invader.

On schedule to the minute, the first group of "pathfinders" hit the silk, landed and marked out an area where 70 C-82 "flying boxcars" a few minutes later dropped 2200 paratropers.

The Army troops, from the Ninth Air Force base at Fort Bragg, N. C. immediately engaged an "enemy" which had captured the airfield here.

And one and one half hours later 24 C-82-towed gliders from the North Carolina base arrived, bearing jeeps and other equipment and more men.

The landings were made without incident except that two paratroopers were fouled up by a power line and two others tangled in midair. No one was injured.

The drop was made from the height of between 800 and 1000 feet as high Army and State officials looked on.

The action today came at the crisis in the biggest war games since World War II.

ous to the national security than for the American people to accept such an illusion."

Notes Army Strength

The Army has 2½ understrength divisions in this country, the report noted. The manpower equivalent of seven more overseas "are organized as military police units and are wholly committeed to specific occupation duties."

The Andrews bill would give the Army five more full strength divisions to be based in this country, raising combat troops from 54,000 to 223,000, and would make possible the maintenance of six fully trained and equipped divisions of National Guard and Reserve troops.

The report estimated that approximately 450,000 men would volunteer annually, leaving about 200,000 to be inducted through the Selective Service system. Cost of the system was set at approximately 40 million dollars during the first year of operation, and thereafter 35 million dollars. It would require the services of approximately 10,000 compensated personnel and about 50,000 volunteers.

The exemptions provided by the bill were summarized as follows: Personnel on active duty; Purple Heart holders; veterans with more than 12 months' service; veterans with 90 days to 12 months' service as members of organized reserve units; veterans with combat service; reserves in organized units on effective date of the act; persons entering organized reserve units after the act is passed who enter before 18½ years of age; diplomats; ministers and ministerial students; non-declared aliens.

The five dissenting members were Representatives Dewey Short (R., Mo.), C. W. Bishop (R., Ill.), James J. Hefferman (D., N. Y.), Philip J. Philbin (D., Mass.), and Frank R. Havenner (D., Calif.).

enough experience," he pointed out.

Cutting off rotation after the sixth year also would rob older men in the department of additional training under varied conditions, he added.

He said he will call a meeting of the committee, probably late this week, to point out the weaknesses of the proposal and give members a chance to make further suggestions.

Battalion Chief H. F. Harding, chairman of the committee, said: "I can make no comment on it."

Other members of the committee were Battalion Chiefs J. L. Werheim, M. H. Sutton, J. E. Suit and F. Litteral and Capt. E. F. Stein. All six testified against Murphy at his trial.

nouncement after learning that 2500 employes of Government Services, Inc., must sign the oath by May 15 or lose their jobs.

The association, a corporation owned by Agriculture Department workers, operated its own cafeterias, but its employes—like those in GSI-operated cafeterias—are members of Local 471 (CIO) United Cafeteria Workers. Agriculture's cafeteria workers remained on the job, however, when GSI workers went out on strike last January.

District Auditor A. R. Pilkerton said yesterday he had recommended to the Commissioners that all 18,000 city employes be asked to sign new loyalty pledges incorporating provisions of the rider.

Employes who signed the pledge would give prima facie evidence they were not members of noncomplying unions under the rider, Pilkerton said, "We're not going back of that oath," he added, "but we'll have to exact it from all employes."

District Budget Officer Walter Fowler, chairman of the D. C. Personnel Board, said this would be the only way to determine union membership among employes. "We don't keep such records," he explained.

Mrs. Catherine Hurley, president of the teacher's local of United Public Workers of America (CIO), said about 700 to 800 District teachers are members of the union.

Mrs. Hurley maintained the teachers' union has "nothing to do with Communism" and said the "Red" rider was designed "to smash unions." There is no need for its officers to sign non-Communist affidavits under the Taft-Hartley Act because the union doesn't use the NLRB, she said.

District Personnel Board officials said a number of custodial employes and other workers may be members of UPWA affiliates. About 7 of 35 printing division employes are thought to be members of Columbia Typographical Union No. 101, ITU.

Ease Taft-Hartley Act, Stassen Urges

Charleston, W. Va., May 8 (U.P.). Harold E. Stassen urged tonight that the Taft-Hartley Act be amended to limit its anti-Communist provisions to labor leaders accused of having left-wing sympathies.

The Minnesota candidate for the Republican presidential nomination said in a radio speech that the act will develop a "fair and just" labor policy for the United States. But he said it needs at least three amendments:

1. A limitation on the section requiring all labor leaders to sign non-Communist affidavits in return for protection from the National Labor Relations Board. He said only labor leaders accused of Communist sympathies should be forced to go through this procedure. Should the accusations be proven, he added, leftist officials ought to be barred from union leadership.

2. Repeal of the ban on political expressions by union newspapers—an issue now before the Supreme Court.

Ease Union Shop Restrictions

3. Easing of restrictions on union shop contracts "to restore more freedom of bargaining by the employers and employes."

Stassen's speech was an outline of his views before the West Virginia primaries next Tuesday in which he is the only national Republican candidate entered.

At a press conference in Washington before coming here, he accused Gov. Thomas E. Dewey of New York of being "too soft" towards Communist infiltration in the United States.

Stassen predicted that the Soviet Union will eventually move to strengthen the peace machinery of the United Nations. He said there will be "tremendous pressure" by the Russian people on their own government to this end.

"In the interim, however, the real danger of the world is that the leaders of the Kremlin may make a mad move toward war by either aggressive infiltration tactics or by direct measures of force directed against small and weak nations on their borders," he said.

Stassen to Open Atlanta Headquarters

By The Associated Press

Harold E. Stassen, seeking the Republican presidential nomination, said at a news conference here yesterday that he will:

1. Open a Southern States' headquarters in Atlanta next week to further what he called his "growing strength" in Dixie. The office will be in charge of Alex Akerman, Florida Republican Assemblyman, prospective Stassen delegate to the Republican National Convention, and a grandson of a Confederate Army officer.

2. Have a majority of Florida's 16 presidential nominating delegates named in last Tuesday's primary. Also, that he will have a majority of Missouri's 33. This latter claim is hotly disputed in rival camps. Asked to explain, Stassen said 18 had pledged him support in talks with his Missouri manager, E. W. Bromwich of St. Louis.

3. Speak in Winston-Salem, N. C., Tuesday, and in Springfield, Mo., Thursday night. He will also meet the national convention delegations from those two States. He will deliver a major address in Birmingham, Ala., some time before the June 21 national convention.

4. Favor a civil rights program based primarily on "education;" but including Federal laws against lynching and the poll tax. He also favors a fair employment practices law guaranteeing minority groups against discrimination but making it more voluntary than mandatory.

5. Have 340 votes on the first ballot in the national convention, divided this way: 60 from New England and the Middle Atlantic States, 55 from the South, 165 from the Midwest and 60 from the West.

6. Favor a three-year extension of the reciprocal trade program, with "safeguarding" amendments suggested at the recent Geneva conference.

Southern Governors to Attend Anti-Truman Parley Monday

By D. Harold Oliver
Associated Press Reporter

Concerted action to fight President Truman's nomination and election because of his civil rights program is the aim of a conference of "States' Rights Democrats" starting Monday in Jackson, Miss.

Ten Southern States are sending representatives. Governors Thurmond, South Carolina; Laney, Arkansas, and Folsom, Alabama, are among those answering the call of Governor Wright of Mississippi.

The initial aim is to prevent the President's proposal for equal rights for Negroes and other racial minorities in voting, employment, interstate travel, together with an antilynching law, from going into the Democratic platform.

Failing in this, the plan proposed is to try to nominate some other Democrat for President. If this too is unsuccessful, the effort would be directed toward choosing anti-Truman electors to go on the November ballot.

One State—Alabama—has already nominated 11 electors pledged to cast their vote in the electoral college for someone as yet unknown—other than Mr. Truman.

Chairman McGrath of the Democratic National Committee denies there's a "revolt" on in the South. He said last week there has been a great "misunderstanding" of the President's program and blamed it on Republican propaganda.

"The people simply don't realize," McGrath said, "that the President has never said a single word about invading States' rights. There is not and never has been any intention to upset or invade the rights of States under the Constitution."

Northern Democrats contend the South cannot prevent Mr. Truman's nomination. And Republican leaders generally are predicting their party will elect a President in November regardless of what the South does—and maybe even with some Southern support.

Eleven Southern States will cast 298 votes in the Democratic National Convention. The President now has 423 votes pledged or claimed for him. He needs another 195 for the required majority of 618.

A total of 614 Democratic delegates remain to be chosen, most of them in the North.

The Mississippi Democratic Conference will share interest next week with presidential delegate-picking in both parties. The Republicans name 74 and the Democrats 66.

West Virginia has the only presidential primary during the week, but it will prove very little. There is a "preference" vote, as well as election of 16 Republican and 20 Democratic full-voting delegates. But the preference result is not considered even morally binding on the delegates. Both delegations will go unpledged to the national conventions.

Harold E. Stassen is the only major candidate entered on the preference ballot there in either party.

Chief interest in West Virginia will be intraparty scraps over the senatorial and gubernatorial nominations.

Illinois Republicans start the delegate-choosing Monday.

Wyoming Republicans and Democrats also pick nine- and six-vote delegations Monday.

Wisconsin and Texas may vie for the assignment of placing the name of Gen. Douglas MacArthur in nomination for President at the Republican National Convention.

World Bank Travelers Return From South America

The Washington Post

JOURNEY'S END—In the dark hours before dawn yesterday, officials of the World Bank land at National Airport. Returning from an inspection trip of bank-member countries in South America, they are (from left) Drew Dudley, public relations director; Victor Moller, executive director from Chile; John J. McCloy, president; Miss Patricia Dermody, McCloy's secretary, and Chester McLain, general counsel. They spent six weeks studying economic conditions

John J. McCloy, World Bank president, returned yesterday from a 40-day study of economic problems in Latin America.

Traveling by air, he visited Colombia, Ecuador, Chile, Peru, Argentina, Uruguay, Brazil and Venezuela. It was a continuation of his trips, made in Europe last year, to acquaint him with problems in the 46 member countries of the World Bank.

Aides yesterday pointed out that while Argentina is not a bank member, McCloy visited it to see its problems in relation to the general picture.

He missed the Bogota revolt by two days. In Chili, he was able to see at first hand the use of the first development loan of 16 million dollars for a hydroelectric power project and agricultural machinery.

McCloy made it clear on his trip he would not engage in discussions with officials of the Latin American countries for specific loans, since applications of such a nature are first reviewed by technical experts before they come before the bank for formal action.

Taft Doubts Wisdom of U. S. Red Ban

Milwaukee, May 8 (AP).—Senator Taft (R., Ohio) said tonight he doubts that it would be wise to ban the Communist Party.

"As a matter of policy, it is somewhat doubtful whether we gain much by outlawing communism and driving the organization underground," said Ohio's "favorite son" candidate for the Republican presidential nomination.

Taft thus took a position similar to that of Gov. Thomas E. Dewey of New York. Dewey has differed sharply on the issue with the other of the most active candidates for the Republican presidential nomination, Harold E. Stassen.

Stassen favors banning the party. He told a Washington news conference today that "stopping infiltration of Communists may be one of the keys toward stopping World War III." Dewey, campaigning in Oregon, has described Stassen's proposal as totalitarian.

Taft said:

"Under our Constitution, we cannot and should not make it illegal for an American citizen to think communism or express his opinions so long as he does not advocate a violent overthrow of the Government." He gave his views in a speech prepared for the Executives Club of Milwaukee.

The battle against communism can be won only by advancing the principles of free government, the Senator argued. He said that to accomplish that, "it is essential that we have a Government and a President who believe devoutly and consistently in these principles."

He criticized what he called the "irreparable and destructive results" of the foreign policies of the Roosevelt and Truman Administrations. He predicted that a choice of foreign policy "will largely determine the (presidential) election."

U Saw Buried at Prison

Rangoon, Burma, May 8 (AP).—The bodies of former Premier U Saw and five co-conspirators were buried today in the Insein prison cemetery without rites of any sort. The six were hanged at dawn for the machine-gun slayings of seven cabinet members last July 19.

Paths of Stassen and Dewey Cross in Oregon This Week

Bend, Oreg., May 8 (AP).—Gov. Thomas E. Dewey of New York wound up a week of campaigning in Oregon today and his efforts brought Harold E. Stassen on the run for a head-on clash for the State's Republican votes.

Stassen announced he would hurry back to Oregon next Friday—three days ahead of schedule—to compete directly with the New York Governor right down to the time the State's primary polls open May 21.

It will be Stassen's fourth visit since last October. On Friday, he will speak in Portland. On the same day Dewey will be in Portland for a luncheon speech and a radio (Mutual's Meet the Press) broadcast.

Although both will be in the same city, there was no hint they would be closer than a chance nod while passing. Stassen said last night on a radio program (Meet the Press) that he was accepting a Dewey challenge to a debate. Paul Lockwood, Dewey's secretary, replied that "the story of the alleged challenge is something which was concocted out of thin air in order to provide an excuse for Mr. Stassen to reenter Oregon ahead of schedule, to meet the rising tide of Dewey sentiment all over the State."

Reinforcement for Stassen

Meanwhile Stassen reinforcements arrived, among them Gov. Luther Youngdahl of Minnesota.

A Stassen prediction of victory in Oregon made in Washington yesterday was quickly challenged by the Dewey campaign forces.

"Right today Dewey would win in Oregon," asserted Ralph D. Moores, the New Yorker's Oregon manager and veteran State political leader who successfully piloted the campaign of Senator Wayne L. Morse in 1944.

"Three weeks ago Dewey probably was behind—but not today," he said, adding the Governor's reception in Willamette Valley towns was "40 per cent better than I expected."

Moore described Stassen's decision to return ahead of schedule as "an act of panic and desperation."

In making his strenuous 500-mile bus tour of western Oregon, Dewey combed hte territory traveled by Stassen on his previous visits—and to be covered by Stassen again.

35,000 Hear Dewey

During the past five days, since leaving Portland Tuesday, Dewey has spoken before crowds estimated in excess of 35,000, hit more than a score of cities, towns and hamlets, and crisscrossed western Oregon from the coast to the Cascade Mountains.

Today the Dewey caravan wound through the snowcapped Siskiyou Mountains of southern Oregon, stopping at Ashland and Klamath Falls.

In Bend, Dewey will rest and devote himself to affairs of his own State until Tuesday morning. Then he will head for Ontario in eastern Oregon and return to Portland by way of Baker, Pendleton and the Columbia River Highway, continuing his hamlet handshakes.

Virginians Not to Attend Mississippi Conference

Richmond, Va., May 8 (AP).—Virginia Democrats, at least officially, will remain away from the conference of Southern Democrats set for Monday in Jackson, Miss.

Governor Tuck said he would not go and would not send an observer, and added he did not know of any Virginia Democrats who intend to go.

The conference, called by the Governors of Mississippi, South Carolina, Arkansas and Alabama, is expected to discuss strategy to be used by Southerners in the National Democratic Convention to be held in Philadelphia.

Thomas Agrees To Sixth Run For President

Reading, Pa., May 8 (AP).—Norman Thomas reluctantly agreed today to accept should the Socialist Party tender him a sixth nomination for the presidency.

The veteran Socialist leader has campaigned as his party's nominee for the Nation's highest office in five quadrennial elections beginning in 1928. The decision assured his nomination tomorrow at the twenty-sixth annual convention.

Thomas said he was reversing a previous decision not to run because "it is imperative that the party should nominate one who is already well known by the public."

"Never was a Democratic Socialist program more necessary for the freedom, peace and prosperity of America and mankind," Thomas said.

"But instead of the new party movement for which we Socialists had hoped and worked we are confronted with the Wallace-Communist alliance.

"On some—by no means all—pacific issues I, like most Socialists, am in agreement with the views expressed by Mr. Wallace.

"We emphatically disagree with him in believing that peace can be had by appeasement of aggressive Communist totalitarianism."

Thomas' decision came as the convention, working to complete the party platform, rejected a proposed resolution calling for "organized civil disobedience" to all war and warlike preparations.

Clouds Clear Away to Allow Observation of Rare Eclipse

Tokyo (Sunday), May 9 (AP).—A rare annular eclipse of the sun was observed today by Japanese and American scientists when thick clouds cleared at the last moment.

Word from the Island of Rebun, off the northernmost tip of Japan, said scientists gathered there were able to make photographs of the eclipse when a thick blanket of clouds cleared away.

A Japan broadcasting corporation correspondent on Rebun said the photographic phase of the observation was "a great success."

There were scattered hazy clouds over Tokyo, where only a partial eclipse was visible. Those who viewed the eclipse from this vantage, however, were not disappointed.

Scientists were gathered along the 6000-mile path of the eclipse from Malaya to the Aleutian Islands.

Scientific observers hope to gain from the eclipse more accurate measurements on the earth.

The annular eclipse differs from a total eclipse in that the moon does not black out the sun entirely. A fiery ring shows around the moon's shadow.

Study of Attitudes On Apartments Slated

Results of questionnaire on attitudes toward apartment house projects in the county will be presented at the Montgomery County Civic Federation meeting Monday at 8 p. m. in the Bethesda Elementary School, Wilson ln.

The questionnaire, drawn up by Joseph Gardner, Chevy Chase, chairman of a subcommtitee, was distributed to the federation's 63 affiliated civic associations.

Condon Asks Loyalty Note

Post learned, and revealed, that the FBI letter said it had found no evidence of disloyalty or subversive activity in connection with this association.

The then Secretary of Commerce, Averell Harrman, declined to turn over to the House committee the file on Dr. Condon, including the FBI letter. The House later adopted a resolution, 300 to 29, demanding that the Secretary turn over the files. Mr. Truman replied to the House by saying in effect: Let the House try and get them.

The FBI letter is now in the hands of the President. Secretary Sawyer wrote to Dr. Condon that he had sent a copy of the scientist's letter to the President and that the decision on whether to make the FBI letter public rests with the President. The White House last night was silent on the matter.

Text of Letter to Sawyer

Dr. Condon's letter to Secretary Sawyer, under date of May 5, follows:

"My dear Mr. Secretary:

"I have become increasingly concerned at the reaction of some of my friends to the President's decision to withhold from the House of Representatives the letter which the director of the Federal Bureau of Investigation wrote on May 15, 1947, to Secretary Harriman, and which the House asked for by resolution. The President's decision was based on general policy considerations not related to the specific contents of that letter.

"The situation resulting from the President's action is somewhat embarrassing to me, because Congressman Thomas is using this to create the impression that I am trying to conceal something. My own position is that there is nothing about me or my activities that I wish concealed, and that I am desirous that there be a full and complete presentation of all the facts.

(Representative J. Parnell Thomas (R., N. J.), is chairman of the Un-American Activities Committee—Editor's Note.)

"Although I have never seen the FBI letter I cannot believe that it contains anything of a factual nature which challenges either my loyalty or my discretion, because nothing of the sort exists. The baseless rumors or gossip that such a letter might contain cannot possibly be as defamatory as the attacks by Congressman Thomas' subcommittee.

"For these reasons my own personal desire in the matter is that the letter in question be made public. If this were to be done, may I suggest, in view of the experience I have already had with Congressman Thomas' partial quotations and quotations out of context, that I should have an opportunity to make an analytical statement about its contents as part of such a public presentation.

"The issue which the House committee is making about this letter is largely fictitious. The committee investigators must have had it in their possession at one time in order to get the partial and distorted quotation from it which they used.

"In view of the indefinite postponement of the hearings it is natural to conclude that Congressman Thomas recognizes his inability to sustain the charges he has made against me. It may be that he is seeking a diversion from his publicly assumed obligation to sustain them by shifting public attention and creating the false impression that the President is concealing something unpleasant about me. If this supposition is correct it might restore attention to the original issue to have the letter, with analytical comments, made public by the executive.

"I deeply appreciate the President's support, and I recognize that other issues are involved than my own interests. Of course, I shall at all times comfort myself in accordance with the President's policy. I hope an occasion may arise on which you will find it convenient to present these thoughts to the President."

Secretary Sawyer's said that "I think I understand the considerations which have moved you to request that the letter of the Federal Bureau of Investigation regarding its investigation of your loyalty be made public. The fact that you make this request certainly indicates that you fear nothing from its disclosuer."

Methodists to End Segregation in Time

Boston, May 8 (AP).—Despite a warning of "trouble in the South" the Methodist General Conference today adopted a resolution which would in time abolish segregation of Negroes in its Southern churches.

A report advocating participation of all races in church activities was accepted after the Rev. Fremont Tittle of Evanston, Ill., told delegates at the closing of a 10-day session:

"The unwillingness of laymen and the church to stick their necks out in the name of Christ is defeating the purpose of the church." He added that immediate reorganization of jurisdiction was not called for in the resolution.

The Rev. Dr. William R. Cannon, Emory University theology professor, said that the action "would cause trouble in the South" and said he favored it "only as long as it did not mean complete abolishment of segregation."

Opposition to the conference stand opposing war and seeking understanding with Russia was voiced by Horace T. Freeman, lay delegate of Georgia. Freeman contended the resolution could be interpreted by extremists to "indicate disloyalty to our Government and be used by them to discredit the Methodist Church."

The conference disagreed, however, and held to its resolution of Friday which declared:

"Neither the people of the Soviet Union nor the United States want war."

Postponed two years for further study was one of the most controversial issues of the conference—action to form an official church organization to work for "social action."

Textile Workers Give $500 to Cancer Fund

A gift of $500 from the Textile Workers Union of America, a CIO affiliate, yesterday brought total contributions to the American Cancer Society's local campaign up to $119,416.09.

Robert C. Owers, general campaign chairman of the society's local division, said contributions have reached 68 per cent of the $175,000 goal. He added that he was hopeful the goal would be reached by May 17.

Johns Hopkins Said to Face Grave Crisis

Johns Hopkins Hospital in Baltimore, nationally renowned medical institution, faces "the gravest crisis of its entire history" because of cost increases.

The alarm was voiced by W. Wallace Lanahan, president of its board of trustees, who said only community consciousness of the plight would save the hospital "as we now know it."

The crisis, he said, is not limited to Johns Hopkins, but "invovles almost every other voluntary, nonprofit hospital in the United States."

Similar warnings have been sounded about deficit-operating Washington hospitals by William R. Castle, president of the National Capital Area Hospital Council. Trustees of local hospitals, however, have rejected his advice to band together in a united hospitals fund-seeking campaign.

Lanahan said he was issuing the special statement last night for the Hopkins' trustees because of the "truly critical nature" of the voluntary hospitals' plight.

"If such voluntary hospitals as the Johns Hopkins are to survive the present emergency," he said, "the people they serve must mobilize to save them.

"Complacency in this regard can bring nothing but disaster. In fact, unless something is done in the near future, the voluntary hospital will have but one recourse—to curtail services."

He said the net deficit at Johns Hopkins Hospital for the fiscal year which ends this June 30 will be $900,000. Actually, he added, the operating deficit would have been about $2,000,000 if endowment income and gifts of $750,000 and State and city aid of about $370,000 were excluded.

The Search for Cancer . . .

The Washington Post

THOROUGH EXAM—In George Washington University's cancer clinic, which opened yesterday, Mrs. William Spencer, a nurse, acts as a patient for the demonstration of a cancer detection examination. Dr. George Gray checks her throat.

New One-Shot Penicillin Is Developed

A new single-injection penicillin designed to reduce the pain of the wonder drug and simplify its use was announced here yesterday by a Philadelphia pharmaceutical manufacturer.

The new product can be carried safely in a physician's pocket and retains its potency in water for as long as seven days without refrigeration, it was reported.

Announcement of its development was made by its makers, Wyeth, Inc., upon publication of its approval yesterday by the Food and Drug Administration here. Called Wycillin, it was shipped by air to druggists throughout the Nation from the Wyeth plant, in West Chester, Pa., following Federal certification.

Penicillin is used chiefly for infections of pneumonia, venereal diseases, meningitis and other bacterial maladies.

Wycillin was described as a procaine penicillin which when suspended in sterile water and injected into the muscles of a patient will maintain effective blood levels for 24 hours. In the first successful dosage forms of penicillin, the antibiotic had to be injected every three or four hours to accomplish the same result.

Later developments avoided "pin-cushioning" the patient when calcium salt of penicillin was suspended in peanut oil and beeswax. Such injections sometimes caused pain, allergenic reactions, and at times left unassimilated lumps which had to be removed by surgery.

The next refinement came with the use of procaine salt of penicillin suspended in oil. Pain of injection was relieved, the incidence of lumps was reduced, but a few residual reactions to the oil occurred.

GWU Opens Cancer Clinic At Hospital

George Washington University Hospital yesterday opened its cancer detection clinic, newest addition to services here to uncover cancer in its early stages.

The clinic, in the out-patient department of the new hospital off Washington Circle, is an extension of Warwick Cancer Clinic now operating at Garfield Hospital under direction of Dr. Calvin T. Klopp, GWU surgeon. It is designed to examine 20 persons each week.

Ten adult patients were tested yesterday in opening operations of the new clinic.

Four physicians conduct the general physical examinations each Saturday and Thursday morning. Besides the general physical checkups, the examinations include X-rays, blood washings, urinalyses and other laboratory tests.

The services are free to any adult desiring the cancer tests, but because of limited facilities appointments must be made in advance. There is no charge, but contributions for continuation of such cancer detection clinics may be made.

Reports of the examinations are sent to the patient's own physician, who in turn notifies the patient. Applicants who have no regular physician are referred to the medical registry of the District Medical Society to choose their doctor before their applications are acceptable, it was stressed by Dr. Clarence Hartman, director of the hospital's out-patient department.

Though the prime purpose of the examinations is to uncover cancer, any abnormalities found during the tests are reported back to the patient's physician, Dr. Hartman said.

2-Week Drive to Open Today for Blood Donors

A two-week drive for blood donors, to be known as the "Friendship Plan," gets under way today under sponsorship of the Friendship Lions Club.

Headquarters for the plan, a coordinated community effort to spur donations of blood for the Red Cross program in the Metropolitan Washington area, will be at Tenleytown Circle, where a "Friendship Trailer" will be stationed.

Radio-Isotope Aids Victims Of Leukemia

Radio-isotope research is lifting a curtain of hope for sufferers from that cancer of the blood, leukemia.

Dr. George M. Lyon, radioisotope chief for the Veterans Administration, disclosed yesterday that some leukemia patients in veterans' hospitals are being treated with radio-phosphorous.

"It may be too much to expect this new form of treatment to prolong life or cure the leukemia patient," Lyon said. "But it certainly does reduce the suffering and makes their days more bearable."

Lyon, former safety consultant on atomic bomb production, said in a statement that the unpleasant reactions often produced in leukemia patients by X-ray treatment do not ocur with radio-phosphorus.

"Symptoms resulting from the disease are more readily controlled, and the patient usually has a shorter stay in the hospital," Lyon said.

"Research has not yet progressed to the stage where it can be said that all persons with leukemia should receive radio-phosphorus."

Sigma Nus Called Nuisance by Neighbors

beef about the Sigma Nus. He said:

"They wake up my tenants (all good solid citizens who need their sleep) and the tenants then wake me up."

Capt. Albert Pearson, of the British Army, said, "I have been able to get to sleep before midnight on only one occasion since April 23. One night they were hammering, knocking together a structure until 1:30 in the morning."

"When do these gentlemen sleep?" asked Assistant Corporation Counsel Robert F. Kneipp (Kappa Sigma, Duke University), as he pointed at the fraternity men.

"I doubt if they go to sleep. I think they sleep Sunday morning,'" replied Lynch.

All the neighbors at the hearing said they were annoyed by the back door slamming intermittently all night long.

One woman said that until recently somebody pounded out "The Warsaw Concerto" on the fraternity piano 24 hours a day.

"What other kind of noises do they make?" asked Kneipp.

"They scream, and sometimes we hear voices of women, young ladies giggling on the lawn," was the neighbor's answer.

They agreed that on May 1 several men shouted "To hell with the neighbors," and the neighbors had to close their windows to stop that and other profanity.

"And there's too much rumpus in the rumpus room," said Mrs. Jane McLaughlin.

Many Not Annoyed

Policemen at the hearing testified they had canvassed the neighborhood and many persons had told them they were not annoyed by the fraternity boys.

Frank Reifsnyder, fraternity adviser, said he was "most sorry" about the whole affair. He promised stern disciplinary action if there is any repetition.

"Throw them all in jail!" shouted Lynch. "They don't mean to cooperate at all."

"I will not," said Kneipp, hiding his fraternity pin.

Richard Gaskins, fraternity commander, and one of five Sigma Nus there, said that recently he was given power to suspend any disorderly brother, and intended to enforce it.

Lot of Visitors

"But a lot of this happened during Greek Week, when we had other fraternities visiting us."

In this, he was seconded by William Wendt, past commander.

"We regret this very much," he said. "It is largely due to outsiders. There definitely are no women in our house late at night, and we would never do some of the things mentioned here. We fraternity men most certainly wouldn't curse at our neighbors and other things have been said here of which I definitely am not aware."

"How do you get away with all this? Why don't you get a house mother?" asked Kneipp

No room, no finances, and they doubted whether they could get their house mother to live there, the fraternity men said.

"Well, this is what I am going to suggest," Kneipp said. "Lock up your rumpus room at night, put a doorstop on the slamming door, and you'd better appoint some marshals. Every time you have a party, appoint marshals for the front door and the back door."

"It will all be done," said Reifsnyder.

"And I think I'll have the policemen on the midnight shift pay you visits very, very often," Kneipp said. "And if you keep on making noise and annoying your neighbors I'll book you for disorderly conduct. And if I can't book you all, I'll book your commander, and if convicted he is liable to pay a $300 fine."

Commander Gaskins gulped and promised there'd be no more trouble.

Fairfax Gets Sanitary Area

Fairfax Circuit Court Judge Paul Brown yesterday ordered creation of a new county sanitary district, with power to tax area residents for utility installation.

Even as he issued the order, opponents of the new district announced they would contest his decision in the Virginia Supreme Court of Appeals.

Establishment of the new district, to be known as No. 3, permits Fairfax to tax the area for installation of water, sewer, power and gas facilities, sidewalk and park construction.

A $1,700,000 bond issue also has been proposed to pay for cost of water mains, sanitary sewers and one sewage treatment plant for the area. A referendum would be necessary to pass the issue.

The new sanitary district would be bounded by the Leesburg pike from the Arlington County line to Route 686, follow that road and take in part of the Hunting Ridge subdivision. The boundary then runs along Route 694 to the west branch of Pimmett Run, then to Route 693 and northwest to Route 690 and through El Nido to Route 1107.

It then will go to Chesterbrook rd., follow it to the edge of the Chesterbrook School property, then along Route 690 to Old Dominion dr. and follow the Arlington County line back to its starting point.

Opposing creation of the district is the Fairfax Taxpayers Advisory Association, whose president, John W. Greene, listed two major objections.

Tobacco Seed Export Bill 'Boycotted'

By the United Press

Southern Congressmen who won a smashing House victory in the fight to repeal Federal oleomargarine taxes last night charged their dairy-State colleagues with "retaliation."

The charge was promptly denied.

The oleo fight, simmering since the House passed the tax repealer 10 days ago, boiled up again when Representative August H. Andresen (R., Minn.), said he would recommend that Congress wipe out the export ban on tobacco plants and seed.

Representative Harold D. Cooley (D., N. C.), and other Southerners immediately charged that it was the first step by dairy-belt House members to retaliate against the South for the oleo tax repeal victory.

Andresen's announcement that he would recommend approval of the tobacco seed repealer followed an Agriculture subcommittee hearing on the bill. He is chairman of the subcommittee.

The only witness was Representative Reid F. Murray (R., Wis.), sponsor of the measure. Murray also denied his bill is intended as a retaliatory measure.

"I resent anyone saying so," he said heatedly.

Cooley and Representative John W. Flangan, jr. (D., Va.), ranking Democratic member of the Agriculture Committee, declined to testify on the Murray bill. Cooley said he and other subcommittee members had agreed to "boycott" the hearing.

Andresen countered their failure to testify simply meant they had "capitulated" on the bill.

Murray described as "vicious" the law which prohibits the export of tobacco plants and seed. He said it is the only law of its kind on the books. It was passed in 1940 and allows exports only for experimental purposes.

Andresen charged that representatives from Southern areas want the export ban in order to restrict competition and prop up sale of processed American tobacco in foreign countries.

He said that the four-year European Recovery Program provides 911 million dollars for tobacco products for ERP countries. He said 267 million dollars would be spent the first year.

He declared the Southern bloc in the House is "unhappy" about the prospect of competing with foreign countries for the world tobacco market.

Murray, defending his bill, said it was introduced before the oleo tax battle developed. It has been on the Agriculture Committee agenda since February 4.

The oleo tax repeal bill is now in the Senate Finance Committee.

'Laddie' Faces Trial for Life

Miss Scanlon claims Laddie, frightened by a dynamite blast some time ago, is merely a nervous wreck

Grocer Sells Colored Oleo To Test Old Maryland Law

Colored margarine is being sold by Louis Grossman, operator of the Woodmoor Market, Four Corners, Md., as a test of an old State law prohibiting sale or importation of colored margarine into Maryland.

The margarine is manufactured in Baltimore and is plainly labeled margarine, he said.

A law enacted in 1886 prohibits the sale or manufacture of colored margarine in Maryland, according to the State attorney general's office, but no prosecutions have been made under this law "in recent years."

Grossman said he had taken out a special Federal license to sell colored margarine and that any Maryland law prohibiting such sales apparently is not being enforced.

State's attorney Walter W. Dawson of Montgomery County said he knew of no such law, but if such sales are a violation of the law county police will be instructed to enforce it.

Clayton Calls Trade Act Vital To World Revival Leadership

By the United Press

Former Undersecretary of State Will Clayton said yesterday that failure of Congress to renew the Reciprocal Trade Act would mean surrender of American leadership in world recovery.

Clayton's statement was made as a House Ways and Means Subcommittee completed a week of closed-door hearings on extension of the Reciprocal Trade Act, which, under present law, expires June 12.

Clayton, the final witness, told the subcommittee:

"To fail to renew this act now, or to renew it with crippling amendment, would definitely be considered by other countries as not only a surrender of our leadership in this field but as a repudiation of much that has already been accomplished in the world under that leadership."

Clayton's testimony buttressed that presented earlier in the week by Secretary of State George C. Marshall. Marshall described the reciprocal trade program as the "cornerstone and keystone" of U. S. foreign economic policy.

The present reciprocal trade act authorizes the State Department to negotiate tariff reductions on specific items up to 50 per cent of the 1945 rates. Tariff agreements negotiated under the act are not subject to congressional approval.

George M. Harrison, president of the Brotherhood of Railway Clerks, preceded Clayton on the witness stand. He urged renewal of the act. He said that it would serve as "a sound basis for a lasting peace."

The subcommittee is expected to make its recommendations for extension of the program to the full Ways and Means Committee some time this week.

Truman Gets Cake, Roses on 64th Birthday

By The Associated Press

Sixty-four red roses and a big birthday cake decorated President Truman's desk yesterday—it was his sixty-fourth birthday anniversary.

But the man who was born in Lamar, Mo., in 1884 didn't have too much time to celebrate the occasion.

The necessity of trying to find a solution to the threatened railroad strike was foremost among his problems.

Mr. Truman did manage to pay some attention to his birthday, which happens to fall on the anniversary of VE-Day. It was three years ago yesterday that the war in Europe officially stopped.

Gets Penobscot Salmon

The huge bouquet of roses which graced the President's desk was a gift of White House employes. Another bouquet of carnations and snapdragons was given by the White House police.

The birthday cake was prepared by Mrs. Bill Simons, wife of the President's receptionist.

Members of the President's staff whipped up a special birthday luncheon. Along with the flowers, the cake and the plaque, there were other gifts.

Nine-year-old George Fotes, of Douglas, Wyo., who also celebrated his birthday yesterday, sent a miniature metal horse to the President.

Senator Brewster (R., Me.) brought in an 8-pound salmon from the Bangor pool of the Penobscot River—the first catch of the season.

Declared In Good Condition

A firearms company sent a new rifle.

At a hotel luncheon yesterday, Mr. Truman heard Senate Minority Leader Barkley call attention to the vastly increased range of effort required of legislators today as against the relatively narrow demands made in the days of Henry Clay.

In an aside, Mr. Truman remarked that Henry Clay was a very smart man.

Twice he was offered the vice presidency of the United States, the President recalled, adding that both times he refused it.

Both times, if he had accepted, he would have become President, Mr. Truman said.

The President was pronounced in top physical shape as he began his sixty-fifth year.

Brig. Gen. Wallace H. Graham, the White House physician, said the President weighs 174 pounds, is getting in 2-mile walks daily when the weather permits, and is using the White House swimming pool frequently.

Mr. Truman has been in the White House since April 12, 1945, the day his predecessor, Franklin D. Roosevelt died.

Navy to Send Post Carrier To Harvard

Seventeen-year-old Alexander K. Rupp, who delivers The Washington Post in the early morning and wins scholastic honors at Central High School the rest of the day, has been chosen by the Navy to continue his studies at Harvard.

Rupp

Young Rupp, son of an Army major stationed in Tokyo lives with his mother at 2807 S. Abingdon st., Arlington. His scholarship is one of 2500 given annually by the Navy to increase its officer potential.

At Central High, Rupp is a captain in the cadet corps, editor in chief of his school magazine, member of the student council, and president of the cadet officer's club. He belongs to the National Honor Society.

A carrier for The Washington Post the past four years, Rupp will enter Harvard this fall. He plans to study physics and mathematics.

AFGE Group Tries To Solve Union's Council Dispute

A group of members of the American Federation of Government Employes has started a move to save the AFL union from being wrecked by internal differences.

An open letter signed by several score key members will be read at a meeting Friday of the union's executive council. A council clique is determined to suspend President James Burns and to replace him with James Yaden, an elderly Civil Service official. Yaden is a council member. The letter follows:

"The undersigned, a voluntary committee of AFGE members, address this open letter to the National Executive Council in the hope that it will be received in the same spirit in which it is sent. The committee's sole desire and aim is the preservation of our Federation and its reputation as a stable, solid, intelligent and capable organization in the field of labor.

"Diligent inquiry among the membership of our respective lodges reveals no factual information. On the contrary we have heard only vicious rumor, gossip and speculation that something is amiss in our national office.

"No organization can stand long, nor can it exist as an organization if its membership is uninformed. This is particularly true with respect to our particular federation. We are unique in the field of labor relations in that we are employes of the Government itself which provides the machinery to a great extent in labor relations.

"As an organization we are only as strong as our national officers and particularly our national president. If they pull together we are strong. If they pull apart they can well pull the organization down so far that to any practical effect it ceases to exist.

"As a result of the able leadership of our national officers the past several years the AFGE is at the top now in public opinion, in pride of its membership and in the esteem of Congress.

"The press, the radio and prominent writers have commented favorably on the aggressive capable leadership we have enjoyed. The loyalty program policy has met with congressional, public and press acclaim. President Burns has followed the leadership of William Green in a patriotic policy with which the delegates to our last national convention were in 100 per cent accord.

"President Burns' leadership has been outstanding in the recent retirement legislation success. Equally so has been his leadership in the pay raise legislation now pending. The national office leadership is, in our opinion, beyond question.

"As we said above, we have only rumor and gossip upon which to rely. But we have heard that some members of the National Council oppose President Burns because of internal organizational differences of opinion or organizational errors.

"We are not concerned with such differences of opinion—they exist in any organization that is aggressive and potent. What we are concerned with is whether such differences, which should, in our opinion, be taken up at the convention, will wreck the federation.

"We sincerely urge that whatever differences there may be, whatever personality clashes that may exist, be postponed or deferred until August. The national convention is the proper place to press charges and consider who our national leaders should be for the coming term.

"Any other action by the council can only hurt the federation and, of course, the only sufferers in the last analysis are the individual members thereof. We are entitled to the type of national vice presidents and president who will compose their differences for the good of all.

"For the information of the council, feeling among the membership as to any official action by the council at its last meeting which would explain or justify the situation apparently now existing.

"Divide and conquer is old strategy—it is the method used by those who fear the light of truth. If the present situation was not considered by the council at its last meeting, why was it not so considered?

"We have heard that President Burns submitted his resignation in order to save the Federation's reputation and prestige as dissension among national officers kills any organization and it appeared to him it was the only way to preserve the organization; that he acted in good faith until the membership began to hear that a secret move was on to turn the federation over to an unknown clique. The last convention did not elect a clique—it elected a national president and national vice presidents.

"Can an organization function successfully if its national executive council has the authority to suspend an elected president the day after the national convention and deprive the membership of the services of the man they elected to serve a full term and to do this without any formal proceeding in which charges are presented and answers are secured? We think this is not sound organization if this can be done."

Sen. Overton Shows Much Improvement

Senator John H. Overton (D., La.) is showing "considerable improvement," Bethesda, (Md.) Naval Hospital reported last night.

The 72-year-old Senator underwent an abdominal operation last Wednesday. The hospital said he spent a "comfortable night" Friday night and showed "considerable improvement" yesterday.

Burglary Suspect Is Held for Grand Jury

Police Say Man Arrested Last Week Admits He Entered 39 Homes

Police yesterday ordered held for grand jury action a 27-year-old man they say admitted to entering 39 homes here this year and making off with close to $10,000.

They described him as a 1948 version of the original Washington "pants burglar" who four years ago kept police on the run with a long series of similar housebreakings. The original was never caught in the crimes.

The suspect is Harry C. Williams of 5442 Bass pl. se., charged specifically for housebreaking at the home of Isadore Skolnick, at 144 Longfellow st. nw., last week, where $280 was taken. He was arrested 24 hours after the theft when police traced him through laundry markings on a hat found near the Skolnick home.

Since his arrest, police said, he has been pointing out to detectives the homes he has entered, and has been taking the detectives to homes of friends to recover part of the loot he said he gave them.

Cash, Jewelry Stolen

In new housebreakings reported to police yesterday a total of $2000 in cash and valuables were listed as stolen from four jewelry and gift shops and a wholesale meat firm. They included:

Harvey Jewelers, 908 F st. nw., where $500 in valuables, including 18 watches and numerous Mother's Day gifts, were stolen, after thieves smashed in a window.

MacMannes,' Inc., jewelers at 1312 G st. nw., where a window was also smashed and compacts and costume jewelry, valued at $125, stolen.

$563 Taken from Safe

The Chicago Beef Co., 411 Morris st. ne., where $563 in cash was taken from the safe. Police said the theft looked like the work of professional safecrackers, since they entered by cutting a window screen, opened the safe by touch and ignored $70 in bulky change.

The Lee Gift Shop, 616 Pennsylvania ave. se., where two ladies' rings and a wedding band, valued at $350, were stolen from the showcase.

Cohen's Variety Store, 526 4th st. sw., where $68 in change and $191 worth of cigars and cigarettes were taken by thieves who entered through a broken window.

Phillip H. McDonald, a clerk at the Safeway Store, 635 H st. ne., reported to police yesterday that $211.01 was stolen from the store's cash register about 1:30 p. m.

McDonald told police he suspected a boy who was caught taking checks and bills from the change drawer. The clerk added that he'd retrieved a $20 bill before the youngster got away from him.

Bates Readies Bill to Aid D. C. Funds

A bill to combine all money and legislative problems of the District in a single congressional committee is being prepared by Representative George J. Bates (R., Mass.).

Bates, chairman of the House District Fiscal Committee, said yesterday he hoped it would solve archaic money problems which may result in a 2 per cent sales tax for Washington. Public hearings on the sales tax are to be held at 10 a. m. Wednesday and Thursday in the Senate District Committee room.

The bill, Bates declared, would give a joint District Committee of the House and Senate power to appropriate funds and have the same members responsible for providing tax revenue to meet the budget.

Seek to Find Funds

The Appropriations Committee has approved District requests which are several millions higher than the tax revenue. The sales tax is an effort by the House and Senate District Committee to find the funds.

A similar provision is made in the Auchincloss home rule bill. But Bates said he was "taking no chances" that the home rule bill would "be hung up this session of Congress."

The Senate Committee on Executive Expenditures approved a bill which would set up a joint District Committee, but it would not take over any functions of the Appropriations Committees.

"It seems to me," explained Bates, "that the committee which has responsibility for levying taxes should pass on the expenditures of those funds."

Questions Raised

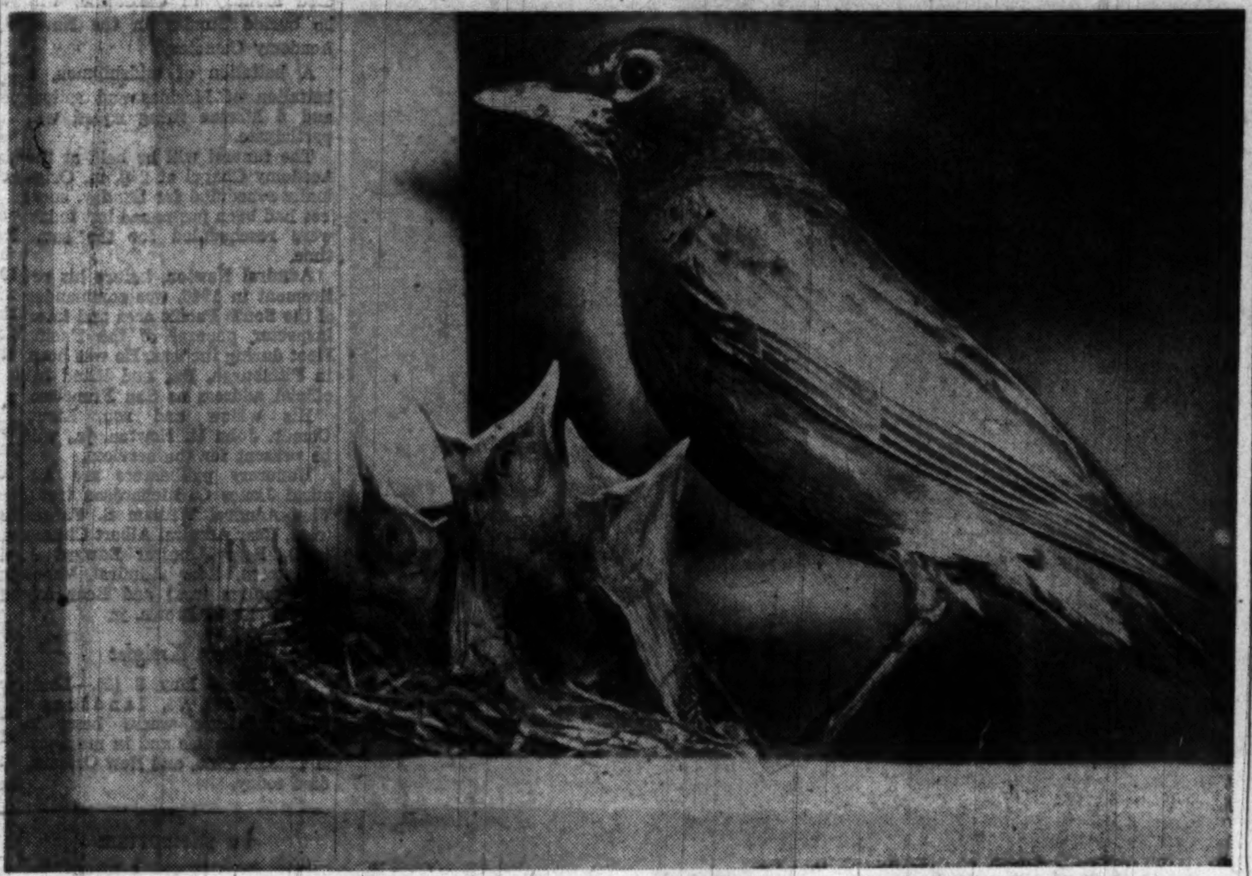
Although the sales tax is the main subject of the joint fiscal affairs subcommittees this week, the issue will raise numerous side questions like these:

1. Should passage of a sales tax be accompanied by repeal of the present District personal income tax?

2. Should there be a budget cut instead of a search for increased revenue? Bates said he considers the budget "inflated."

3. Should the present budget be approved without new taxes?

Dinner Time on a Kitchen Door Transom . . .



By Arthur Ellis—The Washington Post

DADDY ROBIN GIVES MOTHER A BREAK—A proud papa, Mr. Robin, stands the vigil over a nest of young on the transom over the kitchen door in the home of Mr. and Mrs. C. J. Bastien, 3736 First st. se. The robins moved in several weeks ago and Monday hatched four eggs. Three of the youngsters are visible as they beg for food. Mother Robin was out at the time

Home Rule Bill Facing Test Monday

Four members of the House Rules Committee indicated yesterday they would favor action to prevent a filibuster of the Auchincloss bill for self-government in the District.

The commitee will meet Monday morning to vote on a special rule for the bill which would limit debate.

Without that rule, the bill could be talked to death in a few hours. Legislation affecting the District is acted upon in the House on the second and fourth Mondays of each month. Any unfinished business held up by long debate automatically goes over until the next District day.

With the session ending rapidly, opponents of home rule would have litle difficulty holding it up indefinitely. The special rule would limit debate and permit consideration to be continued the next day.

Representative Adolph J. Sabath (D., Ill.) said "Many people are afraid of this bill" but added "I think House members should have the right to vote on it soon. I'll vote for it."

Another member of the rules committee, Representative Ross Risley (R., Okla.), said he would vote for it because the "bill is certainly entitled to be considered by Congress."

Representative James J. Wadsworth (R., N. Y.) said his "disposition all along has been to extend a considerable measure of home rule to the District." For that reason, Wadsworth said he also would vote for a special rule.

Representative Clarence Brown (R., Ohio) predicted that unless some major objection is raised "we'll probably get it to the floor."

There was considerable doubt that it would reach the floor on the same day it is considered by the Rules Committee.

Leaders in the fight for home rule expected the Rules Committee would follow the preference of House Speaker Martin who has publicly supported the bill.

Show Causes PRO Transfer At Academy

Comdr. Russell Burke, Naval Academy public relations officer, has been ordered transferred to Hawaii, as an aftermath of the hubbub over the suppressed Annapolis show "Boy Meets Girl."

Well informed Navy sources here said that Burke was "fired" by Rear Admiral James Holloway, Academy superintendent, because of the adverse publicity over the episode.

Holloway walked out of the first performance of the midshipmen's musical offering on April 30 and canceled remaining scheduled showings for which tickets had been sold. He is said to have objected to some of the show's lines. The story "broke" a day or two later on a Washington paper.

A Naval Academy spokesman insisted yesterday that Burke's transfer, effective about the end of this month, is "routine," as he is completing a 3-year tour of duty at Annapolis.

But Navy officers here said his transfer orders resulted from last weekend's incident for which they declared Burke was in no way responsible. A ranking officer of the Navy Department office of public relations attempted to intercede on Burke's behalf without avail, it was stated.

Burke refused to talk to reporters.

School Registration

Registration of new children for Woodside School, Silver Spring, Md., for the school year 1948-49 will be held in the school auditorium from 9:30 a. m. to noon Monday.

District Churches Schedule Special Mother's Day Rites

Most Washington churches plan special services today honoring *Motherhood as the Nation's Cap*ital observes Mother's Day and the beginning of National Family Week.

Highlights of the religious observance will include the annual Mother's Day Mass at St. Patrick's Church at 8 o'clock this morning, to be followed by a breakfast at the Casino Royal. Prior to the mass, police and firemen will parade to the church from the Knights of Columbus Hall, starting at 7:30.

At the First Baptist Church, Dr. Edward H. Pruden will preach identical sermons at 9:45 and 11 a. m. on "Christian Homes in a Pagan World," and in the evening will preach on "I Remember Mama."

The theme of remembering is uppermost among church services planned for today.

Florist Business Good

Yesterday, in preparation for the day, local florists and candy stores reported a business "at least as good" as that of former years as Washington's children prepared to "remember" mother on her day.

For both candy and flower stores, the day ranks as one of the four busiest during the year. Purchasers of candy were catering to sweet tooths which favored everything from almonds to caramels. In the flower line, florists described preferences as "about equally mixed" between cut flowers and flower pots. Other "busy" days for florists and the candy people are Christmas, Valentine's Day and Easter.

The American Mother of 1948, on the eve of the traditional observance, declared that "the mothers of today know that the world of tomorrow is growing within our homes."

Urges Spiritual Guidance

The 1948 Mother, Mrs. Herbert G. Hines, Springfield, Ill., who has 10 children, declared, "Give your child strength through spiritual guidance, for it is in the power of God that he will often seek the solution of his problem."

Mrs. Hines told newsmen that "large families in general are no asset to the country. Often they are a liability. "This is not the case," she added, "where you have parents that are healthy and can have a fine family life and can educate the children."

The Washington Post

A SON WHO REMEMBERED—Donald Swiggard, 16, of 5010 7th pl. nw., a carrier boy for The Washington Post, presents a box of candy to his mother, Mrs. Ruth Swiggard, who is already wearing the corsage he gave to her. Donald, who has been delivering The Washington Post for more than three years, won the gifts by getting eight Sunday subscriptions

Mrs. C. Runyon Regional Director Of Junior League

Mrs. Charles Runyon, 1523 34th st. nw., has been elected director of Region 11 of the Junior League, the Associated Press reported from French Lick, Ind., yesterday.

Mrs. Runyon, retiring president of the District of Columbia Junior League, was recently elected chairman of the board of the Volunteer Center, a Community Chest agency. She is the wife of a Government lawyer and the mother of two preschool age children.

The Association of Junior Leagues of America closed its twenty-eighth annual convention at French Lick yesterday with the election of Miss Dorothy Rackemann, Boston, Mass., as president for two years.

Barkley, Martin In 'Crusade' Talks On WINX Today

Senator Alben W. Barkley (D., Ky.) and House Speaker Joseph W. Martin, Jr. (R., Mass.) will discuss the "Crusade for Children" on Ed Hart's radio program today at 12:15 p. m. on WINX.

Appearing with them will be Mrs. Raymond Clapper, public relations chairman for Greater Washington's Crusade, which will open here May 17, with a stage show at the Sylvan Theater, featuring Margaret O'Brien, child screen star.

The Crusade will be held to raise money for the United Nations Children's Fund and other overseas-aiding organizations.

Fay Studying N.Y. Gambling

Daniel B. Maher was named to aid Superintendent of Police Robert J. Barrett in making a study of legal problems met by police in enforcing gambling laws, Fay commented:

"If he has an objective which can help to curtail the rackets involved in gambling, both I and the public wil welcome it. I'll definitely accept any parallel assistance I can get. I don't profess to have a monopoly on ideas."

While Fay did not disclose what kind of gambling information he is gathering in New York, some convictions there in recent years have resulted from prosecution for income-tax evasion.

Since the days when the late Al Capone was sent to a Federal penitentiary in 1932 for tax evasion, the "smart" gamblers have been careful not to ignore the Federal Government's call for taxes.

Although this information is confidential in that it cannot in turn be used as the basis for prosecution on other grounds, the income-tax returns themselves, in proper cases, can be used as evidence where there is suspicion that a full payment has not been made.

Returns Can Be Subpenaed

A Treasury Department official yesterday said:

"There is authority in a proper case in which the United States is interested to furnish income tax returns either in response to a subpena of court or upon request of the Attorney General or the United States attorney."

Corporation Counsel Vernon West said he would have to study the question of whether District income-tax returns can be similarly subpenaed.

Allan F. Brooke, head of the District's income-tax section, said that a number of returns filed here list income from "games of chance," and also list deductions for expenses incurred through such income, "all perfectly legal so far as we are concerned."

Not all such returns, of course, would be from illegal income, because winnings at any race track, card game, etc., are subject to taxation.

3 Held and 4 Freed On Numbers Charges

Three persons were held under $1500 bond each yesterday for District grand jury action on numbers lottery charges.

Four others were freed and one person was granted a continuance on similar charges.

Held for grand jury action were John I. Robinson, 39, and his wife, Annie, 39, of 611 Q st. nw., and Andrew P. Gordon, 29, of 4653 Hayes st. ne. United States Commissioner Needham C. Turnage ruled a prima-facie case of operation of a lottery and possession of numbers slips was made out against them after they pleaded innocent.

Freed by Turnage were Evelyn Gordon, 28; Robert Gordon, 47, both of the Hayes st. address; Herman Threats, 37, of 802 52d st. ne., and Robert E. Young, of 4825 Sheriff rd. ne.

In Municipal Court, Judge Ellen K. Raedy continued the case against Andrew Burr, 22, Walter Reed Hospital mess attendant, until May 24. Burr was arrested Friday in the hospital where police said he had a $70-a-day numbers business. He resides at 418 Elm st. nw.

Real Estate Broker Cleared of Charges

The District Real Estate Commission announced yesterday it has dismissed charges against Larry Steele, licensed real estate broker, of 927 15th st. nw.

Steele was found "not guilty" of charges he violated the law by employing an unlicensed agent to obtain buyers for properties in the 2100 block of 1st st. nw. in April, 1945. The commission heard the case last Monday.

Three Residents, Hurt in Traffic, Die in Hospitals

Octogenarian Hit By Streetcar Last February; Youths In Auto Accidents

D. C. traffic deaths to date this year 28
Deaths this date last year 28
Total traffic deaths, 1947 72

One Washington resident died in a District hospital and two others in Maryland hospitals yesterday from injuries received in traffic accidents. They were:

Chester

Bartholomew Shea, 80, of 705 6th st. nw., who died at St. Elizabeths Hospital.

Paul E. Chester, 17, of 3000 Yost pl. ne., who died at Mercy Hospital in Baltimore, Md.

Edward Tobin, 25, of 452 K st. nw., who died at Union Hospital in Elkton, Md.

Shea, whose death brought the number of District traffic fatalities to 28 this year, was injured when struck by a streetcar at 6th and G sts. nw., February 26.

Motorman Charged

At the time of the accident, he was admitted to Casualty Hospital with a possible skull fracture and scalp lacerations and later transferred to St. Elizabeths.

A technical charge of "hold for the coroner" has been placed against Roy L. Mayo, 58, of 1834 4th st. ne., operator of the streetcar.

Chester, a student at McKinley High School, was injured April 25, when the car in which he and five other youths and girls were riding, collided head-on with a truck on Route 214, 4½ miles east of Davidsonville, Md.

The driver of the car, Charles Lipscomb, 18 of 2714 26th st. nw., died several hours after the accident. The injured were admitted to an Annapolis Hospital. Chester was transferred to the Baltimore hospital last Sunday.

A native of Washington, he is survived by his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas L. Chester, and a brother, William T. Chester.

Garfield Doctor Hurt

Tobin was injured when the car in which he was a passenger overturned on Pulaski Highway near Elkton. Driver of the car, Joseph B. Rauert, 24, also of 452 K st. nw., is in the Veterans Hospital at Perry Point, Md., with a possible skull fracture.

In a District traffic accident yesterday, Dr. Aubrey Hampton, 47, head of the X-ray department at Garfield Hospital, suffered a possible skull fracture, concussion and face and head abrasions.

Police said he was injured when he stepped from a streetcar loading platform in the 1600 block of Columbia rd. nw. into the side of an auto operated by Thoralf Svendsen, 39, commercial attache of the Norwegian Embassy.

Dr. Hampton, who lives at 1320 Harvard st. nw., was admitted to Garfield, where his condition was reported as "fair."

Baltimore Pair Leading In Bridge Play

A Baltimore partnership was leading a field of 48 at the conclusion of the first round in the City of Washington Mixed Pair Bridge Championship held yesterday at the Hotel Roosevelt.

They were Mrs. H. E. Whitaker and Edward Pierson who had 140½ match points.

Mrs. Edna Evans and W. S. Benedict ranked second with 133 points. Mrs. Evans is from Buckingham, Va., and Benedict is from Washington.

The local defenders, Mrs. Marianne Boschan and Miller Roberts were in fifth place with 127½ points. The defenders were second in their section; the field had been divided into two sections.

Leaders in the defenders' section were Mrs. John Iago, of Baltimore, and William J. McDermott, of Arlington.

The open pair championship starts today at 1 p. m. with a qualifying round. Finals are 7 p. m. today. The defenders are Mrs. Amy Ashmead, of Arlington, and Miss Kathleen McNutt, of Washington.

Value of $285,000 Placed on Estate Of Justice Martin

George E. Martin, the late retired Chief Justice of the United States Court of Appeals here, left an estate of $284,000, it was revealed yesterday.

District Court approval was asked by his daughter, Mrs. Margaret M. Suss, of Chicago, to act under Justice Martin's last will, said to have been made in 1923.

His estate consisted primarily of securities. His will left it to his wife, who preceded him in death. The court papers said his only heirs at law are Mrs. Suss and a grandson, George Denman Martin, of Lancaster, Ohio, and it was presumed the estate would be divided between them, according to Mrs. Suss' attorney.

Give Car, $3700

Cabbies Fete Inspector at Ball Game

Legend took a beating yesterday when a hack inspector was honored by, of all people, the cab drivers of the District of Columbia.

Harrington

But for the 7200 cab drivers of Washington, and especially for "Uncle Joe" Harrington, former police inspector to whom they paid tribute, it was a glorious day at the ball park.

The cab drivers, who had banded together into the "Uncle Joe Harrington Club," by voluntary subscriptions from their numbers raised enough money to present Lieutenant Harrington with a 1948 Dodge black two-door sedan, and a trust fund of about $3700.

Presentation was made before the Washington-Cleveland game at Griffith Stadium, with the Metropolitan Police Boys' Club Band furnishing music.

Lieutenant Harrington, visibly affected by the ceremony, made a short speech of appreciation to his cab-driver friends.

George Keneipp, Director of Vehicles and Traffic, introduced Harrington at home plate. Now under the care of physicians, Harrington was driven to the plate in his new car.

Actual presentation of the gifts was made by Benjamin Bosey, who has been driving a cab here for the past 35 years, and members of the Uncle Joe Harrington Committee.

Legion Hall Closed After Recent Fracas

The American Legion Clubhouse here, scene of a rollicking wedding reception brawl, was closed down yesterday in Legion follow-up of the fracas of April 24.

The closing action was taken by District Department Commander Owen C. Holleran pending presentation of facts of the case to a special executive session of the commandery to be called soon.

Commander Holleran, of 4701 Connecticut ave. nw., said last night he took the closing action in light of the bad publicity from the fight and a subsequent study of food costs "which indicated returns do not appear to warrant continued operation."

The clubhouse, at 2437 15th st. nw., was the arena of a lively melee during wedding reception festivities there for James Anthony Manning, jr., of 1518 Fort Davis st. se., and his cheerful-to-tearful bride, the former Catherine Cecelia Sullivan of 1622 34th st. nw.

Police restored order after four scout cars, two patrol wagons and one ambulance provided transportation to the Thirteenth Precinct police stationhouse for principles and guests. Hurt in the postnuptial proceedings were the clubhouse manager and the bartender, while a photographer for The Washington Post was beset but escaped unscathed.

Everyone charged by police, and there were five including the bridegroom, were later let off without court punishment.

Commander Holleran said last night the ruckus brought the first complaint to Legion officials here of clubhouse operations in nine months. He said his decision to lay off the bartender and shut off the serving of food and setups was "really a business matter."

Hospital Fund Drive to Open In Arlington

Arlington Hospital's 1948 drive toward an $85,000 goal will begin Monday and continue through June 5, Lawrence Douglas, campaign chairman, said yesterday.

He warned Arlington residents that the goal must be met "if we are to continue our present service to the community."

Hospital officials pointed out that $15,000 of the $85,000 drive goal is allocated as a first payment in buying Arlington Hospital from the Government.

Balance of the drive quota will be used to meet the hospital's operating deficit, for repairs, replacements, and purchase of new equipment.

As its part in the celebration of National Hospital Day on May 12, the Arlington institution will hold an open house from 10:30 a. m. to 6:30 p. m.

Artist to Lecture

Eugen Weisz of the Corcoran School of Art will lecture on "Painting Today" at 8:30 p. m. on Wednesday at the Artists Cooperative Gallery, 1603 K st. nw.

Area News in Brief

Locksmith License Crime Curb Sought

Licensing locksmiths and keymakers to help curb Washington's increase in crime will be sought by Representative Arthur G. Klein (D., N. Y.).

Klein declared yesterday he would introduce a bill this week setting up a licensing board.

"The report on crime statistics issued by the Federal Bureau of Investigation," he said, "showed a 15 per cent increase over the previous year in the District.

"A primary factor in the increase is the ease with which intruders can open locks with primitive tools, or incompetent and dishonest locksmiths and keymakers can destroy the security of a lock brought in for service or repair."

Klein said he was introducing the bill at the request of the Locksmiths Association, 1172 18th st. nw. The licensing board would consist of five master locksmiths, serving for five years without pay. The board would have power to appoint a director at a salary.

4759 Pounds of Bad Food

Turnips and corn were the top items in 4759 pounds of foodstuffs condemned and ordered destroyed last week by Health Department food inspectors. Dr. R. R. Ashworth, director of the Bureau of Food Inspection, said nine offenders were taken to Municipal Court, where they paid $325 in fines and forfeitures.

Suit Dismissal Asked

The American Association of University Women petitioned District Court yesterday to dismiss an injunction suit of the Washington branch of the association.

The injunction suit seeks to prevent the ouster of the Washington group from the parent organization. The suit climaxed an 18-month row over the prevailing local ban against giving membership to Negroes.

The parent group argued yesterday in its motion to dismiss the suit that the Washington branch had failed to comply with the bylaws of the association.

Father Jailed in Cutting

The father of a 4-year-old boy was ordered jailed yesterday for 90 days for cutting the youngster on the cheek with a butcher knife.

The father, Jesse Owens, 36, of 1118 1st st. nw., denied any intent to harm his child. Owens said he was arguing with his wife, picked up the butcher knife and accidentally backed into his son. The wife, Virginia, said Owens slashed at her and missed, striking the son. Judge Ellen K. Raedy of Municipal Court imposed sentence.

Police Trainee Chosen

Arlington Policeman Walter E. Bell, jr., has been selected to represent the department at the thirty-ninth session of the FBI National Academy in Washington from July 12 until October.

Bell, now serving as Arlington police identification officer, will be one of the 45 police officers picked from all over the country to attend the training course. He has been with the Arlington force for six years.

Mrs. Truman Opens Mart

Mrs. Harry Truman yesterday opened the annual benefit flower mart at Washington Cathedral.

The First Lady was greeted at the Cathedral by Bishop Angus Dun, Dean John W. Suter, Mrs. James L. Ritchie, chairman of the sale, and Mrs. Albert H. Lucas, president of All Hallows Guild, which sponsored the mart.

More than 2000 persons attended, and 33 booths were set up. Proceeds will go toward the upkeep of the Bishop's garden at Cathedral Close. The mart originally had been scheduled for Friday, but was postponed because of rain.

Raugust Heads Chest

William F. Raugust of the Hunting Terrace Apts. in Alexandria has been appointed chairman of the city's Community Chest. The action followed a board of trustees meeting Friday night.

Raugust, an attorney and real estate man, succeeds Albert A. Smoot, who resigned to become a city councilman.

Delaney Will Address Young Democrats Here

Edward K. Delaney, newly elected Mayor of St. Paul, Minn., will address the national Young Democratic dinner here Friday.

President Truman will make the principal address at the banquet, which will launch the Young Democrats' 1948 campaign.

Other party figures on the program include Senator Barkley (Ky.), Senate minority leader; Representative Rayburn (Tex.), House minority leader; Gov. John Pastore of Rhode Island, Representative Smathers (Fla.) and District Attorney Edmund Brown of San Francisco.

Crowds Attend

Friendship Hears Cry of Auctioneer

The canopy was out at Friendship yesterday.

But the people who flocked up the white steps and into an entrance hall were not bound on a social errand.

The piles and stacks of furniture and bric-a-brac that greeted visitors was in sharp contrast to the well-ordered nature of Friendship when, as the home of the late Mrs. Evalyn Walsh McLean, it was the scene of many a gathering of the Nation's great and would-be great.

The chant of auctioneers, first in the terraced gardens, then in the house itself, seemed loud enough to dispel all memories of the past.

There were few of the idly curious at Friendship yesterday, first day the belongings of Mrs. McLean were auctioned off. A fee of $10 was charged for those who wished to attend the auction, and while any persons who had thought they might "drop in" on the auction ventured as far as the door, they turned quickly away when they learned the price of admission.

During the seven days Friendship wa sopen to the public, more than 5000 persons trooped through the house and grounds, paying a $1 admission fee. Proceeds from this tour, minus Federal tax, amounted to about $4200, which will go to the Community Chest.

A brisk wind whistled through the shrub and statuary lined garden yesterday as the bidders, about 150 strong, watched the auction formally open. There was spirited bidding on some items—a fountain just outside Friendship, for instance—while others went for as little as $5.

Indoors, it was easy to tell the experienced bidders from the one-time auction buyers. Auction frequenters indicated a bid or a raise by a wink, a nod of the head, a waggled finger. The first-time-outers arose and gave their bids orally.

As it usual at auctions, it was hard to tell why people bought the things they did. A carved oak gateleg table went for $18, while an ink stand receptable brought $16.

The auction will continue with 1 p. m. sessions Monday through Friday, and 8 p. m. biddings on Friday and Saturday. The auction is being conducted by the Meredith Galleries of New York, on order of the executors of the estate, Thurman Arnold and the American Security and Trust Co.

Stewart Bell, Sr.

Funeral services were held yesterday in Winchester, Va., for Stewart Bell, sr., 83, pioneer orchardist and business man, who died Wednesday at his home in Winchester after a lengthy illness.

Mr. Bell was president of the school board, director of the Shenandoah Valley National Bank, of the George Washington Hotel and the Winchester Cold Storage Co. and president of the Mount Hebron Cemetery Co. He was an elder of the Presbyterian Church.

He is survived by a son, Stewart Bell, jr., of Winchester, and a step son, Lanier Gray, and a grandson, Lewis Tucker Gray, of 104 W. Mt. Ida ave., Alexandria.

Mrs. E. V. Smith

Fredericksburg, Va., May 8 (Spl.).—Funeral services will be held at Fairview Baptist Church here Sunday at 3 p. m. for Mrs. E. V. Smith, 63, of Falmouth, who died in a local hospital yesterday. She was a native of Carroll County and a former resident of Spotsylvania County. Burial will take place in Oak Hill Cemetery.

Mrs. Smith is survived by her husband; five daughters, Mrs. Hazel Merdell of Alexandria, Mrs. Grace McNamara of Fredericksburg, Mrs. Annie Skidmore of Falmouth, Mrs. Mary Knox of Mobile, Ala., and Mrs. Doris Hodges of Raleigh, N. C.; six sons, T/Sergt. C. C. Smith of Fort Belvoir, S. E. Smith of Front Royal, R. J. Smith of St. Petersburg, Fla., V. G. Smith, AMM 3/c, USN, Providence, R. I., and W. R. and A. E. Smith of Falmouth; 20 grandchildren and three great-grandchildren.

Mrs. Nelvia E. Ritchie

Boston, May 8 (AP).—Mrs. Nelvia E. Ritchie, C.S.B., prominent Christian Science teacher and director, died yesterday.

Active in Christian Science for more than 34 years, Mrs. Ritchie was a member of the Christian Science board of directors, the trustees under the will of Mary Baker Eddy, and of the Christian Science charitable institutions.

The Crownbearer Views It Dimly . . .

By Gene Jones—The Washington Post

UNSPOKEN CRITICISM—Judging from the expression on 4-year-old Jamie Smith's face, this was too much "sissy stuff" for him. Lugging a crown around on a pillow was tough enough but having to wear bloomers . . .! Brother, you can have it! Thoroughly enjoying herself, however, at the crowning of Chevy Chase Junior College's May Queen yesterday was 3-year-old Jinx Farwell (left), of Chevy Chase. Elsie Smart, 19, of Pine Bluff, Ark., the Queen, is crowned by Louise Elliott, 19, of Jacksonville, Fla., a maid of honor. Another maid of honor, Mary Holmes Brand, 18, of Salem, Va., holds the royal corsage

Report Asked On Courthouse Bond Issue

Arlington County Manager A. T. Lundberg was asked yesterday to submit his recommendations on a proposed $600,000 bond issue for a county courthouse addition.

At a meeting yesterday, county board members directed Lundberg to set up figures detailing what the issue would cost, and report his findings as soon as possible to the board.

Lundberg told the five-member legislative body that the proposed three-story north wing would cost an estimated $465,000 exclusive of furniture and equipment.

The bond issue also would cover construction of a third story on the courthouse's present south wing at an estimated cost of $135,000. Lundberg now is studying a blueprint of the proposed new structures.

Action by the board to relieve cramped office space conditions in the courthouse came after Arlington Treasurer John Locke Green filed suit in Circuit Court to force the county to give his office more room.

In the board meeting yesterday, two members criticized Harrison Mann, chairman of the Arlington Democratic Executive Committee, for his attack on three board members who recently voted to cut the school board budget by $227,000.

Board Chairman Daniel A. Dugan, who had voted against the cut, termed Mann's attack in "extremely poor taste" because the chairman had not voiced his sentiments before the board in earlier public hearings.

Arthur Aull, 75, Dies; Edited Lamar (Mo.) Daily Democrat

Lamar, Mo., May 8 (AP).—Arthur Aull, the Missouri editor who printed the ungarnished truth about his neighbors—and won readers the world round—is dead.

The 75-year-old publisher of the Lamar Daily Democrat died late last night. For more than a year illness had kept him from the office.

It was his contention that in a town the size of Lamar, about 3000 population, the most carefully guarded secret was discovered eventually and bandied around. For 47 years he saw it as his duty to get the facts straight.

After his daily forenoon visits on the town "square," Aull would return with items like these:

"Joe Doakes is so happily employed these days in his big garden that he has almost entirely ceased, for the time, to be a nuisance."

"Bill Doakes hasn't had any liquor for a good long time. The big reason is that whisky sells for money and Bill don't have any."

"John Doe was divorced from his wife, Ella, at the courthouse Tuesday. Mrs. Doe ran off with her brother-in-law while her husband and children were at church."

Adm. Newton Rites Today At Annapolis

Annapolis, Md., May 8 (AP).—With full military honors, Vice Admiral John H. Newton, 66, who died Monday in California, will be buried Sunday in the Naval Academy Cemetery.

A battalion of midshipmen, a battalion of Marines and sailors and a Marine firing squad will participate.

The funeral will be held at the Academy Chapel at 2 p. m. Originally scheduled for Sunday, services had been postponed but today were rescheduled for the same time.

Admiral Newton, before his retirement in 1946, was commander of the South Pacific area and later inspector general of the Pacific Fleet during the war. He was born in Pittsburgh, Pa., and listed his official address as San Francisco.

His widow and son, Lieut. Comdr. John H. Newton, jr., will be present for the services.

Honorary pallbearers are Admiral James O. Richardson (ret.), Vice Admiral William S. Farber (ret.), Rear Admiral Albert Church (ret.), Rear Admiral Edward J. Foy (ret.), Rear Admiral Vance D. Chapline (ret.) and Rear Admiral John H. Brown, jr.

Louis Aston Knight

New York, May 8 (AP).—Louis Aston Knight, 74, landscape painter whose works hang in French museums and in museums in Toledo, Ohio, and New Orleans, died today.

Mrs. Cantley, 70, Succumbs To Pneumonia

Mrs. Nellie Hiner Cantley, District rooming house keeper and resident here for 22 years, died yesterday of pneumonia in Georgetown Hospital.

Mrs. Cantley

Mrs. Cantley, who was 70, became ill unexpectedly and was taken to the hospital about 3 a. m. yesterday.

Born and raised near Roanoke, Va., she was one of 19 children, of whom the only survivor is her sister, Mrs. Susan Ezekiel. Mrs. Cantley operated a rooming house at 1607 16th st. nw.

Besides her husband, Charles J. Cantley, a retired plasterer, and Mrs. Ezekiel, she leaves a grandson, Frank Hunt, all of the 16th st. address.

The body, now at Chambers funeral home, 1400 Chapin st. nw., will be sent to Roanoke, Va., tonight where funeral services and burial will take place Monday afternoon.

William B. Gaitree

South Bend, Ind., May 8 (AP).—William B. Gaitree, 84, one-time confidential secretary to President McKinley, died today in a nursing home. He had been in failing health several months.

McCulloch Funeral Rites Here Tuesday

Mrs. Rosabelle Maddox McCulloch, 68, wife of Charles Nelson McCulloch, former chief of the Interior Department Bureau of Reclamation, died Friday in St. Petersburg, Fla., while visiting there.

A native Washingtonian, Mrs. McCulloch was a life-long member of the Church of the Epiphany, 1317 G st. nw., and was active in its work. She belonged to the night branch of its Women's Auxiliary and the Sisters of the King.

Mrs. McCulloch made her home with her husband at the La Salle Apartments, Connecticut ave. and L st. nw. Besides Mr. McCulloch, she leaves two sisters, Mrs. Lillian M. Stout and Mrs. Zenobia A. Evans, both of Washington.

Funeral services will be held at 3:30 p. m., Tuesday at Hines funeral home, 2901 14th st. nw. Burial will be in Glenwood Cemetery.

Clyde B. Stover

Dr. Clyde B. Stover, 75, of Gettysburg, Pa., who served in the chemistry department of Gettysburg College for 47 years until his retirement in 1944, died suddenly of a heart attack Friday in Brownsville, Md., where he was visiting.

A native of Hagerstown, Md., Dr. Stover graduated from Gettysburg College in 1894. He served as registrar there from 1912 until his retirement.

He is survived by his wife and a brother, Bruce E. Stover, of Wheeling, W. Va. Funeral services and burial will be in Gettysburg Monday afternoon.

Washington's Most Beautiful
Rock Creek Cemetery
NON-SPECULATIVE NON-SECTARIAN

Familiarly known as "Memory," this poetically beautiful figure is one of the major works of William Ordway Partridge. Seated upon a semi-circular bench, her flowing garment falling in softly revealing folds; her faultless head bent over her task, she is intent upon weaving her garland of memories. Set in the background is a bronze plaque portraying the "Seven Ages of Man" from Shakespeare's AS YOU LIKE IT. Before the steps stands a bronze urn of simple lines. The whole effect is one of pure grace—the very essence of classic Greece.

Memory is typical of the monuments you find throughout Rock Creek Cemetery. In order to maintain the atmosphere of simple dignity inherent in the cemetery, the Vestry reserves the right to approve monuments and memorials. It further provides that all landscaping be arranged to form a background for the structure.

Drive through the beautiful winding roads. Note the care the Vestry takes to keep the cemetery as a refuge of solace and peace as well as a place of rest. Perhaps you will want to make inquiries at the office about the lots.

Weak, Watery Blood Blamed for Making Men and Women Look and Feel Older

THAN THEIR YEARS

How do you feel at the end of a day? Is that old time pep and drive lacking? Have you checked-up on your blood strength lately? Thousands now regaining glowing good looks and vitality through the release of vibrant energy to every muscle, fibre, cell.

Every day—every hour—millions of tiny red-blood-cells must pour forth from the marrow of your bones to replace those that are worn-out. A low blood count may affect you in several ways: no appetite, underweight, no energy, a general run-down condition, lack of resistance to infection and disease.

To get real relief you must keep up your blood strength. Medical authorities, by analysis of the blood, have by positive proof shown that SSS Tonic is amazingly effective in building up low blood strength in non-organic nutritional anemia. This is due to the SSS Tonic formula which contains special and potent activating ingredients.

Also, SSS Tonic helps you enjoy the food you eat by increasing the gastric digestive juice when it is non-organically too little or scanty—thus the stomach will have little cause to get balky with gas, bloat and give off that sour food taste.

Don't wait! Energize your body with rich, red-blood. Start on SSS Tonic now. As vigorous blood surges throughout your whole body, greater freshness and strength should make you eat better, sleep better, feel better, work better, play better, have a healthy color glow in your skin—firm flesh fill out hollow places. Millions of bottles sold. Get a bottle from your drug store. SSS Tonic helps Build Sturdy Health.

Soviet Embassy Whips Up Propaganda Against 'Iron Curtain' Film

By Robert Bruskin
Post Reporter

The Soviet Embassy in Washington is whipping up propaganda against "The Iron Curtain," a documentary film of the Canadian spy trials which is to open at the Capitol Theater and 500 others in the United States on Thursday.

Veiled threats of demonstrations against the theaters are contained in an article by Ilya Ehrenburg published in the USSR Information Bulletin of April 28. The magazine is published twice monthly at the Soviet Embassy, 2112 Massachusetts ave. nw.

Although the film has been shown only to select audiences, Ehrenburg appears to have had at least a glimpse at the script. As Russia's foremost and reputedly its highest paid writer, Ehrenburg declares:

"Twentieth Century-Fox Film Corp. is intending to show its 'sensational picture' on the screens of America and Europe. They will hardly be able to do that.

"In the working class districts in New York, in Pittsburgh, Detroit, and San Francisco, the dulcet tones of the vampire Baranova (the femme fatale) will hardly be heard—they will be drowned by the indignant shouts of the public."

A few lines later, he adds;

"True, Europe does not have advanced American engineering but one may boo without special machinery. If Americans dare to bring their 'Iron Curtain' to Europe, they will see what the conscience of the people means: the demonstration of the film will become a demonstration against the picture provocateurs and against their bosses, the American imperialists."

The same issue carries a demand by four Soviet composers that their music be removed from the film. Three of them: Shostakovich, Prokofieff and Khatchaturian are honorde in this country by symphony orchestras and juke boxes. But back home they were spanked in February by the Soviet government for writing music "tainted" by the west. The fourth is Myaskovsky. The film was shot last December.

According to the film, their music was used in the spy ring center at the Soviet Embassy in Ottawa to drown out the possibility of overheard talk or code ticking. The ring sought, and obtained, atom bomb information from the United States and other wartime secrets in this country and Canada.

The composers' statement declared in part:

"Knowing beforehand that Soviet composers would wrathfully reject any such proposal, the cinema businessmen from the American Twentieth Century-Fox Co. resorted to a swindle, stealing our music for their abominable film.

"American reactionaries decided to supplement, by their theft of our works, the anti-Soviet forgeries on which their film is built."

Although their music could not be used without payment of royalties in this country, the four composers declared the company guilty of "political blackmail."

Ehrenburg declared in his article, a reprint from Kultura I Zhizn, that the "martial-minded Yankees calculate that its release should be as world-shaking as the appearance of American warships in the Dardanelles."

He called Milton Krims, who wrote the screen play, an "expert in hack writing." But he saved his choicest words for Lt. Igor Gouzenko, "expert provocateur" who led the Royal Canadian Mounted Police and the FBI into the secrets of the spy ring.

Gouzenko was a cipher clerk for Col. Nicolai Zabotin, head of one Russian intelligence network which centered in the Ottawa Embassy where he carried the title of military attache.

On September 5, 1945, 20 days after VJ-Day, Gouzenk, then 27 years old, walked out of the embassy carrying a mass of documents which showed how widespread operations of that network had become.

For two days he wandered around trying to find someone who could be interested in the documents. One Ottawa newspaper considered them a bad joke. Only after the NKVD broke into his apartment searching for the missing papers did he come into contact with the Royal Canadian Mounted Police, and later, with the FBI.

In the subsequent trial, 11 Canadians were convicted. One of them was Fred Rose, an immigrant who became a member of Parliament. Another was Dr. Allan Nunn May, an atomic scientist who disclosed the use of U-235 in the bomb. Dr. May, later evidence showed, also disclosed the location of atom plants and the type of bomb dropped on Japan.

Ehrenburg, who was in Ottawa at the time of the trials, declared in the article that Gouzenko "was not indifferent to dollars" in explaining his actions.

Gouzenko, however, explained to investigators who believed him, that his actions were motivated by orders for his return to Russia with his wife and child. Two years of Canada had shown him "evidence of what free people can do," he said. Russian people, he declared, have only "violence and suppression of all freedom . . ."

Ehrenburg declared that the court's verdict was founded solely on the evidence by Gouzenko. He made no mention in his article of the documents taken by Gouzenko from the embassy and the six months of investigation which led to the arrests.

Ehrenburg again ignored the 733-page report issued for history by the Royal Commission which investigated all the facts of the espionage ring. The report has been widely circulated, and can be purchased for one dollar.

Looks its best from the Value Viewpoint—PLYMOUTH

It's a sensational new combination for your greater safety and comfort—Super-Cushion Tires on new, wider Safety-Rim Wheels. And, in the lowest-priced field, only Plymouth has it. And Plymouth gives you this great combination as standard equipment!

The bigger, fatter, softer tires soak up road shocks from the side as well as from below. They make stopping easier and surer and give you one-third more tire mileage than ordinary pre-war tires by actual test.

Super-Cushions run cooler, too. That means your chances of tire failure are greatly reduced. But should trouble occur, you have the added, positive protection of Plymouth's famous Safety-Rim Wheels. Patented retaining humps are designed to hold the tire straight and tight on the rim so you can slow to a sure, safe stop.

The combination of new Super-Cushion Tires on new, wider Safety-Rim Wheels is only one of the basic advantages you get when you get a Plymouth. Your dealer will be glad to show you the famous Quality Chart which tells the whole Plymouth value story. Study this chart and you'll agree: There's a lot of difference in low-priced cars—and Plymouth makes the difference!

Business Outlook

By J. A. Livingston

Straws in the Economic Wind

Nearly everybody in the United States has just had a little bit extra tucked in his pay envelope. The $4,600,000,000 tax reduction which has just gone into effect means $1.30 a week to the $50-a-week worker with a wife and two children; $1.60 to the $60-a-week man; $2.10 to the $80-a-week man.

Livingston

Some of the tax money will be saved. But most of it—probably more than three billion annually—will be spent on groceries, clothing and household odds and ends. In all, it ought to lift retail sales by about 2 per cent.

This boost in potential buying comes when the usual spring hesitancy is developing. Detroit reports that sales of middleweight trucks are slackening, just as heavyweight truck sales had declined last year. Wholesale soap prices have been reduced 6 per cent, print cloth prices are easier, likewise shoe prices. Electric power output is down 7 per cent from its year's high.

What the Bank Loans Show

On the other side, E. T. Stannard, president of Kennecott Copper, informed stockholders that he could sell all of the company's output this year and his problem was to resist any price rise. Carloadings are 1 per cent ahead of a year ago. Sales of sewing machines and yard goods are up. But there's a reason. Many women are going in for home dressmaking, prompted by high ready-to-wear price tags. As for department store sales in April, they were up 9 per cent above a year ago. But merchants had to resort to big post-Easter markdowns to get the business.

One good over-all indicator of business isn't as helpful as it ought to be right now. Since the first of the year, bank loans declined about a half billion dollars at the reporting member banks of the Federal Reserve System. This usually would indicate an industrial slowdown, particularly since declines have been most marked in the big-money centers like New York and Chicago. However, at small-city and rural banks, loans are up, especially on real estate.

Here's the explanation. Large companies—Gulf Oil is a recent example—have borrowed money from insurance companies or raised money through the sale of bonds to pay off bank debt. Such a transfer of debt reduces bank loans outstanding in New York and Chicago, but increases the velocity of bank deposits. The dormant deposit of the insurance company becomes activated when it is transferred to the account of a business that will use it.

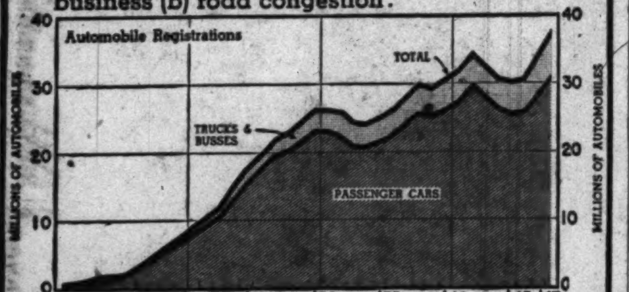
Just a Military Beginning

As yet, the enlarged military preparedness program has not surged through the economy. Some manufacturers have placed orders in anticipation of it; some companies have sent selling agents to contact Army, Navy and Air Force procurement officers. But the main impact is still to come.

The $3,400,000,000 increase in appropriations sought by Secretary of National Defense Forrestal is just a beginning. It will raise appropriations for fiscal 1949 to about 14 billion dollars. But Forrestal's testimony before the Senate Appropriations Committee on April 26

INDEX OF PROSPERITY

Record auto registrations indicate (a) good business (b) road congestion.



Data: Public Roads Administration — Prepared for J. A. Livingston

indicates that in 1950, military expenditures may rise to 16 billion and the year after that to 17½ billion. And those figures do not allow for a 70-group air force which some members of Congress are pushing.

Such expansion will accentuate demand for steel, copper, aluminum and other materials that go into ships, planes, guns and ammunition. It is a virtual guarantee against a business setback—if such a guarantee were needed.

Stock Market Jitters

Ever since the break in the stock market in September, 1946, this country has suffered from postwar jitters. At the first sign of a buyer's market, businessmen and economists feared a depression like 1920-21. We've tended to overlook the pent-up demand carried over from the war.

Consider automobiles. Demand for new cars and light trucks still exceeds supply. The motor car industry is likely to continue full-scale output throughout '48 and longer. Yet, the motor vehicle population of the United States is at an all-time high; 30,800,000 passenger cars and 6,700,000 trucks. The total exceeds 1939 by almost seven million (see chart).

Consequence: Record consumption of gasoline, record sales of replacement parts, and congested highways and insufficient parking space. The country has embarked on an extensive road-building program. Total expenditures on roads in '48 are estimated at a billion and a half dollars, or a quarter of a billion more than in '29. And that is just a postwar start. As materials and manpower get freer, as costs decline, State and local awards for roads and streets are likely to increase.

But that's a long-range influence. Over the short range, there can be no doubt that customers are getting choosier. The Brooklyn Dodgers illustrate the "pernt." When Leo Durocher opened the baseball season at Ebbets Field with a pennant-winning team, attendance was down. Why? Dixie Walker, "the peepul's cherce," had been sold to Pittsburgh and Eddie Stanky, peppery second baseman, had been sent to the Boston Braves. The fans weren't getting the real Dodger article. As for other major league teams, attendance is up—a suggestion that it's not lack of money but lack of desire that keeps Ebbets Field receipts down.

New York Cotton

New York, May 8 (AP).—Cotton futures were steady in quiet dealings today; scattered commission house buying, along with short covering and mill demand met only limited offerings. The possibility of favorable news next week on the private Japanese cotton credit program had a steadying influence on the market. There are further switching from old to new crop deliveries, partly on the belief that export buying under foreign aid will be in full swing by the start of the new-crop movement.

Futures closed 1.20 to 1.40 a bale higher than the previous close.

Leading Issues Turn Irregular Others Gain

New York, May 8 (AP).—Stocks generally leaned to the recovery side during the past week although market leaders turned a bit irregular in today's session.

Throughout the week the threatened railway strike clouded sentiment at intervals. Hopes for a settlement brought intermittent rallies but, with results still lacking, caution revived in the day's speculative and investment operations.

Assorted rails, utilities and special industrials gave a good account of themselves in the final proceedings. Dealings were active now and then and transfers of 640,000 shares compared with 480,000 last Saturday. For the six days the total was 7,462,740 shares against 7,639,315 the week before.

WHAT STOCKS DID	Sat.	Fri.
Advances	373	560
Declines	213	288
Unchanged	229	232
Total issues	815	1080

The Associated Press 60-stock composite was unchanged on the day at 68 but for the week was up .9, thus cancelling the drop of the previous week. The utility index in the short stretch scored another new top since last November by a shade.

In the concluding two hours highs for 1948 were touched by St. Louis Southwestern, which ended up 7 points at 134 on only 100 shares; Sinclair Oil 1⅛ at 24½, Industrial Rayon ¾ at 52½, and Celanese ⅝ at 30⅜.

Improvement was retained by Electric Power & Light, Consolidated Edison, North American, Bethlehem Steel, General Motors, Studebaker, Northern Pacific, Chesapeake & Ohio, Standard Oil (N.J.), Lockheed, Paramount Pictures, Pepsi-Cola and American Smelting.

Inflation Hits Policyholders On Three Sides

Life insurance protection has failed to keep pace with a rising cost of living in spite of large purchases of policies in the last several years, the Committee on Public Debt Policy said yesterday.

Wartime financing set up inflationary forces, the committee said, which hit policyholders on three sides:

1. The cost of living has gone up. This means $1000 of life insurance buys much less today than it would have bought in 1941.

2. Because of higher living costs and heavier taxes, many people cannot buy the additional insurance they need.

3. Insurance costs have risen because of the Government's low interest rate policy.

THE WALL STREET JOURNAL
One reason why some men get ahead faster than others is that they have more information on which to base their decisions.
Among men who are going ahead you find many who read The Wall Street Journal. For example $7,000 a year, $10,000 a year, $20,000 a year—these are typical incomes of Wall Street Journal readers. Many Journal readers earn much larger incomes. Very likely these men would have made money without The Wall Street Journal. But many of them say that The Journal has helped them.
Timely Warning
One advantage of The Journal is that it comes to you DAILY. You get the fastest possible warning of any new trend that may affect your income or enable you to win advancement. You get the facts in time to protect your interests or to seize quickly a new profit-making opportunity.
You are promptly informed on Taxes, Prices, Inventories, Production Trends, Commodities, Securities, Marketing, Consumer Buying, Labor, World Trade, Finance, New Methods, New Opportunities and New Legislation.
The Wall Street Journal is more than a newspaper. It is a daily guide for every citizen with an income of $5,000 or more. The Journal's readers include many of the most famous people in this country. It has the largest staff of writers on business and finance. It is the only business paper served by all four big press associations. The Journal won a Pulitzer Prize for its editorials and was commended for "the most readable front page in America." It costs only a few cents a day. No wonder that in the past five years The Journal's circulation has TRIPLED!

Suter Slated To Head Life Underwriters

Charles F. Suter, veteran local insurance man, is slated to become president of the District of Columbia Life Underwriters Association. He will succeed William B. Rumple.

Suter

Formal election will take place at the annual meeting Wednesday in the Shoreham.

Suter, active in association affairs, is now serving as first vice president. He also has acted as chairman of the membership committee, chairman of the publicity committee, and a member of several other committees. A native of Washington, he attended Friends School and Eastern High School before graduating from Washington and Lee University in 1933. He has been associated with the Berkshire Life Insurance Co. since 1935 and is now assistant general agent.

Other nominations, usually tantamount to election, include William J. McCausland, first vice president, and Charles P. Rice, second vice president.

Three new directors will be elected at Wednesday's meeting to succeed William J. McCausland, W. Neal McCord and Edward H. Vondeck, whose terms expire June 30. There are six nominees for the three posts.

SALES DECLINE—Net sales of Peoples Drug Stores during April amounted to $3,598,745.68, a decrease of $85,043.02 from the corresponding 1947 total. Stores operated numbered 136 compared with 134 last year. Sales during the first four months of 1948 totaled $14,460,385.35, a decrease of $148,183.30 from the comparative period last year.

ANNUAL OUTING—Savings and loan leaders, headed by Howard E. Thompson, secretary of the Columbia Federal, will meet Wednesday at 5 p. m. in the board room of the Jefferson Federal Savings to complete plans for the annual outing at the Washington Country Club June 11. Members of the committee include William H. Dyer, J. Hawley Smith, Martin A. Cook, Chapin B. Bauman, E. J. Carlson, C. Gay Harrell, Joseph P. Burke, jr., Robert E. Early, Donn B. Thomas, John Thompson, Lee Baxter and Stuart O. Thompson.

AUDITORS TO MEET—The auditors' section of the District of Columbia Bankers Association will meet at 6:15 p. m. Thursday at the Burlington Hotel. Earl Haycock of the Riggs National Bank will conduct the meeting at which Mrs. Margaret S. McClure will preside.

NIAGARA HUDSON—The proposed merger and reorganization plan of the Niagara Hudson Power Corp. is discussed by Bache & Co. in a current letter.

INVENTORIES: Department store stocks throughout the country increased 9 per cent during March, the Federal Reserve Board reported. Value of the stores' goods on hand, measured at retail values, was up in every Federal Reserve district. At the end of March, department store inventories stood 14 per cent higher than twelve months earlier.

EARNINGS: Boeing Airplane Co. reported for the March quarter a net loss of $34,615, compared with a loss of $64,723, in the first period last year. Last year's results included nonrecurring income of $650,253 in dividends from a Canadian subsidiary now discontinued and $150 in tax credits. Other income reports included

Chicago Grain

Chicago, May 8 (AP).—Corn ended with a decidedly weak tone on the Board of Trade today, carrying other grains down with it. Cash houses sold the yellow cereal freely and prices retreated for losses running to more than 3 cents. The close was at the day's low.

A good part of the selling in all grains was attributed to traders who did not want to carry over the weekend. Some recent buying has been based on the prospect of a railroad strike.

Wheat closed 2 to 2¾ lower, May 2.42½@2.42¾; corn was 2⅝ to 3½ lower, May 2.18½@2.18¾; oats were ⅛ to 1 cent lower, May 1.12½@1.12⅝, and soybeans were 4 cents lower, May 3.85.

Commission houses with Southwestern connections were good sellers of wheat for the second straight day. Some of this was believed to be hedging by cash dealers who were obtaining cash grain from the country. Movement of wheat expanded, Kansas City reporting receipts of 133 cars against 77 cars a year ago.

British-Made Ford Reaches U. S.

FOUR-DOOR BRITISH SEDAN—This four-cylinder Ford sedan has a 94-inch wheelbase and a gross weight of 1840 pounds. The 30 horsepower motor is capable of speeds up to 63 miles an hour and the car will average 28 miles per gallon of gasoline. The first shipment has arrived. The cars will be sold through Ford dealers from Maine to Virginia

'48 Oldsmobile Output Likely To Top 1947

Detroit, May 8 (AP).—Oldsmobile, which built 191,454 automobiles last year, appears certain to top that figure this year. So far in 1948 it has assembled about 70,000 vehicles.

Along with other General Motors divisions, Oldsmobile recently lost a week's production because of the steel shortage. It has also had other production interruptions. But barring some further dislocation of materials or manpower it should build approximately 210,000 vehicles this year.

Biggest year in Oldsmobile's 50-year history was 1941, when it produced 230,701 passenger cars.

The division's manufacturing facilities have been greatly expanded since it completed a wartime job of making tank cannon, antiaircraft guns and millions of shells. So a new car production record would be easy—if the flow of sheet steel and other essentials were anywhere near normal. But supply lines aren't normal.

About a year ago Oldsmobile's unfilled orders totaled 270,000; on Jan. 1 they numbered 385,997. Today they are pushing up toward 450,000. Meanwhile deliveries so far this year have been heavier than at any time since the war.

Most of the car makers have more orders than they can fill in the next two years—and new ones continue to pile up faster than cars can be built.

Oldsmobile's general manager, S. E. Skinner, attributes much of a recent upsurge of orders to a completely redesigned and re-styled model.

Demand for the new "Futuramic" Oldsmobile has been so heavy, he says, that an increasing percentage of output is being devoted to it. Also in production are the "60" and "70" series in six and eight-cylinder units.

Skinner may have another "first" before the year's end.

Neither Skinner nor any of his associates will discuss 1949 model planning, but it appears fairly certain that next year's cars will be in production by Thanksgiving Day. And the "first" which Oldsmobile executives also are not talking about right now, may be an entirely new V-8 engine with a compression ratio of approximately 8-to-1.

That would be the highest ratio yet used in a stock model passenger automobile, although the trend toward higher compression has been steady, keeping pace with higher quality gasoline.

The engine Oldsmobile is expected to use is a modified version of the one developed by C. F. Kettering, former long-time head of General Motors' research division.

Kettering has used a 12.5-to-1 compression ratio in test engines, but its day still is some distant, because the fuel it needs is not readily available.

Skinner, hopes to have Oldsmobile some day producing at a 450,000 units a year level. Certainly the planning for next year calls for a greater output volume than is indicated for 1948, with production geared as closely as possible to demand for the various models.

Head of English Mills Surveys U. S. Demand

Irvin J. Buntman, director of the Bridgehouse Mills of Yorkshire, England, is visiting Washington to survey the demand in this country on types of cloth. The Bridgehouse Mills, formerly known as Sunderland & Hainsworth, Ltd., were taken over last summer by the Washington tailoring firm of Louis & Dan Brown, Ltd.

maladjustments which marriages show today."

More professionally trained family counselors were urged by the section on counseling and guidance. It urged extending vocational guidance, employment counseling and placement services for all age groups.

More teamwork in family neighborhoods to achieve better streets, recreation, schools, homes and other services for improved family life, was recommended by the section on community participation.

The delegation also urged wider coverage by social security legislation, better education of families in home management, more adequate medical service for families, and promotion of community social welfare through State and Federal assistance.

The delegates represented 125 national organizations. Summaries of the studies by the 10 sections will be sent to all these organizations for study and action.

The reports of the section leaders at the Lisner Auditorium covered learly all problems affecting Amarican family life, ranging from special assistance to "new settlers"—a term applied to displaced persons who may be admitted to this country under legislation now under consideration.

"Emphasis should be put on the positive potentialities of this new group, Dr. Ralph A. Uihlein of Milwaukee chairman of the social welfare section asserted. "The record shows that immigrants have been an asset rather than an economic liability; self-reliant and in the main self-sufficient. They have not only adjusted, but have helped to create, shape and defend our mode of life."

Mental Hygiene Urged

Dr. Uihlein cited the need to consider migrants as "people-citizens." He recommended efforts to secure (1) enlightened public opinion on their rights of these families "to live where their best interests dictate their life will be best adjusted," (2) local acceptance of these migrants, with programs to meet their needs, and (3) legislative reform to bring acceptance of the "migrant as eligible for all resources provided for our citizens."

The speaker also urged programs for mental hygiene for families, particularly in rural areas. Such hygiene should be extended by the public health nurse, the school, the church, recreational and group work facilities. Disabled veterans and physically handicapped civilians were named as two groups particularly in need of help.

The committee on health and medical care recommended education in proper diets, including meal planning, buying and preparing foods, etc.

Food supplies are ample to provide all with a high level of nutrition, it reported, yet many do "not have the kind of diet needed for health and well being. It pointed to changes in the average diet in recent years. The average rate of consumption of milk, it said, is about 90 quarts a year more than in 1909. Richer flour and bread has improved the American diet.

Sterility Problem

In discussing medical care in marriage, the committee revealed that 10 to 12 per cent of all marriages are childress "although both partners desired children." The successful treatment of sterility problems, it added, "though expensive and time-consuming, is sufficiently high to warrant optimism." The average success rate, it said, was near 40 per cent.

In discussing the "crisis in housing," George M. Harrison of the American Federation of Labor, declared as yet the public is not thoroughly aroused.

"It is only because we have not yet raised the public alarm over what is happening in Washington, under our very noses, where a small group of small men is scuttling America's long-range housing program."

He then declared that "we cannot expect our schools to maintain vast programs of supervised play after classroom hours unless our schools are adequately financed.

"At present too many are not adequately financed to teach the three R's, much less add the vital fourth R of Recreation."

Wage Plan Discussed

Labor is interested in family and children, "because we have them," Kermit Eby, director of research and education for the CIO," told the audience. During the depression in Chicago, he said, he discovered that "the families where the father earned $3500 a year only had half the number of children as those earning half as much." Labor also has to absorb "the surplus children of the farm, the younger sons and workers displaced by an advancing agricultural technology."

In a plea for a society where the family has a sense of security, Eby suggested that "perhaps their security could be bolstered by more annual wage plans . . . and more adequate social and unemployment insurance."

The speaker cited Austin, Minn., where the Hormel Packing Co., the largest employer, maintains a system of annual wages instead of employment only during busy seasons. "It is distinguished," he said, "by a 17 per cent higher rate of home ownership than other industrial cities where there is no annual wage."

Stresses Community Benefits

Eby also stressed the benefits accruing to self-sustaining communities. In a poor residential district in Chicago, he said, where living quarters were crowded, the schools were run on double shifts.

"These schools," he said, "were in areas where single shifts with individual attention were most desperately needed. Teachers hated to teach in them.

"When the housing projects were built and the slums were cleared, my teacher friends told me they would rather teach in these areas.

"They said the sense of community which develops in the projects was the attraction. Mothers pooled their meager funds to give music lessons to their kids. Adult choruses were formed. Fathers worked on machines in their basements. Even the community laundries helped. No wonder families fought to stay in the projects even after their incomes made them ineligible."

Plea for Planned Living

He appealed for integrated communities, "where the factory, the home, the school, the shopping center, and the parks are all planned with the idea of making creative leisure and healthy living possible.

"Today not even the churches are open seven days a week. In many communities I know, the saloon keeper knows more about the needs of the people than the pastor. I don't like such a world. I would prefer one where men and women's gregarious natures found expression in a more healthy environment than the corner saloon.

"Pure democracy flourishes best in the small community, where men have similar interests and know each other. Modern city dwellers know little of such experiences. So labor anticipates as it looks toward a planned community, a situation where the stability and civic responsibility are by-products of the way people live."

Warning on Psychiatry

A warning that many expect too much of psychiatry and medical mental hygiene was sounded by Dr. Leslie B. Hohman, professor of neuropsychiatry at Duke University.

"Psychiatry has probably sold mental hygiene too well and perhaps too early," he said.

WASHINGTON: SUNDAY, MAY 9, 1948

Carrier Fliers Groom for Pinpoint Role in Future

By John G. Norris
Post Reporter

SOME previously unpublished data on the Pacific war, released yesterday by the Navy Department, throws considerable light on a moot problem of the moment—the future of naval aviation.

The heated controversy over the size of the Air Force has obscured this other air power question mark. But within the armed services—particularly the naval air arm itself—the issue is serious and important.

Yesterday, on the occasion of the thirty-seventh birthday of naval aviation, some apparently dry and uninteresting statistics were made public. Admiral Louis E. Denfeld, Chief of Naval Operations, called attention to them in a separate statement commending the naval air record.

Analyzed, they yield these findings:

1. American Navy and Marine Corps planes destroyed 15,401 Japanese planes during the war. Sixty per cent of them were shot down in aerial combat while the rest were parked planes blasted by bombing, strafing or rocket attack.

2. United States carrier planes knocked out 80 per cent of these Jap planes, land-based craft the rest. The mobility of the carrier contributed to this disparity, enabling its planes to reach major enemy air concentrations outside the range of our land-based fighter craft. Also, the flat-top's mobility made it possible to concentrate overwhelming forces of fighters in surprise attacks.

3. For these reasons, 48 per cent of the planes bagged by our carriers were caught on the ground and destroyed before they could be flown in their own defense. On the other hand, Navy and Marine land-based planes were able to knock out only 10 per cent of their total on the ground.

4. The above makes evident the ability of a strong carrier task force to gain local control of the air—an essential element of any military operation today. It is vital not only in amphibious operations but would make the job of our strategic bombers easier.

A Few 'Special' Planes

TRANSLATING this in terms of the possible future employment of aircraft carriers—particularly in view of the Navy's present emphasis on its Pacific scoring record—other conclusions are drawn:

1. The Navy feels that the future major role of its aviation is gaining local air supremacy over a particular overseas area by concentrating its flat-tops there, rather than by following the so-called "Gallery theory" of strategic bombing from carriers.

2. This means loading the vessels with fighter planes rather than a balanced force of dive-bombers, torpedo craft and fighters, as during the war. Naval airmen estimate that the carrier of the future will have some 90 per cent fighters. The remainder would be "attack planes," packing a terrific wallop for special missions. That "wallop" might include an A-bomb.

3. Such a force, capable of taking instant local control of almost any desired point along one of the world's shorelines at the outbreak of war, would prevent any future "Bataans."

American forces in the Philippines, as well as on Wake Island, were lost because we could not reinforce or evacuate them. Today, with the United States Navy dominant on the surface of the world's oceans and maintaining carrier forces to keep air supremacy overhead, the 200,000 or more American troops overseas would not suffer that fate, Navy chiefs say.

4. The same naval air power would enable American troops to seize overseas bases in the event of war and let our Air Force have halfway stations for bombing the enemy instead of letting him take such points to attack us. The Azores and Iceland are examples.

Proved at Midway

TO MANY older naval airmen, the present controversy over the future of naval aviation seems a paradox. One of the Nation's newest fighting forces, it was born just before World War I and forged into a tough, precise instrument of war in the next two decades.

During World War II this new weapon provided its worth beyond all question. Carrier aviation—the major part of naval air today—won its spurs at Midway, and went on to spearhead the American drive across the Pacific.

It made possible the conquest of the Mariannas, Leyte, Iwo Jima, Okinawa and the final surrender of Japan. Veteran Navy fliers, therefore, are puzzled over the "fickleness" of many Americans.

Why is the "champ of '45" looked upon as a possible has-been in 1948, they demand? It couldn't be the atomic bomb, for the Bikini tests proved that warships are an unprofitable atomic target. Nor have we developed long-range, high-speed bombers which would make strategic bombing from the American continent profitable against targets half-way across the world.

On the contrary, recent statements by Air Force chiefs concede that they require overseas bases to carry on heavy, sustained and effective air bombardment on an enemy whose vital centers are in the "Eurasian heartland."

Yet, little public attention is given to the development of naval aviation, while Congress falls all over itself voting an all-powerful (land-based) Air Force.

Morale Needs Repairs

WHAT WORRIES Navy air chiefs even more, however, is that the situation has affected morale. Young fliers, veterans of the Pacific air battles, seeing all this happen hard on the heels of the absorption of NATS into a new military air transport service under the Air Force, wonder about their future.

To offset it, the Navy plans to bring in squadron and air group commanders for special "seminars" at the Navy Department. There they will be told the facts of the present and prospective security situation—the broad viewpoint which junior and middle ranking officials rarely get.

Navy air chiefs believe firmly that the carrier and naval aviation will play a prominent role in warfare as long as piloted airplanes are effective. Whenever ground-to-air, target-seeking, guided missiles are perfected—one phase of "push-button war"—then both carrier and land planes will be on the way out, they concede.

But the Navy airmen insist that top speed and long range (with bomb-carrying capacity) cannot be combined at present. You can build a faster plane around a small gas tank than you can around a large one, they say. Therefore, defensive jet fighters at the target have an advantage over bombers coming halfway across the globe.

The 11 fast carriers the Navy has in commission now have planes quite similar to those in use during the war. Several good Navy jet fighter planes are ready or nearly ready, but problems of jet operations at sea had to be licked. The jets land fast, require long takeoffs and have a dangerous back-blast.

Regular operating jet fighter squadrons

An achievement of naval aviation forgotten by almost everyone except radio quizmasters, was the first crossing of the Atlantic by any aircraft, 29 years ago. This NC-4 Curtiss flying boat took off from Newfoundland May 16, 1929, and landed off Portugal May 27.

Youth activities around the world are described in these articles written by six correspondents of the Women's National News Service.

By Charlotte Ebener

YOUNG PEOPLE in Soviet-dominated Europe are working for the state, and working hard.

The youth programs of countries in the Soviet orbit have been so successful in building up a somewhat hysterical patriotism that in Bulgaria, as an example, 16-year-old girls work in coal mines all summer without pay. When asked why, one is apt to answer, simply:

"I feel I must give some of my strength to my fatherland."

How did the Communists achieve that in three years? A big part of the answer is in the build-up.

Posters, radios, newspapers, movies glorify youth. "You are the New Poland," they say. Or the New Czechoslovakia, the New Bulgaria.

Then there are concrete incentives. In the old days, young people stayed on the farm and worked from dawn to dusk. The Communists have not abolished work, but exceptional workers become national heroes.

Not only this, but youngsters from Poland are taken to Yugoslavia to work, and Yugoslavs get a chance to visit Poland. Hard work all along, but these trips are a tremendous reward.

At labor camps in Yugoslavia and similar countries, youngsters work eight back-breaking hours, but in the evenings they are given free schooling. Children who, before the war, would have been lucky if they were taught reading, are now studying calculus and foreign languages.

Women, especially, are swayed by the Soviet system. Girls who might once have faced a future of farm life and the endless embroidering of pillows for their hope chests can now get responsible jobs. One, 25 years old, has a typical glamor job in Sofia. She wines and dines the visiting press and presents the Soviet system charmingly. Before the Communists came she was a file clerk.

Young people whom you might expect to be democratic—students, for instance—have been so adroitly confused and split by Communist techniques that they can no longer form an effective opposition. Communist programs are sold to them in non-Communist language.

A favorite device is the borrowing of local heroes. The Communists in Bulgaria set up Alexander Stamboliski as a martyred youth hero, though he was an agrarian reformer who was bitterly attacked by the Communists while he lived.

Sometimes "renovated parties" are so set up that a youth thinks he is joining a democratic group, only to find himself part of a Communist rubber stamp.

Violence is not the Communists' favorite weapon, but if opposition continues it is ready. The police break up youth meetings and imprison recalcitrant leaders. This has been especially true in Czechoslovakia, where the Communists took over before students' support had been won.

Religious Groups Draw Five to One in Germany

By Mary Hawkins

BERLIN, May 8.—Here in Berlin, where the East-West struggle is sharpest, men plead with youngsters of 10 or less to join political youth groups. A 10-year-old today is a vote tomorrow, or perhaps a soldier.

But American Military Government figures show a surprising reaction: nearly five times as many youngsters have joined religious youth groups as have signed up with political youth movements.

In the American zone, more than one million boys and girls belong to youth groups, but only 37,000 have joined the frankly political organizations. That's 37 out of every 1000.

Three reasons are given for the strength of the religious organizations, which extend into the Russian zone, according to reports. 1. These groups had a head start, because they were allowed under Hitler. 2. They are not as controversial as political groups. 3. They attract youngsters who are sick of politics, and who blame politics for most of their troubles.

Four movements were licensed to operate under the four occupying powers, on a "you-license-my-group-and-I'll-okay-yours" basis. They are:

Freie Deutsche Jugend—A Communist group that starts with tiny tots, carries on intensive political schooling and will run 16 camps this summer. Its slogan is "Unity and a Just Peace for Germany." It has attracted 7000 youngsters in Berlin.

Die Falken—Run by the Socialist Party, it has 6000 members and gives the Communist group some competition. It accepts children as young as 10, but keeps them separate from the older members until they reach 14.

The Demokratischer Jugenverband—A middle of the road group, claims 1000 youngsters.

The Association of German Youth—Apparently almost nonpolitical, has 1200 children who go in for hiking and camping. Military Government observers are watching it for a nationalistic tinge.

The British are far ahead of other powers in sending German youth leaders to other countries for training. More than 50 youngsters go every month to Switzerland, Holland and elsewhere to learn what the rest of the world is thinking.

A tremendous number of German boys and girls belong to athletic clubs. About four out of every 10 belong in the American zone. Observers, who are inclined to compare mass athletics with Hitler's youth fes-

What the National Health Assembly's 10-Year Program Will Mean to You . . .

By Agnes E. Meyer
Post Reporter

THE success of the National Health Assembly was a triumph of the democratic process over tensions that appeared to be insoluble. No less significant than the far-reaching practical program that has been outlined by the delegates, was the fact that for the first time the medical profession and numerous lay groups sat down together and worked harmoniously for the common good on a Nation-wide basis.

This conference will always be memorable because it built a permanent bridge between the medical profession and the labor unions, farm organizations, cooperative health federations and other groups that have long been fighting for better health protection. It has transformed armed and hostile camps into coalescing forces whose impact upon the national welfare will gradually make itself felt throughout the country.

Members of the A. M. A. expressed satisfaction that the labor unions had such expert people on the various committees, and the labor union representatives found out that medical practitioners are not necessarily anti-social. The success of their common endeavors brought home to professional and layman that the best interests of the medical profession are served when the layman respects the physician's role in society, and that the best interests of society are served when proper organization makes the skills of the physician available to the maximum number of people.

As a result the skepticism with which many of the delegates came to this conference was transformed by mature and patient deliberations into the certainty that foundations have been soundly laid upon which an all-embracing national health program can be constructed.

10-Year Program

THE conference was called by the Federal Security Administrator, Oscar R. Ewing, at the request of President Truman, to establish the widest possible "area of agreement" between disparate factions upon a ten-year program for the health and welfare of the Nation. An executive committee appointed by Mr. Ewing joined him and his staff in selecting leaders from all parts of the country as chairmen and members of the fourteen committees on problems of organization, facilities, personnel and finance.

These sections accepted as basic to their considerations the definition of health promulgated by the World Health Organization. "Health is defined as a state of complete physical, mental and social well-being, not merely the absence of disease or infirmity."

Two other trends ran through all the discussions: that a health program is everybody's business, and that its development depends upon local initiative and a knowledge of local needs, and therefore upon the preservation of local autonomy.

What the average person will want to know about the findings of this conference is: "How do they affect me, my family and my immediate environment?" Therefore I shall give what must necessarily be an over-simplified picture of the new, healthier and happier community that will come into being when and if the major plans of the Health Assembly are carried out. I shall therefore list the committees and the names of the chairmen without attempting to give credit to individuals for the different ideas on organization, facilities, personnel and financing.

Section 1. What is the Nation's Need for Health and Medical Personnel? Chairman: Algo D. Henderson.

Section 2. What is the Nation's Need for Hospital Facilities, Health Centers and Diagnostic Clinics? Chairman: Charles F. Wilinsky.

Section 3. What is the Nation's Need for Local Health Units? Chairman: Haven Emerson.

Section 4. Chronic Disease and the Aging Process. Chairman: James R. Miller.

Section 14. A National Program of Environmental Sanitation. Chairman: Arthur D. Weston.

Organization

FULL-TIME local health departments in every city and county or combination of counties are essential to a strong health program. This is one of the recommendations made by the National Health Assembly, that is already implemented in a bill now before the Congress, S. 2189, which provides Federal aid to strengthen local public health units and increase their number so that there will be Nation-wide coverage.

Cooperating with these public officials, local and State health councils, made up of all agencies and individuals concerned with health, as well as business, banking and industrial groups, will help to plan the local program and keep it close to local needs. In addition, these councils must arouse the interest, aggressive support and

Booming Port

Navy Expects Tactical Job In Next War

BREMEN, May 8 (AP).—The port of Bremen, knocked out by Allied action, again is in business—in fact, more business than ever.

On a recent day the port handled more tonnage than on any previous day since it came into use as a trading center centuries ago.

The story is different for Hamburg, once one of the world's great ports. British officials say it has been restored sufficiently to handle 40 per cent of its 1936 tonnage, but they never have been asked to cope with more than 25 per cent. Three quarters of the city, which was one of the RAF's first targets, is in various stages of disintegration.

In Bremen, recovery of the port area has progressed at a fast pace. Stanley A. Clem, American chief of port operations on the Weser River, drew an optimistic picture of the part Bremen and Bremerhaven can play in the revival of western European trade.

In the busiest prewar year, Bremen handled 12 million tons against Hamburg's 26 million.

Fast Turnaround

WHEN the Americans took over the Bremen enclave as a port of entry for supplies for the occupation forces, every basin was blocked by bomb wreckage or sunken vessels. Now all except two or three small ones are clear. In some cases the berthage has been improved by dredging.

At the end of the war the cargo-handling capacity had been reduced to 20 per cent. It is now 90 per cent of prewar, which, combined with speedy turnaround, makes the port capable of handling more than ever before, Clem said.

This has not been achieved without difficulties, however. Before the war there was 280,000 square meters of warehousing. At the end of the war there was only 20,000 square meters. Two years of work have added 30,000. Another 32,000 square meters is complete except for roofing paper.

In two years Clem has reduced his American staff from 137 to two. "The Germans run this port and I see they do it in line with the laid-down military government policy," he said.

The outlook in Hamburg, however, is anything but reassuring for its 1½ million residents.

Hamburg is expected to handle only 7,300,000 tons of trade this year.

Curtain Cutoff

BECAUSE Hamburg was linked by inland waterways to the greater part of Germany and most of central Europe, before the war it handled a tonnage rivaled on the continent only by Rotterdam and Antwerp.

The only relic of the city's former huge trade with Central Europe is the flow of imports and exports to and from Czechoslovakia. The remainder of the eastern hinterland that used to give Hamburg 50 per cent of its business seems to be firmly cut off by the iron curtain.

Guerilla Skirmishes Reported From Baltic

By Sigrid Arne
Associated Press Staff Writer

STRANGE reports of bitter guerilla warfare between Russians and underground armies in the Baltic states—Lithuania, Latvia and Estonia—are piling up in Washington, London and Stockholm.

The reports are being published in regular news letters issued here by the Lithuanian Legation; in a "newsletter from behind the iron curtain," which is compiled from Baltic underground sources in Stockholm, and in pamphlets issued by exiled Baltic diplomats here and in London.

A digest of their reports has been presented by the exiles to the United Nations as an "appeal."

Much of the information is confirmed here by State Department officials who refuse to give out details. One official, however, says that the Baltic reports check with information which the American Government has received from other sources.

Use Red Uniforms

NEWS from the three little nations on the Baltic Sea seep out to Sweden and Britain through Balt sailors who escape in fishing smacks under cover of fog. The Baltic newsletters say the Baltic shores are patrolled by Russian planes and small naval vessels to prevent such escapes.

Lithuanian, Latvian and Estonian newsletters all report guerilla armies in their homelands. They say the bands hide out in the forests, live off the land and use captured German and Russian artillery. They wear captured Russian uniforms, to confuse the Russian troops. They have mobile artillery and small tanks.

The newsletters indicate that the Lithuanians, who have the largest population, are the most active. They say that Russia is keeping six divisions in the country, as well as 75,000 secret police. Last summer, the newsletters say, the Russians added five air squadrons and more infantry.

Ratio of 7 to 1

DATES and places of battles which have taken place are issued here by Juozas Kajeckas, attache of the Lithunian Legation. They include:

April, 1946, in the Kedainiai district. KNVD troops versus 70 partisans; 12 partisans dead; close to 100 NKVD killed.

September, 1945, in the Raseiniai district; 138 partisans versus 700 NKVD. The battle lasted 20 hours; 73 partisans and 430 Russians killed.

June 11, 1945, in the Deguciai Forest; 70 partisans versus 300 Russians. Six partisans and 67 Russians dead.

Hundreds of such skirmishes have been reported. The partisans have the advantage of fighting in forests they know, but the Russians have modern artillery and good communications. However, the Lithuanians report that on the average seven Russians are killed for one partisan. Some 8000 Lithuniaas have died in guerilla war.

Reports from Latvia and Estonia, which are farther north, are fewer.

Together, the three little nations have fewer people than New York City. They were occupied by Russia in June, 1940, and two months later, with the Red Army there, they voted to become Soviets. The United States Government has never recognized that vote, and the three Baltic missions here are still recognized as the representatives of their countries.

In 1941 the Germans pushed the Russians back, but in 1944 the Russians moved in again.

Children Enslaved

LATVIAN and Lithuanian diplomats here and in London believe that the aim of the Russians in their homelands is to liquidate the educated classes which could lead a rebellion.

The "Lithuanian Bulletin," printed in New York, reports that "all fishing fleets of the Baltic states were liquidated last summer. Tens of thousands of Estonian, Latvian and Lithuanian fishermen with their families were 'voluntarily' moved from the 'overpopulated Baltic republics' to the Sea of Okhotsk in the Far East."

The Lithuanian Bulletin reports a heavy loss of young Balts taken into Russia. "So-called technical labor duty was introduced for children of the 12-15 age. The children are oficially described as "volunteers'—the same as the Baltic fishermen who were moved to the Far East. These youthful slaves are dispatched to reconstruct sister republics somewhere deep in Russia."

The Lithuanian Bulletin further reports that many thousands of Lithuanians have been deported to a labor camp, named Varkuta, in the Urals. A few have escaped and returned to tell the story.

Rocket Stations

THE Bulletin has published reports of many new Russian military fortifications in all three nations. Lithuanians have been removed from a three-mile-wide coastal area and the Russians are expanding the network of airfields the Germans built. Mongols and German prisoners are used on the job.

Experimental stations for guided missiles have been set up on the island of Saaremaa and at Petrozavodsk in Karelia. A third one is reported in Estonia.

Underground munitions dumps, oil tanks and barracks have been built on the islands of Saaremaa und Hiiumaa. They are also being built at the Estonian ports of Paldiski and Parnu. American lend-lease bulldozers are used for those jobs, according to Estonian refugees.

A large submarine base is being finished at Padasaare in Estonia. Another has been reactivated near Koenigsberg. The Latvian port of Pieraja has been made a naval base.

The Russians are building a modern motor speedway between Leningrad and East Prussia.

Smuts Favored in 'Atomic Vote'

Cape Town, potential crossroads of the Western world in an atomic war, as seen from Table Mountain

By R. F. S. Dewdney
Associated Press Staff Writer

JOHANNESBURG, May 8.—South Africans feel that the eyes of the world will be on them when they go to the polls May 26.

It will be the world's first "atomic election," they say, and it works out like this:

British and American stategists long have realized that western Europe would be in a bad spot in any future war. Its concentrated industries and crowded cities could hardly stand long against atomic attack.

However, Britain, France, Belgium and Portugal have vast holdings in Africa. The last year has seen a sudden awakening of interest in these territories as sources of raw material, as military bases and as sites for dispersal of industries.

Britain has gone further than others. She is transferring her military bases from Egypt, the Suez Canal Zone and Palestine to Kenya Colony and is spending 100 million dollars to promote agriculture in East Africa. In southern Rhodesia, she is building the biggest RAF training system outside the British Isles. Broad military strategy from the Sudan to Cape Town has been built up by Field Marshal Lord Montgomery, Chief of the Imperial General Staff, in a recent visit.

Controls Crossroads

ALL this tends to support the view expressed by General Sir Francis de Guingand, Montgomery's wartime chief of staff, that it is time to plan British Commonwealth defense and defense of the western world on the African continent. He and others see in the great absorptive capacity of Agrica the only present answer to atomic bombing.

As the only fully self-governing country south of Egypt, and by far the biggest industrial nation in Africa, South Africa's position is clear. But will South Africa play ball? That is the real issue behind the screen of local politics.

Will South Africa act again as supply base for Africa? Will her ports be open to Allied navies? Lying at the crossroads between the United States and Australasia, will South Africa become a focal point for the defense of the whole Western Hemisphere?

General de Guingand posed the last question. The general election May 26 will answer all of them.

Racial Extremist

THE election will be fought between two violently contrasting types. On the one hand is Field Marshal Jan Christiaan Smuts, 78-year-old internationalist and Prime Minister, staunch friend of Britain. On the other is Dr. Daniel Francois Malan, isolationist and no special friend of any country.

There is no question where Smuts and his United Party would stand in another war. But with Malan's Nationalists in control it would be another matter.

When World War II started, the predominantly Nationalist cabinet submitted a motion to Parliament declaring South Afrrica neutral. Smuts managed to defeat it by a narrow majority of 13 votes. Several times later the Nationalists sought to make a separate peace.

That international aspect of the election will not be voiced from the campaign platforms. The Nationalists long ago hitched their wagon to the color question. Smuts has been attacked both in and outside the United Nations for his alleged repression of Indians and Africans, but the Nationalists consider he has been far too lenient.

The Nationalists want complete segregation of all blacks and elimination of any representation for Africans and Indians in the country's legislatures. For their own people, the more extreme Afrikaners, there is the promise of a republic, with complete severance from the British Commonwealth.

Deal With Labor

THE United Party claims credit for inaugurating an extensive immigration policy to strengthen the white position, and for establishing stable conditions that are attracting a vast amount of overseas capital. Party leaders say they have put the country on a financial footing unique in the postwar world.

Not overly optimistic, the Nationalists figure the new Parliament will be divided approximately like this: United Party, 81 seats; Nationalists, 60; Labor, 8; Independent, 1.

Arrests Shift Blame From Peron to U.S.

By Virginia Prewett

ANAPOLIS, Brazil, May 8.—If the Peron government gets away with blaming Americans for the bank strikes there, it will be the neatest anti-American trick of the decade. It will simply shift to the United States blame for the popular unrest against Peron.

Argentina obviously has a great deal to conceal, or the battle for freedom of the press there would not have been so bitter. With relations with Russia coming to a crisis, Argentina also obviously wants an iron curtain drawn so she can take advantage of our moment of worry to grow bold and strong in Latin America.

As a correspondent in Buenos Aires from 1944 until December 31, 1946, this writer knew intimately both John Griffiths, former United States Embassy officer, and Norah Pines de Viterbo, the Overseas News Agency correspondent accused with Griffiths of plotting the recent bank strike.

Friend of Bruce

GRIFFITHS, former University of Southern California professor, organized the United States Embassy's first cultural relations program in Argentina during the war and served as special adviser to Ambassadors Armour, Braden and Messersmith. He has been in exporting and importing since leaving the embassy more than a year ago, but is a close friend of the present Ambassador, James Bruce.

Griffiths' only crime in Argentina is having made too many friends for the United States: When he left the embassy, more than 100 pro-democratic Argentines gave him a banquet, something without precedent in Argentine history.

Griffiths was the best contact man the embassy ever had and his inside information has been unsurpassed. He knows the history of the regime and all the men in it in complete detail. What Griffiths does not know, his friends know.

Norah Pines de Viterbo was arrested for one thing only: As a correspondent in Buenos Aires for nearly six years, she has sent out the truth as she verified it. Exceptionally well-informed and well-balanced, her factual information could not be stopped by threat or attempted bribery.

Both Griffiths and Norah have long known their necks were in the noose. Griffiths, from embassy days, has had a police shadow off and on. Miss Pines last year was involved in a trumped-up libel suit that fell by its own weight.

Tricked From Hiding

NORAH PINES DE VITERBO, a frail young woman of striking beauty, is an Italian citizen. In the first World War her father was interned by the Germans. Her younger sister was in an European concentration camp during the last war. Her family went to Argentina as refugees from Mussolini.

Friends hid Norah when news broke of the charge that she had plotted the bank strike. But the Peronistas arrested her fiance, Augusto Pini, a Franco-Italian Bank official without the remotest connection with the striking union. They sent out word he was being held as hostage, and Norah gave herself up. Cell doors clanked on both of them.

Police were even sent to arrest New York Times Correspondent Virginia Lee Warren and Times Bureau Assistant William Mizelle on the same charges. Intervention of Ambassador Bruce halted that.

Argentina has chosen to make the United States the scapegoat for official mishandling of labor and other problems. The damage this can do us in Latin America, now seething with Communist agents, is beyond calculation.

Swinemunde Is Again a 'War Port'

By Larry Allen
Associated Press Staff Writer

SWINIOUJCIE, Poland, May 8. This once-famous German naval base of Swinemunde is again a "war port."

All along the Oder River leading out into the bay and the Baltic Sea are big red signs in Polish to that effect. Swinioujscie, as it is now called by the Poles, is carefully guarded by Polish and Russian marines. Each has his own restricted areas along the Oder.

Just three miles west is Poland's frontier in the German territories she absorbed after Potsdam. Road blocks bar entry into the Soviet zone and the area where the Nazis once had rocket launching installations. What is there now, nobody knows.

Swinioujscie today has a population of several thousand Poles, and Russians and Poles alike have put the accent on getting ocean traffic going at full blast.

A recent tour of the water front showed several big Russian transports in the harbor, along with a score of small warcraft. Everywhere are sailors and officers wearing the emblem of the "Red Baltic Fleet."

But both Russians and Poles seem in a cheery mood. Even though both call this a "war port," neither seems interested in talking about the prospect of another war. They just say, "we're too busy to talk about war. We've got work to do."

Ships of many nationalities now use the Oder waterway. The port is a take-off point for the ferry connecting Sweden with Poland. The Oder, too, is well filled with small units of the Polish navy, most of which have been returned from English ports since the end of the war.

Although Swinioujscie and surrounding towns still show heavy war destruction, all communications are working. Polish railway lines run right up to the Oder ferry. All highways in the vicinity are in good shape.

'Advertising' Debated By Church of England

By Richard Tompkins
Associated Press Staff Writer

LONDON, May 8.—The Church of England Assembly is about to come to grips with the question of whether it needs a professional press agent to combat "public apathy" toward religion.

"Yes," says a special commission on publicity. Dr. J. C. Wand, Bishop of London and a commission member, told the assembly:

"All we are asking you is to get out of crinolines into the 'new look.' You cannot fight modern wars with bows and arrows, and in the modern set-up your must use modern methods."

"No," say the standpatters. Press agenty is "vulgar." The Very Rev. A. S. Duncan-Jones, dean of Chichester, argued that hiring a "super-publicity person" would not increase publication of church news anyway.

5 Per Cent Attendance

THE Assembly will act on the commission's report at its June meeting. In the background of the discussion is the fact that only 10 per cent of the English belong to any religious organization, Protestant or Catholic, and only 5 per cent go to church regularly.

The special commission was appointed by the Archbishops of Canterbury and York. Its report said in part:

"We believe evangelism by advertising may prove of incalculable value in the preliminary stage of preparing the soil for the reception of the seed . . . and can bring into touch with the church untold thousands now thirsting for spiritual strength and peace of heart.

"The commission believes that the church must in principle be prepared to utilize all reasonable and generally recognized means of publicity. The meaning of the Christian faith in a secular world . . . must be rediscovered and restated.

"Even if the broadest view is taken of the need for the church as a whole to become publicity-minded, there remain certain services which can only be rendered by a central organization."

$8000-a-Year Man

THE report calls for the establishment of a church information board under a "thoroughly skilled and competent" officer who would interpret church activities to the press and other organizations and would advise the church on the trend of public and press opinion. His salary would be 2000 pounds ($8000) a year.

On press relations, the report makes these observations:

"The treating of religion as a subject which can safely be played down unless a 'tidbit' is forthcoming is due not so much to hostility as to the reflection and sharing of public apathy, combined often with want of understanding and proper perspective on the part of those responsible for producing a newspaper.

"It is not for the church to claim any particular privileges, but rather to secure that the positive aspects of its life and activity are understood and fairly presented.

"Scores of events and occasions find recognition in the press, not because they have the sensational appeal of a murder or the sporting appeal of a test (cricket) match, but because special efforts have been made to show that they are news and of interest not only to those who are already disposed to appreciation, but to the general reader."

Value of Controversy

"CHURCH folk, no doubt," continues the report, "prefer peace to controversy, but controversy makes publicity and, if the alternative is a walkover for the other man, Christians have no real option.

The report suggests that a churchman be "discreet and human in his approaches to journalists whose experience in assessing the worth of a man is often considerable." It recommends letters to the editor, "especially if an atheist or agnostic is an invariable contributor and tends to hold the floor for want of challenge."

Without waiting for the assembly to appoint a publicity man, the Rev. Gomer Davies, vicor of Codicote, Hertfordshire, has gone ahead with his own publicity. One of his church's advertisements said:

"Worship in Codicote's 840-year-old village church. Warm welcome. New heating system."

Thereafter, on chilly Sunday mornings, he noticed larger congregations.

Stassen Foes Itching For an Expense Audit

By Robert C. Albright
Post Reporter

A MOVE is under way is the Senate to lead off the quadrennial investigation of Presidential campaign expenditures with a close look at money spent in the GOP scramble for the nomination.

Democrats are more than a little interested in the project. They haven't any real financial stake in the presidential primaries. Anything they turn up on the Republican front runners may come in handy later.

MYERS

JENNER

Republicans opposed to the nomination of Harold E. Stassen are mostly sparking the move. There are increasing indications that the inquiry, if it comes, although broad enough in scope to cover the whole field, will be directed mainly at the Minnesotan.

Stassen was first to announce, has covered the most territory, and intensive campaigning costs money. Taft and Dewey supporters are itching to have a look at his costs, but there is just one big hitch.

An investigation before the Republican convention, however phrased to reach all the candidates, would be open to suspicion that it is part of the "Stop Stassen" movement.

Ready to Operate

USUALLY the Senate sets up a special committee to investigate all spending in presidential, vice presidential and senatorial contests. Under the Congressional Reorganization Act, however, the Senate Rules Committee was given power to launch an inquiry on its own.

A three-man privileges and elections subcommittee, headed by Senator William E. Jenner (R., Ind.), would probably get the assignment. Other members are Senator John W. Bricker (R., O.), who led the field of Taft delegates in Ohio, and Senator Francis J. Myers (D., Pa.), who would just as soon inquire. Jenner, who has a gubernatorial campaign of his own on his hands, was in Indiana last week, and hasn't committed himself.

If a pre-convention inquiry is ordered, it will probably find Stassen ready. Far from shying at the money question, he likes to tell the "Minnesota Fund" story of how his campaign is financed. If the question isn't asked during his q. and a. periods on the stump, he finds a way to work it in.

Chairman of the Minnesota Fund is William H. Vanderbilt, former Governor of Rhode Island and a good money raiser. Stassen set a ceiling of $1000 on individual contributions, but the bulk of it comes in smaller lots.

Shopping for Zephyr

BEST bet of the week is that Gael Sullivan's successor as executive director of the Democratic National Committee will have that "passion for anonymity."

Democratic National Chairman J. Howard McGrath and President Truman will do the picking after a careful look over the field.

They want a competent liberal with plenty of savvy and organizing ability. But they will use the same anonymity test the late Franklin Roosevelt applied to his White House assistant.

As executive director, Sullivan issued statements in his own right. His spur-of-the-moment frankness sometimes proved embarrassing.

His successor won't be issuing many statements. When the committee has something to say, Senator McGrath, the real boss, will say it.

Among the many names under consideration: James Rowe, once one of Roosevelt's executive assistants; William Bray, once executive assistant to Jim Farley; Paul Aiken, Assistant Postmaster General, and William Boyle, formerly with the Truman War Investigating Committee.

Leftover Compromise

THE Vandenberg-Millikin compromise, which helped stave off a Republican high tariff raid on the Reciprocal Trade Act last year, may turn up in new dress when Congress gets around to extending the act.

Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg (R., Mich.) and Senator Eugene D. Millikin (R., Colo.) at that time recommended two basic changes in Trade Act procedure to the President:

1. Inclusion of an "escape clause" in each trade agreement, releasing the United States from any concessions shown definitely injurious to American industry.

2. A so-called "peril point" plan under which the President would submit tariff items to be negotiated to the Tariff Commission for advice. The commission would then tell the President the point below which tariff rates on given items should not be cut.

The President last year accepted the "escape clause" condition but turned down the "peril point" plan.

This year the second condition may be renewed as a GOP compromise in the form of an amendment to the projected Republican bill extending the act only one year.

High tariff Republicans, however, want to go further and write more drastic changes into the law. Despite Secretary Marshall's warning that crippling amendments and less than a three year extension would damage United States prestige around the globe, one amendment in the works would submit each trade agreement to Congress for approval, handing back to Congressmen their old tariff-making power.

Gavel Isn't Ingrown

WHEN Speaker Joseph W. Martin, jr., agreed to serve as permanent chairman of the Republican convention, some of the "experts" said he eliminated himself from the presidential running.

Martin said nothing. But there are mounting indications he is still "available." If his name is put forward, friends said, he will simply hand over the presiding officer's gavel to somebody else.

Martin is the fair-haired boy of the Republican House, just as Senator Vandenberg is the Senate's favorite.

The other day at a luncheon, Representative Edith Nourse Rogers (R., Mass.) presented Martin as the "next President of the United States." In responding, Martin jocularly quoted the words of another House Speaker, the late Tom Reed.

Said Reed: "You could go a lot farther and do a lot worse, and you probably will."

Bars Distort Tony's View Of Justice

By Dillard Stokes
Post Reporter

TONY MARINO has a riddle for the justices of the Supreme Court.

Here's how it goes:

"I've been in prison nearly 23 years. The Attorney General of Illinois says I was railroaded. You—the highest court in the land—said last December that my sentence was against the Constitution. Yet I'm still in prison.

"Why? And what are you going to do about it?"

Marino is caught in a briar patch of law and red tape. There the old guarantees of coram nobis, writ of error and habeas corpus have grown spikes that trap the wariest. But in the briars the facts seem to be plain.

MARINO

They began in 1924, when 17-year-old Tony Marino came here from Sicily. Next year an old man was killed in a hold-up in Rockford, Ill. Marino claims he didn't do it. That part is not clear. But it is clear that Marino was picked up, kept in jail several weeks and then taken before a judge.

Marino could speak no English. The interpreter who told him what was going on was the detective who picked him up.

Marino had no lawyer, and he could not write his name. Yet a waiver of counsel "signed" by him turned up in the files.

There is no guilty plea, or any other plea, in the records. Yet Marino got a life sentence, and he has been serving it since 1925.

He learned English in jail, and filed his own plea for a writ of habeas corpus. When he lost, he went to the Supreme Court. Attorney General George F. Barrett of Illinois did not fight the appeal, but confessed error on the part of the State.

Judge Is Satisfied

SO LAST December 22 Chief Justice Vinson said Marino "was denied the due process of law which the Fourteenth Amendment requires" and sent his case back to the Circuit Court in Rockford, Ill.

Circuit Judge William R. Dusher refused to enter a judgment "in accordance with the mandate of the Supreme Court." He said he would hold a full hearing and decide the case.

Three weeks ago Judge Dusher had the hearing and threw out Marino's plea for liberty. "All of his constitutional rights have been afforded him," said Judge Dusher.

Attorney Rosario Gaziana of Rockford was busy yesterday on a new appeal to the Supreme Court. He will ask the chief justice to give that decision about due process again. And this time to make it stick.

Autumn Hope

ALL this time, Marino stays in the Statesville (Ill.) prison. Even if his appeal gets to the Supreme Court soon, there probably could be no decision until next fall. So that unless the justices should grant him bail when his appeal is filed, he still faces some time behind bars.

Should Marino at last win his liberty, he would be liable to be tried on the old murder charge. This does no trouble him. He claims he is innocent. And this time he would have a lawyer.

Odd Alliance Clamors for 'New' U.N.

By Ferdinand Kuhn, Jr.
Post Reporter

THE movement to reform or transform the United Nations has suddenly become more powerful than at any time since the Charter was signed three years ago.

The Charter is under fire from an accidental combination of two big and vocal American groups which have almost nothing in common.

One is the body of opinion, strongly represented in Congress, which is so exasperated with Russia that it wants a showdown in the U. N. and elsewhere, even at the risk of war.

The other is made up of the earnest organizations that see no solution except by giving up a part of the national sovereignty to a super-government.

The first group looks down upon the second as starry-eyed idealists, although most of human history has shown the idealists to be practical in the long run. The second group would be horrified at the very thought of allying itself with the other.

Yet at the moment both are busy fanning the national brush-fire of discontent with the United Nations. Both want a change without delay, either inside or outside the present Charter.

A Soviet veto actually being committed. Andrei Gromyko raises his hand in the Security Council last July to kill the United States proposal for an 11-nation border commission to bring peace to the Balkans

Sheaves of Resolutions

A FULL-FLEDGED national debate on the subject is under way. The House Foreign Affairs Committee has started public hearings on a resolution that would change the U. N. almost out of recognition. Twenty-seven other resolutions on the U. N. are pending in the House alone.

Some of the presidential candidates have jumped into the fray, and there is no telling how far the movement may go by the time the platform-makers start work next month at Philadelphia.

Harold Stassen wants a convention called for 1950 to find a new method of voting in the Security Council, with or without Soviet consent. Senator Robert A. Taft wants the Charter amended to eliminate all vetoes, and has called for an international tribunal to pass upon aggression, "with all nations agreeing to abide by its decision."

The debate has reached such a pitch already that the Administration and cooler heads in Congress are fearful of the effect abroad. Secretary Marshall and Ambassador Warren R. Austin found it necessary to warn the House committee last week that any attempt to revise the Charter now, in defiance of Russian wishes, would destroy the United Nations.

They reminded impatient Congressmen that many non-Soviet countries, afraid of becoming a battle ground between East and West, would refuse to join a new international organization, or a remade United Nations, that might look like "a grand alliance against the Soviet Union."

Why Won't It Tick?

APART from anger at Russia, many other impulses are at work behind the movement to "do something" about the U. N.

One of them, perhaps, is the American instinct to take a machine apart when it is not working well—or to buy a new one altogether. Another may be what Assistant Secretary-General Byron Price described last week as "the old mysterious psychology of frustration and discouragement."

Another, perhaps, is the sense of failure caused by American "bungling and confusion" in handling the Palestine issue before the U. N. And still another may be what Secretary Marshall last week called a wrong assumption—that if you change the forms of international dealings you thereby change the spirit and the substance as well.

All of these assorted fears, dreams and delusions may be responsible for the present public ferment over world organization. But whatever its cause, the movement to change the U. N. has become too powerful to be bottled up, scoffed at or ignored.

The public opinion polls show so much grass-roots support for changing the U. N. that politicians all over the country are beginning to sit up and take notice.

A Gallup poll last December showed 56 per cent for and 30 per cent against strengthening the U. N. to make it "a world government with power to control the armed forces of all nations, including the United States." A Roper survey last week showed a similar result of 43 per cent for and 38 per cent against joining "other democracies" immediately to make "a United States of the World."

Almost Half 'in Dark'

IT IS not usually a part of the public polling technique to require proof that a sample voter knows what he is voting about. One Gallup poll last September showed, however, that 30 per cent were for abolishing the veto in the United Nations, 19 per cent against, 8 per cent "no opinion"—and 43 per cent didn't even know what the veto was!

There is not only ignorance in the public mind on many U. N. issues, but also a vast confusion because of the number and variety of the organizations counseling this or that road to peace. The most important organized groups, starting with the most daring, are these:

The United World Federalists, led by Cord Meyer, jr., a young Marine veteran, with former Justice Owen J. Roberts and Thomas K. Finletter of New York among its spokesmen. This group insists that nothing less than world government will save mankind from atomic suicide.

It would summon a constitutional convention under Article 109 of the present Charter, and set up a world legislature with membership weighted according to population, economic development and literacy. The World Federalists want to go ahead with such a constitution even if Russia refuses at first to join it.

The Committee to Frame a World Constitution, led by Chancellor Robert M. Hutchins of the University of Chicago. This group is studying specific problems of a world constitution: the size of the legislature, the powers of the executive, the guaranteeing of human rights, among others.

Federal Union, led by Clarence K. Streit. This group is more exclusive than the World Federalists; it believes that only the most productive and advanced democracies should form a federal republic, patterned on the federation formed by the United States in 1787.

Original membership would be confined to Britain and her dominions (except India and Ceylon), Scandinavia, France, the Low Countries, Switzerland and the Philippines—and, of course, the United States. It argues that such a federation, set up within the present United Nations framework, would be so strong that no nation would dare to attack it.

The Citizens Committee for United Nations Reform, led by Ely Culbertson, the bridge expert. This group has promoted its cause so well that 16 Senators and 14 Representatives have introduced similar resolutions to carry out its program. It wants, among other things, to recast the Security Council, to abolish the veto on enforcement measures, to set up a world police force and to limit the United States, Britain and Russia each to 20 per cent of the world's total of heavy armaments. It wants to push ahead whether Russia likes it or not—which may be one reason why it is winning so many converts in the present Congress.

The American Association for the United Nations, directed by Clark Eichelberger. This group thinks it would be dangerous to try to change the Charter now, and futile to attempt world government in the near future. It argues that the best way to achieve world government is to let the present United Nations evolve gradually toward such a goal.

In particular, it would use Article 51 of the Charter to draft a treaty for "collective self-defense" against an aggressor.

A Veto Safety Valve

ARTICLE 51 permits any members of the U. N. to combine their forces and stop an aggressor until the Security Council is ready to act. In this way it could be a safeguard in case a Soviet veto delayed or stopped enforcement by the Security Council.

Its use in the present situation was first proposed by Hamilton Fish Armstrong, editor of Foreign Affairs, in what has come to be known as the "Armstrong Plan."

A resolution calling for "defensive military alliances" among the non-Soviet nations, but not mentioning Article 51, was introduced in the House March 11 by Representatives Charles J. Kersten (D., Mo.) and Richard M. Nixon (R., Calif.).

Specific mention of Article 51 is expected soon in a resolution now being worked out by Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg and his Senate Foreign Relations Committee. This is expected, first, to open the way to negotiating a treaty of mutual defense between the United States and the new Western European Union, made up of Britain, France and the Low Countries. It would, secondly, call for strengthening the United Nations in every possible way short of actually forcing revision of the Charter.

The Administration insists that it is strengthening the U. N. right now. It points to various American proposals of the past year to make the U. N. effective—to the creation of the "Little Assembly," which can consider emergencies when the General Assembly is not in session; to the American offer to abolish the veto in the peaceful settlement of disputes, and in elections to U. N. membership; and to the use of an Assembly commission in Greece in spite of the Security Council's refusal to act.

Healthy—to a Point

SUCH actions within the Charter have not satisfied the critics, either those who want the showdown with Russia or those who want the basic weaknesses of the U. N. corrected. Nor are the critics appeased by Secretary Marshall's repeated predictions that the European Recovery Program will create an atmosphere, in time, in which the U. N. can begin to work as its founders intended.

The fight, therefore, will go on, and the Administration will keep an anxious eye on it. The State Department's tactics will be to say that the present public debate over the U. N. is "healthy"—so long as it does not lead to action that will split or narrow the U. N.'s membership.

There is this to be said for the clamor for reform and change. Thirty years ago, in the aftermath of another great war, American frustration took itself out in selfishness and isolation. This time there is the same sense of frustration, but it takes a very different form. This time there is a ferment of demands for a change, for stronger world organization. The overwhelming majority which wanted a world charter with police powers three years ago still seems to want it today.

How the Charter Can Be Amended

Article 108

AMENDMENTS to the present Charter shall come into force for all members of the United Nations when they have been adopted by a vote of two-thirds of the members of the General Assembly and ratified in accordance with their respective constitutional processes by two-thirds of the members of the United Nations, including all the permanent members of the Security Council.

Article 109

1. A general conference of the members of the United Nations for the purpose of reviewing the present Charter may be held at a date and place to be fixed by a two-thirds vote of the members of the General Assembly and by a vote of any seven members of the Security Council. Each member of the United Nations shall have one vote in the conference.

2. Any alteration of the present Charter recommended by a two-thirds vote of the conference shall take effect when ratified in accordance with their respective constitutional processes by two-thirds of the members of the United Nations, including all the permanent members of the Security Council.

3. If such a conference has not been held before the tenth annual session of the General Assembly, 1955, following the coming into force of the present Charter, the proposal to call such a conference shall be placed on the agenda of that session of the General Assembly, and the conference shall be held if so decided by a majority vote of the members of the General Assembly and by a vote of any seven members of the Security Council.

How U. N. Members Can Combine Against an Aggressor

Article 51

NOTHING in the present Charter shall impair the inherent right of individual or collective self-defense if an armed attack occurs against a member of the United Nations, until the Security Council has taken the measures necessary to maintain international peace and security. Measures taken by members in the exercise of this right of self-defense shall be immediately reported to the Security Council under the present Charter to take at any time such action as it deems necessary in order to maintain or restore international peace and security.

(Article 52 makes clear that nothing in the Charter precludes the existence of "regional arrangements or agencies" to help keep the peace.)

Big Shift in Prairie Use Urged After Soil Study

By Lawrence N. Eldred
Associated Press Staff Writer

CHICAGO, May 8.—Nearly 50 million acres of farmland in eight North Central States need a shift in use, a new soil study indicates. Expected results would be vast increases in grain yields, beef and dairy cattle production, and soil saving.

George H. Walter, of the Bureau of Agricultural Economics, Milwaukee, considered land resources of Ohio, Michigan, Indiana, Illinois, Wisconsin, Minnesota, Iowa and Missouri. This is the Upper Mississippi Region in the United States Soil Conservation Service, which cooperated in the study.

Two thirds of the pork and more than one third of the beef and other meats produced in the United States come from these eight States, as well as about two thirds of the corn, a fifth of the wheat and about 90 per cent of the soybeans.

"Of the total of 215,600,000 acres in farms in the eight States, about 60 per cent is suitable for continuous use as cropland," Walter found. "By areas, however, the proportion varies from less than 30 per cent in parts of the (northern) cutover areas and the Ozark (Missouri) to more than 70 per cent on most of the flat prairies of the corn belt."

To achieve the "highest and best use" of all land in the eight States, Walter said, there should be a transfer of 24,600,000 acres of present permanent pasture and idle land into crops. On the other hand, there should be a shift of 24,500,000 acres out of current crop use, because the soil is too poor or erodes too easily. This land would go into pasture, forest, recreational or wildlife uses.

While the net increase in cropland would be only about 100,000 acres, the new areas "usually would be more productive than that shifted out of this use," Walter said.

If the land-shift were combined with soil conservation practices and moderate quantities of fertilizer. Walter said the results would look like this:

Grain yields could be increased about 30 per cent. Yields of roughage (pasture and hay) could be expected to double. This would mean that livestock production could be increased at least 40 per cent and poultry numbers might be expected to increase beyond prewar levels.

"To avoid making too great an increase in meat, hog production would need to fall to about the 1937-1941 levels," Walter's analysis said.

"All types of livestock would have available a greater proportion of roughage in their rations," Walter noted. "With such changes in livestock types, numbers and rations, these States would continue to have large quantities of feed grain for shipment to other areas."

Concentrated Yield

THE 30 per cent grain yield increase would come despite a decrease of 6 per cent in the acreage of row crops and a 16 per cent decrease in the acreage of small grains.

"Grain production would be concentrated even more than at present on the highly productive soils that are subject to little or no erosion," the economist said. "Farms on the poorer and more erodible soils would reduce their acreage of grain crops even though many of them are now deficient in grain for feed.

"Every farmer has a choice of alternative conservation systems of farming, any one of which is designed to control the erosion and fertility problem on his farm. His choice depends on his type of farming and the relative prices for the crops he can raise."

NATIONAL AFFAIRS

Farley Called the Turn

Stassen's Gains Fan The Vandenberg Ember

By Edward T. Folliard
Post Reporter

VANDENBERG talk is increasing.

With the Republican National Convention less than six weeks off the country once again is faced with a seeming paradox. The harder the avowed candidates strive, the nearer they get to the actual barrier at Philadelphia, the more one hears about the chances of a man who has spurned all efforts to put him into the race as an active candidate.

Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg of Michigan, distinguished President pro tempore of the Senate and chairman of the Foreign Relations Committee, is a red-hot possibility for the GOP presidential nomination in 1948.

He is not a favorite in the popular opinion polls and neither is he a favorite in the betting. (Actually, the battle for the nomination is just what the professionals say it is at this stage—"wide open."). Yet Vandenberg's name pops up and gets to the forefront every time that Republicans go into a huddle.

Jolted by Farley

SUCH a situation is anything but new in American politics.

In this particular campaign year, however, it has caused a good deal of bewilderment, especially among some of the supporters of Harold E. Stassen.

For example, when Stassen cleaned up in the Wisconsin primary a month ago, the Minnesotan's admirers were thrilled. Then they began to read the "interpretations."

Former Postmaster General James A. Farley, questioned by a reporter about Stassen's victory, said he thought the chief beneficiary would be Senator Vandenberg.

What was Farley's reasoning? It went something like this: Governor Dewey, up to then regarded as the No. 1 contender, had been badly hurt; this increased the likelihood of a convention deadlock between him and Senator Taft. In such a situation, big Jim figured, the most likely compromise was Vandenberg.

'Obvious' Bandwagon

A WEEK after the Wisconsin test, Stassen won another triumph. Running in the April 13 free-for-all primary in Nebraska, the big fellow led the whole GOP field. Dewey was second and Taft a poor third.

On top of this, Stassen forged into No. 1 place in the Gallup Poll, dislodging Dewey, and then went on to get the most write-in votes in the Pennsylvania primary.

By this time the Stassen enthusiasts had no doubt that a bandwagon movement was on. To skeptics, they would say: "Well, what does a man have to do to win the nomination, anyway?"

For one thing, he has to win the primary in Oregon May 21. Up until a week or so ago, the political reporters out there were predicting a Stassen victory and the polls seemed to back them up. In the meantime, however, Dewey has arrived in Oregon and is campaigning like a sheriff. The battle, as they say, is now in doubt.

Big State Needed

ASSUMING, just for argument's sake, that Stassen wins in Oregon, would that put him in reach of the nomination? His experienced political friends doubt it. They say that at least one more thing would be needed, and that would be for some big State delegation to come out for Stassen.

This, they say, would have to happen before balloting begins in Philadelphia if it were to produce the desired result—a stampede by those who will be wanting to clamber aboard the bandwagon of a winner.

Meanwhile, as has been said, there is an ever-growing volume of Vandenberg talk. It started more than a year ago. The renunciation of Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower caused it to grow, and then the primary victories of Stassen fanned it even more. Stassen's triumphs helped Vandenberg in the sense that they indicated that it might not be a handicap this time to be a Republican "internationalist."

Powerful 'Losers'

THE theory that Vandenberg might carry off the prize was based, first of all, on the assumption that there would be a Taft-Dewey deadlock and that no candidate would have enough delegates at the outset to win.

Once Stassen began to move up, this theory was expanded. The Minnesotan, it was argued, wouldn't be able to get the nomination for the simple reason that Dewey and Taft wouldn't let him get it. He had offended both of them—Dewey by saying that he wouldn't be his running mate and by calling him a "Me too" candidate, and Taft by going into Ohio and battling with him for delegates last week.

There are other arguments, of course. Many think that Vandenberg is the ablest man in the Republican Party. He is one man who, if nominated, would get the sincere praise of all the leading contenders—Stassen, Dewey and Taft.

The Democrats, talking privately, say that he would make a most formidable candidate.

Voice Of Europe

The spirit of George Washington as well as the spirits of King Henry of Navarre and Henry IV of France mentioned by Mr. Churchill must have been moved by the opening at The Hague on Friday of the "First Congress of Europe" in modern times. For Washington envisaged a federal union in Europe that would some day match the Union of free States on this side of the Atlantic. And what he was undoubtedly thinking of was not merely a union of western powers but a union of free peoples.

The congress at The Hague is not a meeting of governmental representatives. It has no mandate to bring into being a united states of Europe. Rather its 800 delegates represent the popular movements in the 16 Marshall Plan countries for European union, with also a sprinkling of delegates from Germany and Spain and exiled officials from various countries behind the iron curtain. Their purpose is, as expressed by Mr. Churchill, to form an European assembly "which will enable that voice (the voice of Europe) to make itself continuously heard and, we trust, with ever-growing acceptance by all the free countries of this continent." If the former British Prime Minister's advice is followed, the congress will not prejudice its cause by trying to work out "sharply cut formulas or detailed arrangements." Rather its efforts will be confined to rallying the peoples of Europe to increasing awareness of their common interests and of the forces that make the continuance of freedom contingent upon federalization.

With all the bright hopes that are being expressed at The Hague, European union remains within the realm of discussion. It is still a long way from being a political fact, and we must not expect the relinquishment of national sovereignty that it contemplates to be quickly attained. It is, however, an idea of ever-growing importance in the imagination and thinking of the Old World. If the "First Congress of Europe" reflects the will of the peoples of that continent and if the United States persists in the statesmanlike encouragement which it is giving to this movement, there is no reason why the assembly now contemplated should not be replaced by a genuine European parliament.

Korea's Leaders

Why it is impossible to unite the two zones of Korea at this time is illustrated nicely by the remarks of Dr. Kimm Kiusic at a press conference on the eve of Monday's elections in the southern zone. Dr. Kimm, a Rightist leader, who was selected by American authorities to head the interim legislature, recently returned from a "unity" conference sponsored by Korean Communists at Pyongyang, in the Russian zone. His contribution to a fair election was to denounce the American Military Government as corrupt and comparable to the "dishonest Japanese," and to praise the accomplishments in the northern zone under the Russians. He also voiced his opposition to the elections under United Nations auspices on the ground that they will "tend to perpetuate partition."

Dr. Kimm is not so naive as to be ignorant of why Korea is still divided and elections are being held in only one zone. For nearly three years the Soviet Union has held fast to the thirty-eighth parallel dividing line and has frustrated all attempts to weld together the Korean economy. She refused to admit the United Nations electoral commission which recently investigated conditions, and the southern zone elections subsequently were set up by the U. N. as the best present hope of implementing the independence which has been pledged to Korea. Irrespective of mistakes and abuses, the United States Military Government has been directed at making that independence possible and preventing Korea from becoming a Soviet puppet.

The charitable view of Dr. Kimm's calculated outburst is that he has lost his perspective and that, reflecting the impatience of many Koreans toward any occupation, he is unable to see the forest for the trees. A more cynical, and possibly more accurate, interpretation is that the Communists did their wooing well. If there is any essential difference between Dr. Kimm's approach and what the Communists have been preaching—that south Korea cannot hold out against the north—it is hard to see. Here may be yet another example of how the lines of the extreme Right and extreme Left coincide in the same repugnant aim.

Indeed, this is the terrible dilemma that faces people not only in Korea but elsewhere in the tension areas along the iron curtain. As the Koreans go to the polls, unprepared by 4000 years of history to exercise the franchise intelligently, they will vote in an atmosphere which has made emergence of moderate forces difficult and a balanced judgment almost impossible. And yet either of the extremes holds the abnegation of the independence which Koreans seek.

Registering Communists

In the aftermath of World War I, when this country endured its first spasm of commiphobia and when A. Mitchell Palmer's Red raids and deportation delirium were at their height, the late Senator Borah made a wise observation worth remembering:

> The safeguards of our liberty are not so much in danger from those who openly oppose them as from those who, professing to believe in them, are willing to ignore them when found inconvenient for their purpose; the former we can deal with, but the latter, professing loyalty, either by precept or example undermine the very first principles of our Government and are far the more dangerous.

Nowhere have the safeguards of our liberty been professed more vociferously than in the House Committee on Un-American Activities. Yet nowhere have they been so feared as sources of weakness rather than of strength; nowhere have they been so ignored and undermined. The legislation now recommended by that committee "to protect the United States against un-American and subversive activities," framed with unwonted care and with indubitable sincerity but framed nevertheless in fear and in doubt of the resiliency of American institutions, is directly in point.

The committee bill, in effect, sets up new standards of treason, circumventing the careful safeguards against prosecution for that crime specified in the Constitution. After asserting, as a legislative finding of fact, that individuals who willfully participate in the world Communist movement "repudiate their allegiance to the United States," the bill provides for a $10,000 fine, 10 years' imprisonment and loss of United States citizenship for those who "attempt in any manner" to establish here a foreign-controlled totalitarian dictatorship. Thus mere advocacy of such a change would be made a crime. Advocacy of a foreign-controlled dictatorship is, of course, thoroughly odious. But does it actually constitute so clear and present a danger to the security of the United States Government as to warrant a gag upon the freedom of expression which is that Government's greatest source of strength?

The bill, after reciting tediously vague and involved definitions of "Communist political organizations" and "Communist-front organizations," empowers the Attorney General to place voluntary associations of American citizens in one or the other of these categories. It does, to be sure, provide for hearings and for judicial review of his decisions—a greater deference to due process than the President's loyalty order now affords. But this is still an authority altogether incompatible with a government of laws. It is an authority to stigmatize whole groups of citizens as disloyal, to inflict on them, without trial, extremely stringent penalties, and effectively to limit their freedom of expression. Under the terms of the bill, an Attorney General might well feel warranted in classifying Henry Wallace's third party as a "Communist political organization" or a "Communist-front organization." Either classification would be tantamount to proscription.

In his report on the bill, Representative Mundt, who was its principal author, observed that "we cannot consistently criticize the Communist governments of Europe for suppressing opposition political parties if we resort to the same totalitarian methods here." How very true! Exposure, he says, is the primary need. But when exposure takes the form of official stigmatization and is attended by the imposition of severe handicaps, it amounts to suppression. And once this sort of suppression is permitted, it is bound to be applied not alone to actual Communists but to dissenters and nonconformists of every kind. The end is a suppression of liberty in the name of security.

The tactics of the Soviet dictatorship and, in particular, its use of Communist parties as fifth columns present a real and grave problem to free societies. But since the essence of the problem is how to remain free, it will not be solved by sacrificing freedom. There are measures now on the statute books which, in the circumstances of the times, should be strengthened or extended—the McCormack Act, and the Voorhis Act—requiring registration of agents of foreign principals and of organizations serving foreign governments. This newspaper has also indorsed a proposal of the President's Committee on Civil Rights to require all organizations soliciting funds from the general public to publish their membership lists and render a financial accounting as to the sources of their funds and the nature of their expenditures.

Unlike the Mundt bill, these requirements are general in application, not invidious. "There is incontrovertible evidence," said Mr. Mundt in his report, "of the fact that the Communist Party of the United States is dominated by such totalitarian dictatorship and that it is one of the principal instrumentalities used by the world Communist movement, directed from within that totalitarian dictatorship . . ." If this be indeed a fact, let the Department of Justice proceed forthwith to prosecute Communists under the McCormack Act and the Communist Party under the Voorhis Act and test the issue, as it should be tested, before a court of law.

The ancient right of Americans who are not foreign agents, who are voicing only their own independent convictions, to advocate a change in their Government—even, in the words of the Declaration of Independence, "to abolish it and to institute new government, laying its foundation on such principles and organizing its powers in such form as to them shall seem most likely to effect their safety and happiness"—is no mere luxury to be enjoyed only in untroubled times. It is the real reason why this Government has never been successfully assailed. It is what makes America unconquerable.

World Health Bill

Inauguration of the World Health Organization, an adjunct of the United Nations, without American participation has been as embarrassing to this country's position in international affairs as it has been hampering to the agency itself. It has put the United States in a position of seeming indifference to the collective efforts of 27 other nations to deal with disease, the common enemy of all mankind. Fortunately, there is still time for Congress to provide for American adherence to the WHO charter and American representation when the organization convenes at Geneva next month.

All that has blocked American participation has been an adverse vote in the House Rules Committee—despite unanimous indorsement of the bill by the Senate and by the House Foreign Affairs Committee. The hope expressed last week by Speaker Martin that the Rules Committee would reconsider its intransigeance should furnish the prod necessary to get this legislation onto the floor for a vote. In view of the support given to it by the American Medical Association and other competent national bodies, there can be no doubt that the House membership, afforded an opportunity, would vote to give the United States its rightful place among the nations of the world in the fight for world health.

Secondary Boycotts

A trial examiner for the National Labor Relations Board has ruled that peaceful picketing of an employer in order to induce him to stop doing business with another employer is an illegal practice. One of the important objectives of the Taft-Hartley Act is the banning of certain labor practices that by common consent have come to be regarded as unfair and liable to result in grave abuses. Among these outlawed practices is the secondary boycott, which involves putting pressure on third parties to induce them not to patronize or do business with the offending employers.

There are many variants of the secondary boycott, but union secondary boycotts have as a rule, though not invariably, been held to be unlawful by the courts. In the present instance the question at issue did not concern the legality of a secondary boycott, which is unquestionably illegal under the Taft-Hartley Act, but rather the legality of resorting to peaceful picketing to enforce an illegal form of boycotting. It seems to us that there can be only one answer to that query—the one given by the trial examiner. For picketing, however peaceful it may be, can do great injury to the business of picketed concerns. Moreover, if it were to be tolerated as a device for giving effect to a secondary boycott, the prohibitions of the Taft-Hartley Act would be largely vitiated.

The present case is only one of many charges filed against unions for engaging in secondary boycotts. The controversial issues raised by differing interpretations of the new labor law will not be authoritatively decided until the National Labor Relations Board itself and the courts have passed on key cases. But employers and employes are rapidly acquiring a working knowledge of their rights and obligations under the Taft-Hartley law that will act as a deterrent to indulgence in unfair practices in the future.

Promotion Deserved

There are probably few individual items in the District budget that command more enthusiastic support than the proposal to advance Capt. Rhoda Milliken to an inspectorship in the Police Department. Captain Milliken has the confidence and good will of the entire city. Over a period of many years she has served effectively and intelligently as head of the Women's Bureau. Her achievements extend over a wide field of social improvement and community service as well as law enforcement. Yet there are indications that she may not be granted the pay increase and promotion for which the appropriations bill makes allowance.

The proposal to promote Captain Milliken came from Major Barrett, the superintendent of police, and was approved by the Commissioners, the Budget Bureau and the White House. Before the House Appropriations Subcommittee, however, Commissioner John Russell Young indicated his opposition and Major Barrett recommended that the item be stricken out. Actually funds for the new position remained in the budget as approved by the House, but the Commissioner's attitude suggests that the promotion may not be made. We suspect that if the communiy could speak on the issue, it would bring in an overwhelming demand that the promotion be given to Captain Milliken as originally planned.

TRAIL IN TIME

I saw him on the river bank
With silver dripping from his flank,

With silver in the wary eye
That watched a tall moon turn the sky.

His feet were marble, and the dew
Patterned each small shining shoe;

Slant moon and tumbling stars and white
Tall deer with eyes like frozen light.

He did not stir and the trees were still
As a cameo scene on a carven hill.

So it remains in the mind's long hall
Clear as a frozen waterfall,

And if some winter I should find
The same track backward through my mind

The only change would be that sound
Lay hushed in snow on the whitened ground.

Enlistment Bonuses

The controversy over the draft and UMT goes on unabated. To what extent politics dominates the thinking in Congress is, of course, a very delicate question. The gentlemen of the Rules Committee, who have our destinies in charge, are, we may be assured, far wiser than the general run of mankind. Their latest proposal to offer bonuses for volunteer enlistment calls forth the highest admiration. Can their ingenuity be too highly praised?

Mercenaries were ever the best soldiers. This was true in '76, and it is true today. Why should the general population become responsive and responsible for their own safety when, for a price, they can engage the most efficiently trained soldiers to render first-aid in this age of bombed-out and irradiated communities? It were an affront to reason.

Therefore, cease the controversy, hire the soldiers and turn them loose to jingle a coin or two! It were sweet music to our ears, comforting and reassuring us that, come hell or high water, jet plane or atom bomb, we are secure. The formula has been perfected; the rule is made. We can but gaze and wonder at the genius which has concocted our safety

Regional Schools

Senate Joint Resolution 191, giving the consent of Congress to the compact between the Southern States on regional education (graduate, technical and professional), is on the Senate calendar. Its companion piece in the House has been reported favorably by the House Judiciary Committee and Chairman Michener advises that it is likely to be acted upon by the House shortly.

Those who are attacking this proposal give the impression that it is something trumped up to cover an emergency. They may be answered effectively by a publication issued in 1938, the American Council on Education Studies, Series I, Volume II, Number 5, entitled, "Cooperation and Coordination in Higher Education: An Exploratory Study of the Problems of Cooperation, Coordination, and Regionalization in Higher Education." This study takes the history of the movement back to 1934.

Please permit me to add the following to the history of this idea, which is now being heralded as one of the important advances of the century in its field. The excerpt is from the second of a series of nonpartisan sketches of the candidates for the Governorship of Michigan, appearing on October 23, 1914, in the Lansing State Journal.

"During the primary campaign (Chase S.) Osborn was misquoted to a considerable extent concerning his attitude toward Michigan Agricultural College. He said that he favored a plan to make MAC, the Houghton College of Mines and the University of Michigan into one big university to be the greatest institution of learning in the world.

"By this he did not mean the amalgamation of the three colleges into a single unit. He would not move the Michigan Agricultural College to Ann Arbor or bring the College of Mines to East Lansing. He stands for a plan to put the engineering departments of the three schools all under one roof and to place the forestry courses of the university and the agricultural college in one school. By this Osborn points out that a duplication of expense could be avoided and each institution could strengthen its other departments without conflict.

"'By applying scientific business principles I would make all our State educational institutions bigger and better and conduct them at less cost,' said Osborn."

The South is leading the way to a long overdue reform. This resolution marks the beginning of the end of incoordination of educational programs. It is a hopeful sign that the South and the Nation are growing up.

Royalty's Support

England has voted to Princess Elizabeth the stupendous sum of $200,000 yearly income. The maintenance and perpetuity of this royalty costs huge sums.

However, we have no quarrel with royalty's way of life and it would be of no concern to us were it not that England is in our debt for the fathers, sons and husbands of our people who have died, and worse, to help save her. Under the Marshall Plan she receives more than any nation. Then as long as she asks, expects and accepts money which is earned by the taxpayers of this country, it certainly cannot rightly be spent in support of idleness, even her own royalty.

Stopping Thieves

Why a fuss about gambling in this city, when you are afraid to leave your home, or walk the streets at night for fear of being robbed? Why not try and stop thievery first? It doesn't seem that judges are willing to fine or punish a thief enough when caught. Catch the thief and make it hard for him—he will not be easy on you.

Public Golf Courses

We feel that the article by Elsie Carper in your March 7 edition captioned, "New Nine-Hole Golf Course Ready by Memorial Day," misrepresented the true facts concerning the public golf courses.

Her statement, "With the opening of the new course on Memorial Day, S. G. Loeffler, Inc., will be operating four 'white' public courses, and one Negro public course," was both erroneous and misleading.

Last summer, along with several friends, we attempted to play tne Rock Creek Golf Course. We were able to play the first four holes of the course uninterrupted except for a few derogatory remarks thrown our way. However, on the fifth hole we ran into a well organized plot arranged to discourage any further play on our part. After several threats we abondoned our attempt.

We later arranged an appointment with the office of the director of Federal Parks and Playgrounds in the Department of Interior to get clarification on this matter. We found that all public courses in Washington operated by the Loeffler Corp. are located on Federal property, and as such are operated for the enjoyment of all citizens with no discrimination.

After our consultation, we went back and played the course on several occasisons, without the slightest interference.

Tel Aviv Journey

Someone writes a column called "News Behind the News." I am one of those Americans who wants my news straight and right out front. And I believe it is the responsibility of journalists, reporters, editors and publishers all over this country to give us our news that way.

In particular, I refer to the recent publication and broadcast of the news of a Jewish attack on the "all-Arab City of Jaffa" during the past few days. Surely such a statement without more does serious injustice to the truth. My husband and I were in Jerusalem for three weeks this past January and two days in Tel Aviv in the beginning of February, so what I write is truth based on facts.

The "all-Arab City of Jaffa" borders on the all-Jewish City of Tel Aviv. For the past half year Arab snipers have been shooting away at Tel Aviv from the top of a tall minaret in Jaffa. The beautiful board walk along the sea in Tel Aviv is completely deserted because the minaret commands a clear view of the whole expanse. I tried walking along there myself and had to duck bullets. Again, while purchasing some bananas from a street vendor in the heart of Tel Aviv I heard a queer, dull squshy noise: two bullets landed right in the banana cart sending the pulpy fruit flying. And this was in February, before things got serious.

It would have been a simple matter for the British to disarm the few Arabs in Jaffa. But they didn't want to and they didn't allow the Haganah to do it. Thus, needless waste of both British and Jewish lives.

It is not sufficient to report merely a Jewish attack on Jaffa; the significant facts of the Arab sniping from Jaffa should and must accompany such a report.

You may be interested in a few other experiences my husband and I "enjoyed" during our stay in the Holy Land. In order to reach Lydda, the airport right outside Tel Aviv, we had to travel in armored trucks from Jerusalem to Tel Aviv. In normal times, Egged (Jewish) buses go every 10 minutes from Jerusalem to Tel Aviv. Now it is considered fine if one a day gets through.

After waiting four hours in the bus station while Haganah scouts went out to see if the way just ahead were safe, about 60 of us climbed aboard the bus (which, I should add, had been armorplated by Jews in Jerusalem). The only ventilation was through two 2-inch square holes on either side of the bus and one in the rear; the purpose of these holes was to permit Haganah youngsters to shoot out at attacking Arabs.

As soon as we started, our two protectors, a girl aged 19 and a boy of 20, both tall and blonde, began assembling Sten guns, the parts of which they drew from innocent looking shopping bags. About 10 minutes outside of Jerusalem the bus stopped. A British searching party was ahead. The British are allowed to search men but not women; accordingly, and with amazing rapidity, the Haganah kids disassembled their Jewish-made weapons and started passing them out rapidly to the women in the bus.

One pregnant woman laughingly hid a huge piece in her ample bosom. I was handed several small round metal objects. I stuck them in the pockets of my slacks and heard my husband whispering for God's sake to sit quietly lest I unloose the pins of the hand grenades. The man on my left told me the last time they'd made the trip they took along 15 bottles of beer which induced the British soldiers to abandon their search. Well, we got through that all right, but it wasn't seven minutes later that I heard the sound of hail on the walls of our bus. Even worse was the brutal noise of our own Sten guns shooting back. One of the hot shells falling inside the bus burnt the arm of the only child aboard, a 6-year-old little girl.

Free Europe And Palestine

By Andre Visson

U. S. Responsibilities

AT FIRST sight, there hardly seems any connection between the Western European U n i o n and Palestine. The status of the Western European Union was agreed upon by the five western European countries on St. Patrick's Day in Brussels. The status for Palestine continues to be the subject of bloody strife between the Arabs and the Jews.

But there unquestionably is a common key to these two problems. The solution which the western Europeans have found in Brussels has very little, if any, practical value unless it is endorsed and supported by the United States. And the solution which the Arabs and the Jews seem unable to find for Palestine will never be found unless the United States helps to find it and to enforce it.

In other words, the men in the White House, in the State Department and in Congress who are responsible for American foreign policy hold in their hands the future of both western Europe and Palestine. It is indeed a very great responsibility, and one can easily understand that nobody feels happy about it in Washington. Many people do not like to accept such a tremendous responsibility. Others do not see how they can either meet it or escape it.

What kind of military assistance and guaranty can the United States now give to the Western European Union? What kind of status for Palestine can the United States recommend to the Arabs and to the Jews, and if necessary, force them to accept?

THE PROBLEM of giving military protection to western Europe is certainly more important. If we can this year give to western Europe a military guaranty strong enough to impress the Soviet leaders, we may eliminate the danger of a new world war for many years to come. But the problem of finding a satisfactory status for Palestine is more urgent. If we do not find some solution before May 15, when the British begin to withdraw from Palestine, we run the risk of serious complications in the Near East—a region in which the Soviets are expected to increase their pressure if they find that they cannot cross our resistance line in western Europe without precipitating a world conflagration.

There is still an understandable desire in Washington to pass the responsibility for Palestine on to the British. The reasoning is that since they were originally responsible for the present tragic mess in Palestine, they should at least share with us the responsibility for finding a solution for this problem.

The proposal for a confederation of Jewish Palestine and the Kingdom of Trans-Jordan that would take over the Arab part of Palestine, has an appeal for many. To begin with, the British would thus be able to maintain their strategic positions in the Middle East, since King Abdullah of Trans-Jordan has all these years been their devoted protege—not to say their puppet.

A Trans-Jordan-Palestine confederation may also be acceptable to the moderate Jewish elements in Palestine, and to a great many Americans whose main aspiration is to see peace restored to the Holy Land. It would certainly be acceptable to Abdullah himself, who has never given up the hope of seeing his puppet state of Trans-Jordan grow in size and importance. But it is most questionable whether a Trans-Jordan-Palestinian confederation would be accepted by the rulers of Syria and Iraq and, especially by Ibn Saud of Saudi Arabia who has never had much respect or love for Abdullah and who would accuse him of betraying the Arab cause.

WHILE DISCUSSION of Palestine goes on at Lake Success, and the fighting goes on in the Holy Land, Moscow is not concealing her delight at the embarrassment of the United States and the weakening of the United Nations.

The American position on Palestine is, indeed, one of the saddest chapters in American foreign policy. In our desire to find a satisfactory compromise for all the parties involved, we have succeeded in irritating the British, antagonizing the Jews and the Arabs, and undermining confidence in America's consistency and wisdom—all to the delight of the Soviets. America's vote for partition, the reversal of American policy on Palestine in favor of a trusteeship, and the confusion created by the recent appointment of General Hilldring, who is supposed to favor partition—conflicting moves all made within a few months—have not contributed to international confidence in American leadership.

True, the Soviet shadow over the Middle East and the shadow of the November elections over the White House hampered the finding of a satisfactory solution for Palestine. True also, America's friends in the United Nations did not facilitate the task. When in February the Security Council took up the question of partition, Britain, France and China refused to admit that the Palestine situation threatened the peace. And in the absence of agreement among the five veto-holding powers it was impossible to gather a force for maintaining order. When later, in April, the United States suggested a trusteeship, no other country supported the American proposal with an offer of troops.

"Zionism has become an exclusively American affair, despite the British mandate on Palestine." This crude statement by the French paper, La Tribune Economique, appears to sum up the trend to place the whole responsibility for the Palestine mess at America's door.

Matter of Fact

Reds in Trieste Oddly Subside

By Stewart Alsop

TRIESTE, May 8.—Something has happened here in the last few days which may have a significance extending well beyond the constricted borders of the miscalled "Free Territory of Trieste." The event was a sudden shift of the Communist party line. It deserved the closest study, for the shifts of the party line are the best clews to the strategy of the Kremlin.

Until last week the Trieste Communist press, subsidized in part by Yugoslavia's Marshal Tito, was talking very tough indeed. To the usual shrill abuse of "Anglo-American police and military brutality" was added a barely concealed threat. The Communist papers shrieked that "the workers" would "never permit" the Anglo-American outrages.

More specifically, there were repeated appeals for mass demonstration in the Piazza Unita, in the center of the city. The Allied Military Government had ruled that, for a period including May day, Communist demonstrations must be confined to another section of the city. Thus the authority of the military government was directly challenged.

In Defense of Terror

BUT IF the public Communist line was tough, the private line—the line taken behind closed doors—was even tougher. There is no doubt that plans were laid, and orders issued, for a showdown with the Anglo-American authority. It is known that one of the Trieste Communist Party's satraps sent the word down the line that May 1 was to mark the beginning of a violent campaign to undermine that authority.

In the lower echelons, in the Communist cells, "agitprops" and "activists" explained the necessity for violence. The Italian elections, they argued, had finally shown that the party could never come to power except by force. The cases of Hungary and Czechoslovakia were used to underline this conclusion.

In those countries, it was pointed out, the "workers" had seized power from the "reactionaries" and the Communist Party was thereafter certain of a majority in any elections. Thus, the Trieste Communists must be ready to take up arms, and to "break reactionary heads."

Moreover, preparations for transforming tough talk into tough action were undertaken. In Trieste's Communist section (known, as in every city in Europe, as "Little Stalingrad"), sleeping quarters were assigned for contingents of Slav thugs. These were to be infiltrated from the Yugoslav zone, to reinforce the native Trieste Communists in the "direct action" which had been planned. There is little wonder that only last week real trouble in Trieste seemed more than possible.

Very Calm for May

YET ON April 29, observers noted with interest, the Communist press suddenly began to sing small. The abuse of the "Anglo-American imperialists" automatically persisted. But the threats of open defiance of the Allied Military Government were suddenly absent.

On May 1 there was the usual demonstration, complete with speeches, banners, scantily clad anti-Fascist females and even more scantily clad Communist athletes. But the demonstration was carefully confined to the area assigned to the Communists. Nothing more lethal than a bottle of red ink was thrown.

As such things go, the show was a flop, dismal and spottily attended. Moreover, in the days which have since passed, days which were to mark the beginning of the all-out campaign against the Anglo-American government, a total, if faintly nervous, quiet has reigned in Trieste. Obviously, the Communist campaign of violence has either been abandoned or indefinitely postponed.

There are several purely local interpretations which can be placed upon this sudden docility, this unexpected mildness, of the Trieste Communists. For example, the higher headquarters of the Trieste Communist Party is known to be located in Belgrade, Marshal Tito's capital. It may be that the tough talk here was a private venture of the Yugoslav chieftain's. He may have wished to feel out the Anglo-American occupation authorities in Trieste, hoping that they would show weakness and give him a chance for another grab at Trieste.

It is a theory generally held among experts that the Kremlin's major satraps like Tito are given a certain limited freedom of action, with the strict proviso that they do not involve themselves in serious trouble. The reversal of Trieste Communist policy would then be explained on the basis that Tito was frightened off by the obvious firmness of the able American Gen. Bryant Moore and British Gen. Terence Airey.

Evidence From Italy

IT IS ALSO possible, however—perhaps even probable—that what has happened in Trieste reflects a major shift in the Communist line in all of western Europe. Weight is given to this interpretation by the fact that a similar sequence of events has taken place in Italy; tough talk, preparation for tough action, and then, after repeated visits by Communist Leader Palmiro Togliatti to the Soviet Embassy, nothing.

The suspicion naturally arises that the realists in the Kremlin have come to the conclusion that direct action by the Soviet Union or by the indigenous Communist parties to achieve Soviet domination of Europe is now certain to fail.

If this is correct—if the Communist party line has been genuinely changed—we are entering a period sharply different in political atmosphere from the recent past.

Ike Has Company in Gravy Bowl

By Drew Pearson

THE Republicans were right in calling the turn on General Eisenhower's use of Army personnel after his retirement from the Army. However, it's interesting that the man who called the turn was Congressman A. L. Miller of Nebraska, spearhead of the MacArthur-for-President movement. These boys don't like Eisenhower.

Also, it's significant that other high-ranking generals and admirals have continued to use Army-Navy personnel after their retirement. For instance, Admiral Ernie King, now retired, used not only a Navy office but Navy clerical personnel to write a book.

And if all the money spent on General John J. Pershing during his retirement were added up, it would total over a million. Pershing, though retired for years, continues to be the second highest paid Government official, drawing a salary of around $26,000 a year. Only the President of the United States tops him. In addition, Pershing has a colonel as an aide, plus other Army personnel, and for years has lived at Walter Reed Hospital.

Eisenhower has a staff of three assigned to him at Columbia—Maj. Robert L. Schultz, an aide; WAC Warrant Officer Margaret Hayes, and Master Sergt. Leonard Dry, a chauffeur. He also draws a salary of $15,751 a year for life from the Army in addition to his salary as president of Columbia University.

Note—Pershing, though appointed by Woodrow Wilson, is the son-in-law of a Republican chairman of the Senate Appropriations Committee, the late Francis E. Warren of Wyoming. The Republicans now consider Eisenhower a Democrat.

The Social Whirl

UNDERSECRETARY of Commerce William C. Foster was having heavy conferences with Dave Austin, vice president of United States Steel; Admiral Ben Moreell of Jones and Laughlin, and other steel tycoons, when a messenger brought in a note for the Undersercretary.

"It's very important," he said. "I'm to wait for a reply."

The meeting came to a standstill while Foster read the note—then reread it.

"Take a look at that note," he suggested to the steel tycoons.

It was a message from Foster's wife, explaining that she had lost her key to the liquor closet. She wanted the Undersecretary of Commerce to do something about it before a cocktail party to which she had invited guests that afternoon.

Note—Foster sent his wife a duplicate key, went on talking about the steel situation.

Rep. Gearhart's 'Sisters'

DEMOCRAT Congressmen were decidedly irked with their Republican colleague from California, Bud Gearhart, for demanding that hearings on the continuation of Cordell Hull's reciprocal trade treaties be held in secret. But their ire was nothing compared with the resentment of a group of women.

Gearhart had made the mistake of referring to them as "sewing circle sisters" who wanted to make "State Department statements" about the reciprocal trade treaties. The "sisters" just happen to be members of some of the most important and respected women's organizations in the country.

They include Dr. Bessie Randolph of the American Association of University Women; Mrs. Arthur F. Anderson of the YWCA; Mrs. Joseph M. Welt of the National Council of Jewish Women, and Miss Rose Schneiderman of the National Women's Trade Union League.

Indignant at the Congressman's decision to hold secret hearings on a matter affecting the entire Nation, the "sewing circle sisters" got off a hot telegram to the Ways and Means Committee. Meanwhile the committeemen themselves were having a fiery debate behind closed doors over the secrecy.

"This is an important matter in which the public is greatly interested," protested North Carolina's Bob Doughton. "The evidence should be heard in open hearings."

"We don't have time for full-dress hearings," replied Gearhart. "If the House doesn't act fast and get this legislation to the Senate by May 15, the President may not be able to sign it before June 12, when the State Department's authority to make these trade agreements with other nations expires."

"It wouldn't take any longer to hear testimony in open sessions and you know it," snapped Doughton. "Besides, the State Department prefers that the hearings be public."

"I would say that you are in a poor position to criticize the State Department for star chamber proceedings when you're trying to conduct one yourself," said Democrat Aime Forand of Rhode Island.

However, the Republicans supported Gearhart. The Democrats and the women's organizations which wanted to testify were voted down. The trade hearings will be held in secret.

A Lub-dub Amplifier

By Alton L. Blakeslee
Associated Press Science Writer.

OMAHA, May 8.—A new electric ear hears sounds from the human heart never heard before and offers a new approach toward controlling heart disease.

The machine turns the sounds of a beating heart into beams of light. Then it takes pictures of the sounds, recording them as squiggles on a roll of paper.

Designed by Drs. Lowell F. Dunn, Walter Rahm, jr., and Albert Freed at the University of Nebraska College of Medicine, it is far more sensitive and accurate than a physician with a stethoscope. It tells more than electrocardiographs, the machines that record the heart's electrical waves.

Sounds are picked up by a crystal microphone and turned into beams of light flashing across three cathode ray tubes. One tube shows the darting flashes of low frequency sounds, another shows the middle-frequency sounds and the third shows the fast vibrations.

The developed film shows three separate wiggly lines and a fourth line made by an electric timer that shows the instants when the heart is pumping or relaxing. These pictures can be compared with the heart sounds later in life or during an illness to learn exactly what changes have occurred. This may make it possible to spot heart diseases earlier.

Murmurs Are Tricky

HEART sounds range 10 to 800 vibrations per second. The human ear cannot hear those below 30, and at 30 they have to be loud to be audible. The machine can pick up even the slowest vibrations.

Changes in the low, dull sounds might give warnings of changes in the strength of the heart long before the human ear could perceive them, Dunn and Freed said.

The heart beats with a lub-dub sound, known as the first and second sounds. The first one is made chiefly by the heart muscle contracting and by the doors or valves opening. The second is that of the valves closing.

With a heart murmur, there is another sound. It may be a lub-swish-dub. The murmur may come between the first and second sounds, or between the second and first ones. Often it is difficult for the human ear to tell just when it starts or how long it lasts.

Murmurs may be due to damage to the heart, or to other causes which are not serious. In children especially, they may be heard in perfectly sound hearts. It's often vital to know whether they do mean organic trouble, and whether a child should avoid strenuous play.

Rheumatics Tested

THE murmurs cause special kinds of wiggles to appear on the lines of the electric ear. It can show the start, duration and frequency of the murmur.

With this information the physicians have begun working out a system which promises to show fairly accurately whether a murmur comes from a damaged heart or a non-serious cause.

They are studying dozens of children who have had rheumatic fever, the most serious disease of childhood. It often leaves scars on the heart valves, with resultant murmurs.

The electric ear is a large machine, in its present form, and isn't something a physician can carry with him. But it will be a new tool for hospitals, schools and Army and Navy medical centers. All that the patient has to do is to lie still.

GOLDFISH will cruise more than twice as fast in a 68-degree temperature than in 41 degrees, it is reported in the journal of the Fisheries Research Board of Canada by F. E. J. Frey and J. S. Hart of the University of Toronto.

In water of 41 degrees, the goldfish cruised about 40 feet a minute, or less than half a mile an hour. At 68 degrees, they cruised 100 feet a minute, or more than a mile an hour. Above 95 degrees, the crusing speed declined to 75 feet a minute.

Grants of more than $500,000 for research on heart disease in 1948 are announced by the Life Insurance Medical Research Fund. The fund is supported by 149 United States and Canadian life insurance companies

Thirty-one hospitals, medical colleges and special research clinics in 18 States and Canada will receive a total of $484,790, with 14 individual doctors receiving $52,000 in postgraduate fellowships. The awards raised to $1,800,000 the grants for research in various lines since the fund was organized in December, 1945.

Wolves Find a Way Out of Red Cordon

MOSCOW (AP).—The favorite method of hunting wolves in Russia is to make a ring of red flags around the place where the wolves are thought to be hiding. A small gap is left in the ring and here the hunters wait to open fire when the wolves make for the gap.

For hundreds of years this method of hunting has been successful for the wolves feared to run through the cordon of waving red flags. But now some educated wolves in the Moscow area have learned to run through the flag ring and thus avoid the hunters.

It is essential to kill the wolves, says "Evening Moscow," because they prey on elks of which there are nearly 3000 in the Moscow province forest areas.

What National Health Program Means to You

participation of the entire community in a medical program that is both preventive and curative.

These councils should emphasize the primary importance of health education, the basic importance of local control of health programs, the necessity of removing inequities in medical facilities as between communities and between economic groups in the community, and the economic values to be derived from lowering high death rates, decreasing incidence of disease and accidents. Health cannot be achieved merely through a medical approach, as adequate housing, a living wage, good working conditions, education, recreation and other facilities, are all involved in physical and mental well-being.

Yet until adequate services for local health are established throughout the Nation, there will be failure in every other area of endeavor. Local health units, a retail point of distribution for complete medical care, are the basic need. Forty million people at present are not reached by such a program and many others are dissatisfied.

The lack of these retail stores for health services now creates the heavy load on medical care. The public has the right to expect that these local preventive and referral centers shall be decently housed on Main Street with a plate-glass front, not tucked away, as they often are now, in a cellar room of the courthouse or jail. Moreover, medical education and a wide variety of research must go forward to put new goods for sale on the shelves of these local retail health stores and keep them up to date.

Rural Services Few

THE various services that should be for sale in the local health centers would require:

1. Mechanism for tabulating vital statistics and interpreting their significance.
2. Control of communicable diseases.
3. Sanitation.
4. Diagnostic and laboratory procedures.
5. Hygiene of human reproduction.
6. Information on health education and laws of living.

Such a program involves the need for more factual information as to how many doctors, nurses, other medical personnel and hospital facilities are actually needed in each community. At present local health departments meeting the minimum standards are available to less than half of the Nation, and two-sevenths of the population, largely in rural areas, have no local health units whatever.

Today people clamor for security, security for the family, the community and the Nation. The most important factors in that security are good physical health and stable emotions that will produce strong, healthy and happy citizens.

The mental health specialists, whose work is essential to establishing this general sense of securiey, called attention to the fact that their profession is more tragically understaffed than any other. The need for increased training of psychiatrists and ancillary workers can be gauged if we realize that 62 per cent of the inmates of veterans' hospitals are psychiatric cases. The dental division is no less emphatic in demanding more dentists and technical assistants to prevent diseases by early and adequate attention to children. A special program for child care is essential, preferably in close association with the school system.

But the greatest needs are for more doctors and nurses, now that public health services must be expanded. Increased population, increasing Federal, State and local programs, and increased health consciousness of the people, have accelerated the demand for expanded medical care. The estimates as to how many additional medical schools and doctors may be required are uncertain. But whatever steps are taken to extend medical training, the high quality of our present medical education must and will be maintained.

Problem of Education

THE committee on personnel recognized that more Negro physicians should be trained. This problem is part of the larger problem of improving the opportunities for the education of Negroes in general, if the number of Negroes qualified to enter medical schools is to meet the acute demand. Here will be the area where follow-up work will be urgent, if this recommendation is to be quickly and effectively implemented.

The need for more hospital beds was definitely estimated at 265,000 general, 291,000 mental, 85,000 tuberculosis and 245,000 chronic diseases. This deficit, it was conceded, cannot be met within the ten years' limit set by the President. The Hospital Survey and Construction Act was praised as a sound approach to the problem, but the rural delegates insisted that it should be amended so that the poorer communities could benefit by it.

But however efficient the local health officers, health councils and health centers may be in bringing medical care to the local community, they cannot solve the whole medical problem of our people. Some form of prepayment plan or insurance, the doctors and lay representatives agreed, is essential.

Different views were expressed as to methods of effectuating the principle of prepayment or insurance. Some believe it can be achieved through voluntary plans. Others believe that a National Health Insurance Plan is necessary.

Prepayment Is Basic

BECAUSE of their importance, it is best to repeat verbatim the unanimous conclusions of the Medical Care Section in regard to health insurance:

1. Adequate medical service for the prevention of illness, the care and relief of sickness and the promotion of a high level of physical, mental and social health should be available to all without regard to race, color, creed, residence or economic status.

2. The principle of contributory health insurance should be the basic method of financing medical care for the large majority of the American people, in order to remove the burden of unpredictable sickness costs, abolish the economic barrier to adequate medical services and avoid the indignities of a "means test."

3. Health insurance should be accompanied by such use of tax resources as may be necessary to provide additional: (a) services to persons or groups for whom special public responsibility is acknowledged, and (b) services not available under prepayment or insurance.

4. Voluntary prepayment group health plans, embodying group practice and providing comprehensive service, offer to their members the best of modern medical care. Such plans furthermore are the best available means at this time of bringing about improved distribution of medical care, particularly in rural areas. Hence such plans should be encouraged by every means.

5. The people have the right to establish voluntary insurance plans on a cooperative basis, and legal restrictions upon such right (other than those necessary to assure proper standards and qualifications), now existing in a number of States, should be removed.

Proportion Too Low

IT WAS recognized that the insurance plans, as well as those for local health organization, for the training of additional personnel, the construction of hospitals, and the expansion of research work, call for State and Federal aid of huge proportions. But relative to other expenditures in the national econbmy, too little is now expended in the preservation and maintenance of health.

Recognition and acceptance by the people as a whole of the values to be attained by health must precede the drive for the increase of these expenditures. The State and community planning councils will be the best means of bringing about this general recognition and acceptance. Only insofar as this is attained will public funds be forthcoming in increased volume at the Federal, State and local levels, and private funds through increased expenditure by families and individuals, by employers of labor and other sources.

Nobody dared, probably nobody could estimate, what the total bill will be if the program of this National Health Assembly is to become a reality. But Dr. Louis I. Dublin, who had been influential in urging upon Mr. Ewing and the President that this assembly should be convened, encouraged the departing delegates by asking the practical question: "What is the value of a man and how much is it wortht to save him for his family and community."

He arrived at the answer by pointing out that when the family wage earner is incapacitated or prematurely killed by disease, the cost of supporting that family is statistically demonstrated to be about $35,000 if the family income was $2500 a year.

When the head of the family is incapacitated, his care represents an additional economic burden to society of varying dimensions.

We have already reduced this economic waste by conquering many diseases, but the total cost of unnecessary deaths and disabilities still represents a staggering sum. In comparison, the price of adequate health measures as outlined by the National Assembly, will be very small, to say nothing of the productivity in material, mental and spiritual areas that will be added unto us, all of which are forces basic to a free economy and a democratic social structure.

Immediately after the final session of the National Health Assembly, the executive committee met with Mr. Ewing and decided to continue the assembly and its committees but postponed the details of a permanent organization until a subsequent meeting.

Women Getting A New Deal At Penn College

By Fred M. Hechinger

PITTSBURGH, PA., May 8.—Many women are wives and mothers; all are citizens. Pennsylvania College for Women wastes no time on the marriage versus career argument. Under a new curriculum the girls of today receive "education for tomorrow" to serve in home, profession, community and the world.

In 1945 the faculty deliberated how to adjust general education for women to the needs of a changed world. A complex society made academic planlessness obsolete, demanded new direction and purpose.

After painstaking discussion the entire faculty agreed to put the new curriculum to the practical test, and by now all freshmen and sophomores are participating. "Its purpose is to create a community of students with the framework of common background," said Dr. Paul R. Anderson, president of PCW. "It must prepare young women for the many opportunities they now share with men as well as for those fields which remain predominantly feminine."

The first year all girls attend a special course in "Human Development and Behavior," ranging from hygiene and home-making to the study of the human mind and emotions. It involves psychology, domestic science, biology, and—as in all courses of the new curriculum—members of the various faculties cooperate across divisional lines. Occasionally a little baby is imported into the classroom to serve as guinea pig and "guest speaker."

Student at Pennsylvania College for Women observes reactions of child in course in Human Development and Behavior

Combines Sciences

IN THE second "area," "The Natural World," a two-year-course, combines the sciences. Successful living in our age requires a fundamental understanding of the universe.

The third sphere, "Social Relationships," cuts across the social sciences. It includes the history of Western civilization, but adds the cultures of Russia, the Far East and South America. The historical light of the past illuminates the confused present.

"We examine the disasters which felled previous civilizations and find that they were not inevitable. Then we look at the present scene," explained History Chairman Laberta Dysart.

In the fourth area of "The Arts," experts of five departments help students to familiarize themselves with literature, drama, art, music, and the dance. In addition to formal lectures and informal workshops the girls are given a weekly list of "events" in Pittsburgh. From it they select a required number, go to movies, concerts, galleries and theaters, and hand in critical reviews.

Flexible Curriculums

IN SPITE of its unique requirements, the new curriculum is flexible. By passing exemption exams, girls may drop any of the required subjects. No foreign langage is prescribed and mathematics can be omitted after completion of a basic test.

Parodies of the new curriculum have invaded the class plays and students' songs. But one of the seniors, not yet part of the plan, told me: "I am voluntarily taking 'Modern Society' and I wish I could start all over again under the new curriculum. It all leads somewhere, beyond the general exam."

That examination is in itself a part of the new plan. Required during the senior year, it replaces most of the departmental tests and gathers the loose ends of four years' study into a demonstration of coordinated achievement.

During the senior year the girls complete their last required course, "Philosophy of Life." It is a sort of academic dessert, combining the study of the great philosophers with critical evaluation based on the varied experiences of the core curriculum. Then the girls will subconsiously begin to shape their own philosophical outlook.

In addition the final year includes an individual project under the guidance of a personal tutor. The result may either be a formal thesis or an original creation of literature, music, or painting, but the author must "defend" her masterpiece in front of a committee of experts.

Casteless Society

SETTING the atmosphere for PCW's new community of knowledge is a casteless society, strengthened by the absence of clubs and sororities. "In a college of 500 girls there is no reason for artificial barriers in the name of sociability," I was told. Instead of hostile hazing an "assigned" big sister waits for the freshman during the first week of shy exploration.

Does the new curriculum work out in practice? One dormitory "house-mother" testified: "Formerly the girls had most of their friends within their own study sections. Now there is no division of interests and knowledge. Even Sunday breakfast is a sort of seminar."

Skeptics remind us that, after all, most girls will "just get married." One of the committee members answered: "Marriage is itself a career. It involves responsibility for the upkeep of the home, for the care of finances, the education of children (and husband!) and a mature understanding of the world."

The old "domestic science" is no longer enough for female citizens. But to allay undue fears: PCW girls baked a strawberry pie which I shall long remember with enthusiasm.

Crosby Book Is Right for Disk Jockeys

"THE Incredible Crosby," by Harry Ulanov, editor of Metronome magazine, is must reading for disk jockeys. The remaining populous may take it or leave it.

The book's not a biography, since Bing Crosby keeps his private life private. No matter how hard columnists and press agents try to learn personal secrets about Bing and his family, none has slipped out—at least not enough to form a fitting story about the man.

The most we learn about Bing is of his preshow business days while he still lived with his parents in Spokane, Wash. The first third of Ulanov's book deals with those little incidents that relatives and hometown friends of famous persons will remember forever, but that nobody else is concerned with. Here the author takes extra pains with what lines Bing, then Harry Lillis Crosby, said in what school play, and things like that. This section of the book even the disk jockeys may skip.

Next comes a section on Bing's early show business days. We read about each band or rhythm group he was associated with, each record he made, each of his early pictures—who produced and directed them, a list of the cast and musical score—and each song Bing sang.

The third part of the book deals with Crosby's super-big-time days. This includes quotes from his benefit radio shows, a recount of the plot of "Going My Way," along with the words—verse and chorus—of the movie's songs, and a lot of other items Crosby fans are bound to have heard several times before.

In a word, the book's boring—no continuity, no plot, no love, nothing but stray facts. But there is a redeeming feature. Each copy of "The Incredible Crosby" is suffixed with "A Crosby Discography" that lists all Bing's records, serial numbers of each and names of other performers who support the maestro. No disk jockey or consciencious record collector should be without this.

Tedlock Study Fine Bibliography On D. H. Lawrence

THE FRIEDA LAWRENCE COLLECTION OF D. H. LAWRENCE MANUSCRIPTS, a Descriptive Bibliography. E. W. Tedlock, Jr. University of New Mexico Press. 333 pp. $3.50.

To the ever-growing literature about D. H. Lawrence, E. W. Tedlock of the University of New Mexico faculty has added a volume that will be a cornerstone.

In his introduction Tedlock explains that he has tried to describe each manuscript, give initial publication dates, trace the origin and development of the text to the time of publication and compare the manuscript with an authorized printed text.

He has done all these things, and in doing them has given much information of use to students and future biographers of Lawrence.

Inevitably much interest will center on the three versions of "Lucy Chatterley's Lover," with the changes of structure involved.

Nor will those who appreciate life's little ironies miss this one—a sober, scholarly discussion in a book published by a university press of a work that in its unexpurgated form is still verboten by the Federal authorities.

Art Notes

Tapestries Will Not Be Shown Here

IN CHICAGO attendance at the French tapestry exhibition at the Art Institute has topped the New York showing, where during the first month an average of 10,000 visitors a week came to the Metropolitan, as against 15,000 in the Midwestern city. The Art Institute cabled French museum authorities for permission to extend the display through May 16, which has been granted.

According to present plans, the tapestries will not be shown elsewhere in the United States. When the show closes in Chicago, this magnificent textile collection, the finest ever assembled for export, will be sent to Montreal to be immediately loaded aboard the French battleship Jeanne d'Arc. On its return to France, the tapestries will be returned to the castles, cathedrals, museums and private collections from which they were borrowed.

They were sent here by the French government, and it is a great pity that some arrangement could not have been made for the collection to have been shown in the United States Capital.

Opening this afternoon at the Arts Club, 2017 I st. nw., is an exhibition of paintings by Everett Spruce, Texas artist, and prints by Rowland Lyon of Washington. The United Nations Club is showing the work of a group of young Polish painters, the first postwar exhibition of art from Poland to be seen here. The Corcoran's new show consists of work by four Washington artists—Margaret Gates, Ethel Robertson Gath, Samuel Bookatz and William Calfee.

PORTRAITS to be shown in Alexandria at Chequire House from 2 to 6 this afternoon and Monday through Friday of next week are all from local private collections, and many have never been shown publicly before. They include early paintings by Gustavus and John Hesselius, Charles Bird King, Charles Willson Peale, crayon sketches and engravings by the French artist, de Saint Memin. Chequire House is publishing a souvenir catalogue of the exhibition, for which admission will be charged, the proceeds to go for the benefit of the Ramsay House Fund, a local restoration project.

Theresa Bernstein, a distinctive and experienced print-maker, is having a one-man show of her etchings and monotypes in black and white and color at the Smithsonian Institution through May 23. Character studies and portraits are included, as well as landscapes and city scenes, to which she relates the lives of the people who animate them. In her monotypes especially the artist employs an unusually free style for print-making.

Benjamin Abramowitz, Washington painter currently exhibiting at the Barnett Aden Gallery, has joined the staff of the Washington Workshop, where he will give classes in life drawing and painting. Also teaching at the Workshop this spring are Jacob Kainen, Jack Perlmutter, Laura Douglas, Jane Love and George Hamilton, who lectures on contemporary art on alternate Fridays. The Workshop is located on the fourth floor of the old McLean house at 2020 Massachusetts ave. nw.

Lemelin Novel Is Translated By Sam Putnam

THE TOWN BELOW, by Roger Lemelin, translated from the French by Samuel Putnam (Harcourt, Brace; $3).

Love and spite, health and disease, truth and slander, goodness and meanness, poetry and poverty are contrasted with uncommon effectiveness in this novel about the poorer, riverbank section of Quebec.

Two boys, Denis and his friend Jean, are rivals for pretty Lise Levesque. The ambition of Denis, "gang" leader, overrules his heart for a while, but Jean knows, as soon as his eyes fall on the convent-bred girl, that he loves her.

The vulgar and the sordid are here in generous quantities, but they are never repugnant; Lemelin arouses our sympathy even for his less admirable characters, and we are touched all the more by his eager, honest youths.

Exhibit at Pan American Union

Segall's Paintings Speak for Him

"Caboclo Mother," left, and "Girl Reading," both by Lasar Segall, who is having a one-man show at the Pan American Union

By Jane Watson Crane

LASAR SEGALL is the type of person one would expect to meet, after seeing his paintings. Self-assured and extremely articulate, he carries an air of being quite certain of his objectives. His work, shown here for the first time at the Pan American Union, gives an appearance of simplicity that could only be achieved by a sophisticate.

Segall, who was born in Lithuania and trained as an artist in Germany, spoke of his first visit to Brazil as a young man in 1912—"the adventure of his life." The following year he had a show there in Sao Paulo, virtually the first glimpse of European painting based no the ideas of the post-impressionists to be seen in Brazil.

The "adventure" led to his return for good in 1923. Since then, except for brief intervals abroad, Segall has lived in Sao Paulo. He has been warmly received in his adopted country, where in 1943 the Ministry of Education honored him with a one-man show.

Well-Integrated Work

QUIET in color and reposed in composition, the effect of the paintings as a group is of a remarkably consistent and well-integrated performance. Segal uses Brazilian themes, but in this show at least without any departure from the style of his other work. The landscape of the region of Sao Paulo is quite different from that of the sun-drenched tropics, and Segall's painting reflects the subtle colors of this environment. No facile interpreter of folklore, his heavy-limbed country-people might be symbols of meager rural living in any country.

But fundamentally color is not a matter of external influences with Segall. In an era when many artists use primary or pure colors lavishly and with sharp accents, Segall sticks to a low-keyed palette.

He feels that the painter's mixing of colors is a highly personal expression and it is evident from what he says that his use of pigments sprigs from inner compulsion. Greys, olive greens, and pale yellows recur in his paintings; he uses white occasionally; his warmer tones are closer to brown than red. Using his paints sparingly, he achieves effects of transparency—a dark background showing through white, for example, or the canvas sometimes barely covered so that the texture comes through.

Human Subject Matter

IN THIS show almost all the subject matter is human. It is also impersonal. There are several heads of a handsome, thoughtful woman — studied portraits that suggest an ideal of womanhood rather than flesh and blood. Full-length figures range from the starkly upright "Caboclo Mother" to the rhythmic "Five Figures," which is a small version of a large decorative composition.

It is a pity that the smaller space at the Pan American Union did not allow inclusion of some of the big canvases which were shown in New York last month.

The mural-scale "Emigrant Ship," "Pogrom," and the tripartite "Concentration Camp" tell of another side of the artist's work, ambitious commentary related to social themes, but also reveal his considerable capacity for figure composition on a monumental scale.

Off to Paris

SEGALL will go to Paris this month, to pave the way for a show there in 1949. He confessed that he, like many other artists of Latin America, had been reluctant to come to this country, judging from his impressions gained mainly from the movies. He knew of Wall Street, but not of "art circles" or "romantic spots."

A cosmopolitan himself, he is impressed by the variety of races and nationalities who are contributing to art in this country. As an international center, he sees New York as Paris used to be.

A skilled technician, Segall spoke of the necessity "to love what one paints." It is obvious that the language of painting is also of great importance to him. He is versatile as to medium; sculpture and print-making he uses frequently. Co-founder of Sao Paulo's Modern Art Society, he believes that "the heritage from the great masters of the past should serve as a foundation for the building of the creative work of our present-day artists."

34 Reproductions By Kuniyoshi

YASUO KUNIYOSHI. By Lloyd Goodrich. Macmillan (for the Whitney Museum of American Art). 51 pp. $2.50.

Kuniyoshi, 54, and a Japanese-born resident of the United States for the past 40 years, was honored with a retrospective show at New York's Whitney Museum last March.

The present volume is an outgrowth of the show, and presents 34 of the artist's paintings in black and white and one in color—as well as biographical and critical material.

Lloyd Goodrich, associate curator at the Whitney, has presented a good brief survey of Kuniyoshi, one of America's outstanding contemporary artists, with emphasis on his more recent development.

Book Provides a Partial Answer

What Does 'Ike' Really Stand For?

By Sterling North

EISENHOWER SPEAKS: A Selection of His Speeches and Messages. Edited by Rudolph L. Truenfels. Farrar, Straus. 299 pp. $3.

THE almost universal reaction toward Ike Eisenhower is one of affectionate admiration. It is generally conceded that he could have the presidency for the asking. But it has been difficult to answer the question, "What does he really stand for?" This book provides part of the answer.

Eisenhower has vigorously defended freedom of the press from the vantage point of Moscow. He has told Russian generals we will "fight for peace" if necessary. But he has never closed the door on cooperation with any nation.

He has told a Southern audience that two cultures can live side by side in peaceful alliance.

He has sharply defended the line between jingoism and patriotism.

He has continuously backed the United Nations, UNRA, the Marshall Plan and every legitimate proposal for international cooperation. He has frequently stated that hunger and want and suffering are the principal enemies of all mankind.

His deep-seated hatred of war has not, however, weakened his firm conviction that until the world picture clarifies we must not neglect national security.

If Ike has any racial, religious, class or other biases there is no evidence of them in these 61 addresses, press conferences and public statements.

Arranged chronologically from his Victory Order of the Day (May 8, 1945) to his Final Report as Chief of Staff to the Secretary of the Army (February 7, 1948), these expressions of Ike's philosophy, stated with modesty, warmth and humor, show consistent growth of mind.

EISENHOWER

The earlier ones contain occasional platitudes and (on foreign soil) demonstrate more diplomacy than profundity. Ike must have made many friends for the United States in England, Russia, France and wherever else he spoke at the end of the war.

But as the postwar skies darkened, Eisenhower dug ever more deeply into his spiritual and intellectual resources to avoid the general cynicism which has engulfed so many of us. War-weary himself, and aware that almost the entire world shares his feeling, he has devoted himself to peace without retreat and cooperation without appeasement.

It is interesting to trace Eisenhower's profound belief in education and profound distaste for politics (and personal glory) throughout the last three years.

As early as June 22, 1945, speaking to his neighbors in Abilene, Kans., he said: "In the strongest language you can command you can state that I have no political ambitions at all."

By the following January (upon receiving an honorary doctorate from Toronto University) he is expressing his veneration for "knowledge, reason and truth" and his belief that peace can come only through education.

Evidently when Eisenhower protests that he does not want to be President and does want to be a college president he means exactly what he says. Much of the internal evidence in this book points to a deep-seated conviction on this score.

On the final page of this book Eisenhower leaves us with food for thought:

"National security does not mean militarism or any approach to it. Security cannot be measured by the size of munitions stock piles or the number of men under arms or the monopoly of an invincible weapon. That was the German and Japanese idea of power which, in the test of war, was proved false. Even in peace, the index of material strength is unreliable, for arms become obsolete and worthless; vast armies decay imperceptibly while sapping the strength of the nations supporting them; monopoly is a weapon soon broken. But adequate spiritual reserves, coupled with understanding of each day's requirements will meet every issue of our time."

Portrait of Jaime Sabartes by Pablo Picasso. Sabartes is the author of "Picasso: An Intimate Portrait"

PICASSO: An Intimate Portrait. By Jaime Sabartes. Prentice-Hall. 230 pp. $5.

ONE cannot brush off all surrealistic and cubistic art as fakery in the blithe manner of several recent critics. There is a vast chasm between obvious imposters and real painters like Picasso.

But it is equally undiscerning to accept Picasso in toto as does Jaime Sabartes, the tireless Boswell who has shadowed his hero for more than half a century.

Sabartes, for instance, is just as blindly admiring of Picasso's two-headed roosters, two-faced women and perverse African primitives as he is of the brilliant canvases from the blue, pink and Harlequin periods.

The slightest word, the most casual stroke of Picasso's brush are works of the master to this disciple. If he does not understand a composition he blames it upon his own stupidity.

But Sabartes, all unknowingly, has done a major service in debunking the ludicrous exaggerations of many worshipers at the shrine of Picasso.

For instance, Clarence Bulliet, one of the best of the modern critics, speaks of "the rich black loam of non-Euclidian geometry" from which Picasso drew figures existing in "the fourth dimension." Bulliet, comparing Picasso to Einstein, insisted that the painter's brilliant mind could "grasp both mathematics and music."

In this monograph on Picasso, Sabartes reveals that, except in drawing, Picasso learned nothing in school and could not even grasp "one plus one" in mathematics. To add, subtract, multiply or divide was completely beyond his mentality. So much for "non-Euclidian geometry."

Sabartes even denies that the young Picasso was deeply influenced by Toulouse-Lautrec.

The only value of this undisciplined, disorganized "biography" are the personal touches about the painter's life. He was as much of a brat as a child as that other talented Spanish painter, Dali. At one time in Paris (1902) he kept himself warm for a few hours by burning hundreds of his sketches. He was once in an automobile accident. He seems to have lived through the German occupation without too much suffering. He is often bored. But he is constantly very busy (if only pasting scraps of paper to a canvas). His studio is always a mess. He never throws away anything. He finds it hard to make up his mind. But he is a great painter.

Never since "The Autobiography of Alice B. Toklas" has contemporary hagiography blazed with such an aura.

For Picasso, like the late Gertrude Stein, is half genius, half mountebank. And it takes that combination to establish any new religion.

THE NAKED AND THE DEAD. By Norman Mailer. Rinehart. 721 pp. $4.

NORMAN MAILER, a young man of 25 whose experience is summed up as "Brooklyn, Harvard, Leyte, Japan; soda jerk, usher, flat-painter, rifleman; Story Magazine, cross section, a first novel . . ." is as brilliant and bitter as any writer the Second World War has produced.

MAILER

He writes more in the tradition of Dos Passos than Ernest Hemingway; is closer to Barbusse than to Remarque. But his intentions are similar to those of all four writers. He hopes to debunk World War II as thoroughly as those gentlemen debunked World War I. He believes that war itself is an unmitigated evil.

Into 721 pages he has poured almost as much soul searching and agony as you will find in "Crime and Punishment." Following a handful of soldiers and officers (from their landing on the invasion beach at Anopopei through to the collapse of the Toyaku Line and the "mopping up" of the half-starved remnants of the Jap army), he delves into their past with imaginative perception.

He shows what motivates an intolerant Boston Irish lad, a frightened but decent young Mexican, a tough cynic from Kansas, a born killer from Texas, a soft-spoken Southerner, a sensitive Jewish youngster and other GIs from a recon platoon.

Then turning to the officers, he sketches in the whole staff briefly but concentrates upon General Cummings, West Pointer, ambitious and brilliant martinet, master of chess and of strategy—a cold, hard reactionary so deeply hated by Norman Mailer that he has probably been unfair in his full-length portrait of the man.

The author never directly suggests that Cummings should not have been in command. But he is merciless in his revelation of the general's motives, and practically accuses him of murder in the case of his aide, Lieutenant Hearn, the most interesting individual in the book, who cannot be bent or broken to Cummings' specifications.

No writer has given us more vivid descriptions of what the fighting was like in the Pacific. In neither fiction nor nonfiction have we been offered as sensuous a cross section of the sights, sounds, smells, the fright, the pain, the weariness and the disillusionment.

It is perhaps unfortunate, however, that the author has seen fit to use a variation on the shortest and ugliest word for sexual intercourse several thousand times in the book. According to all reports, GIs used that and other four-letter Anglo-Saxon words of a similar nature as frequently as you will find them in this novel. But a more accomplished artist would have achieved even stronger effects through implication.

Perhaps, too, Mailer suffers from the Dos Passos habit of using too many words, and writing with insufficient perspective. The use of "Time Machine" and "Chorus" for imbedded flashback thumb-nail biographies and cross sections of GI scuttlebutt is faintly imitative of Dos Passos.

Finally, Mailer is still too young and too bitter to have acquired the Tolstoyan universal compassion which might have helped him to understand and forgive officers as well as GIs.

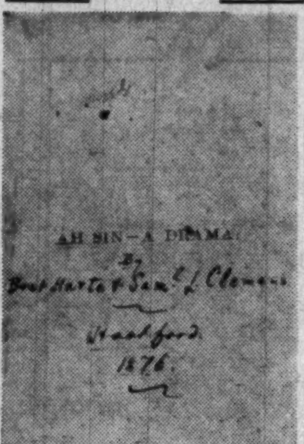
Twain Play Vastly Better After Cutting



Title Page of "Ah Sin"

By Lee Grove

THERE is a class of books so rare that no one has ever seen a copy.

One of these is a play, "Ah Sin," by Mark Twain and Bret Harte, entered for copyright in 1876 and first produced at the National Theater here on May 7, 1877.

GOFF

According to Frederick R. Goff, curator of rare books at the Library of Congress, if you have a copy on your shelf you had better pinch yourself to see what world you are living in.

For "Ah Sin" was never published.

Goff tells it in an article in the current issue of a bookmen's quarterly, the Colophon.

Twain, in a curtain speech following a performance of "Ah Sin" in New York, said, "I never saw a play that was so improved by being cut down; and I believe it would have been one of the very best plays in the world if his (the manager's) strength had held out so that he could cut out the whole of it."

AMONG OTHERS in this "mostest rarest" class are two other plays by the cotailors of "Ah Sin," Goff says.

One is "In the Sierras; or, the Luck of Roaring Camp . . . A Drama in Four Acts, 1870, San Francisco, California," by Bret Harte. The other is a dramatic version of Tom Sawyer, for which Twain asked copyright the year preceding "Tom's" publication as a novel.

"This would suggest that Twain's first thoughts about 'Tom' were in the form of a play, rather than as a tale," Goff says, adding that Twain again asked copyright for "Tom Sawyer, a Play in Four Acts," in 1884, "but that no published copies of this have ever come to light either."

These plays, as books, like a number of others, never got beyond printing of the title pages.

THE REASON they got that far goes back to Noah Webster, the dictionary man. When in 1783 Webster's "The American Spelling Book"—which became one of the first best sellers in American publishing history—was ready for publication, the 25-year-old writer found there were neither State nor Federal laws to protect authors' rights.

"As a result of his leadership, by 1786 every State in the Union, with the exception of Delaware, had adopted copyright laws," Goff says, "and in 1790 the first Federal Copyright Act was passed.

"This Act of 1790 required that a copy of the title-page of a book to be copyrighted should be deposited before publication with the clerk of the District Court where the author resided.

"The law did not require publication of a book, of course, for which application for copyright had been made," Goff says, "so an unestimated number were never published."

In 1870 these copyright records were transferred to Washington, and the Library of Congress became responsible for the recording of copyright, and soon thereafter the practice of filing title-pages was dropped.

But in the approximately 250,000 title-pages filed between 1790 and 1882 and still preserved are many books that never became books.

'Indian Cellar'

Energetic Trio Puts Tavern in the Black

TAVERN IN THE TOWN. By Margaret Hammel Shea. Ives Washburn, Inc. $2.50. 215 pp.

INDIAN CELLAR is a ravine cut into a cliff at the foot of the gorge in the Maine village of Salmon Falls. Maine tourists know it as a spot of natural beauty where, according to legend, Indians used to hide in the canoes to waylay other tribes as they paddled down the rapids. Two years ago when a proposed gas station threatened the serenity of this spot, Margaret Shea and two partners bought the property, converted a former sandwich shop into a tavern and named it "Indian Cellar." "Tavern In the Town" is Mrs. Shea's story of the trio's experiences in building and running Indian Cellar.

The three partners started with as little knowledge of running a restaurant as any average demanding patron at the Statler. Mrs. Shea, a writer, had run a household in New York for two small daughters until the war, when she moved to Salmon Falls to live in an old farmhouse with her college friend, Rebecca Files, and her two children. Mrs. Files, a partner in the threesome, has illustrated "Tavern In the Town." In the tavern she became Beck, the waitress. Her brother, Fred, a Pacific war veteran nursing postwar dreams of new frontiers in Alaska, skeptically became the third partner and handyman.

To begin with, they had no assets except Mrs. Shea's culinary talents, an inordinate amount of energy and a sense of humor. To end with, they had converted the frightening ledger figures to a reassuring substantial black. In between, they had many harrowing and hilarious experiences and met all kinds of people.

* * * *

THERE was the day that they had managed to accomplish such wonders of amateur carpentry as hanging a ceiling, building a kitchen annex, taking down walls and putting in windows—only to have the building inspector blast their hopes with demands that they install flush toilets ("one for gents, one for ladies," he insisted), make a concrete cover for the spring and equip the septic tank with a drain piped underground to the river.

Undaunted, they started again with hearts as heavy as the lead pipes they had to order. At that point Fred said to his two partners: "The next time you dream up your little casseroles, just remember that it takes more than a mushroom and a dash of sherry to put them before the public. Sometimes it takes a sewage system and a cement mixer."

Mrs. Shea has an easy, amusing style, and a nice way with words that enriches this tale. Commenting on the mishap that caused the dining room floor to dry black when Fred lye-cleaned it the day before opening, she writes," No blame was cast. Recriminations at that point would have been the luxury of idle people with no deadline to meet." Again, in the throes of trying to locate chairs in the last-minute rush, she says, "I slept fitfully that night. I had a curious sensation of being a traffic light that winked on and off in irregular rhythm as if my wiring were half shot."

* * * *

THE "characters" who frequented Indian Cellar were an interesting lot. There was Alex, a plaid-shirted rangy ballad collector "shy of much autobiography and more interested in ballads than people." He always refused menus because he liked to be "surprised." Then there was D., the professor whose secret ambition was to be a medicine-show man. His preferred order was a "whole quart of milk (to be served in the bottle) and a fresh loaf of bread on a cutting board."

Not every patron, however, was as amusing as Alex or D. There were some summer colonists whose digestive tracts seemed to be "upset by the sight of kinky hair or a strong hooked nose." These would sometimes sweep out with their "superior white noses raised in an attitude of a nervous horse reaching for a whinny."

All in all, I'd say that readers who are looking for a brief escape from heavier, more doleful affairs will find a good evening's entertainment in "Tavern in the Town." EVELYN HAYES.

THE LONG WALK, by Betsey Barton (Duell, Sloan & Pearce; $3).

At the start of this novel about a hospital full of men with spinal wounds and injuries which have shriveled their legs to uselessness, there are very sympathetic pictures of sick rooms and patients both hopeful and despairing. Then the story turns into a tract more maudlin, for my taste, than moral.

Conn. Setting For Greene Novel

A BRIDGE AT BRANFIELD. Josiah E. Greene. Macmillan. 467 pp. $3.50.

Josiah E. Greene, who won the Macmillan Centenary Award for Fiction for an earlier book, has written a sympathetic story of a Connecticut country town.

Though the novel concerns the election of a new selectman and a bridge, the real drama in Branfield is supplied by the town's youth and their needs.

Some of Greene's characters are prototypes who do not quite come to life, but the town's introverted economics is a sound theme.—L. G

Pearl Buck Recommends Assimilation

PEARL BUCK has taken the theme of "Gentleman's Agreement" and "Eagle At My Eyes" into the China of a century ago and has arrived at a controversial conclusion concerning the "Jewish problem."

PEARL BUCK

The moral of this book seems to be: accept assimilation! Jew and non-Jew alike, she implies, benefit by admixture. But orthodoxy of any kind breeds strife, bigotry and ill-feeling.

It would be absurd to accuse Pearl Buck of racial bias after a life spent fighting bias of any variety. But it must be admitted that in this novel, which celebrates the tenth anniversary of her award of the Nobel Prize, she does not always make her Jews attractive people.

At the worst they are made to seem at least as narrow as the Protestant missionaries from whom Pearl Buck herself springs, "good" people who feel themselves instinctly superior to the Chinese, while sharing little of Chinese modesty or tolerance.

In contrast, the author's continuously over-idealized Chinese are the essence of amiability.

The story concerns the highly romanticized Peony, purchased in childhood as a companion for David Ezra, only child of a pure Jewish mother and a father half Chinese and half Jewish. Ezra himself is a likeable merchant. His wife is a shrewish tyrant.

It is Madame Ezra who sees the danger of David falling in love with Peony, and who attempts to make a match between her son and Lea, the sweet but intense daughter of the Jewish rabbi.

It is, of course, the selfless Peony who maneuvers a reasonably happy match for David, whom she loves. And her dedicated life does not seem one of frustration as the book closes.

Pearl Buck at her most facile is almost saccharine. She is at her worst as the book opens with the presentation of the peerless Peony. At her best the author is a student of psychology, a talented teller of tales and an interpreter of the East to the West. Throughout most of this book she is at her best.—S. N.

The Magazine Rack

THE AMERICAN MAGAZINE publishes a severe indictment of the Federal Trade Commission by Lowell B. Mason, active dissenter on the five-man FTC Board since 1945. American business, he claims, is being "harassed, bled, and even blackjacked" by the FTC's misguided effort to enforce what he calls a hodgepodge system of laws. To eliminate "the FTC's hit-and-miss prosecution of offenders," he asks Congress for machinery to call an industry-wide conference of leaders where unfair trade practices are common. Business should formulate its own fair trade rules, he insists, and must shoulder the responsibility for enforcing them.

In the same magazine, Representative John McDowell (R., Pa.), House Un-American Activities Committee member, hands out a warning that the United States is doing a poor job of watching its borders. He estimates that 85,000 unauthorized aliens have slipped into the country, particularly through Detroit, New York City, Miami and Los Angeles. Eighteen thousand of these aliens, the Congressman claims, are criminal or subersive.

LIFE publishes "The Case for Warren," by Irving Stone, which cites the 57-year-old California Governor's fine record in California politics, his "sane, middle-of-the-road approach to economic and social problems, "and his fundamental distrust of power, as points in favor of the possible Republican presidential nominee.

George Creel gives another Republican hopeful, Gen. Douglas MacArthur, a kindly writeup in Collier's Creel praises MacArthur's actions as supreme commander in Japan, shifts the blame for tight censorship to overzealous underlings and calls Japanese inflation the inevitable result of low production caused, in turn, by Japan's need for a peace treaty to allow foreign-trade revision.

Collier's hands out its annual awards for distinguished congressional service to Senator Alben W. Barkley (D., Ky.) and Representative Christian A. Herter (R., Mass.). Senator Barkley gets his medal for "superb loyalty to the two-party system;" Representative Herter gets his for proposing the Select Committee on Foreign Aid, which played so large a part in better understanding by House members of European needs.

NEWSWEEK asked 50 leading economists—27 from business, 9 from Government, 10 from academic fields and 4 with labor ties—what they thought would happen to prices this year. Consensus was: No big price drop will come this year; retail prices will go up slightly more but level off in September; business activity will stay near present high levels; ERP and military preparedness have knocked out prospects of any downturn soon.

Harassed brides, their mothers and their friends will find much helpful information on silver, china, kitcheen and household equipment in House and Garden's "Bride's Manual." No prices are mentioned, but a helpful list of basic needs for several kinds of living is included.

Unusual Novel Looks Back On the War

"THUS AM I SLAYN," by Howard Clewes (Dutton; $3).

A HANDFUL of men and women, including a self-styled commander, chief of staff, general, and so on, have withdrawn to a mountainside hideout and there, though they are called Partisans, have learned in fact to be Partisans of peace, of live-and-let-live. With the connivance of the village priest, who wants to spare his flock, and of the Germans, who are glad to find a backwater where they can rest, they are sitting out the war.

But the Allies want action, and a man with instructions to get them into the fray is parachuted into their midst. His efforts, and those of other newcomers representing the press, to reactivate them in the name of democracy form the substance of this unusual novel.

Clewes switches almost by magic from the retreat of Crosby, Bullivant, Erica and their comrades to the postwar world to which they are returned by victory. There's an eerie quality to the tale, and our world, in the light of it, takes on an ominously eerie quality, too.

Stassen Would Figure Labor

GOP Rivals Underline Antique Parity Index

By John W. Ball
Post Reporter

THE RECENT Republican presidential primary campaigns have emphasized the big job the next Congress must face in setting up a new long-range agricultural program.

Many of the most important laws affecting agriculture will expire with this year; others of long standing have become outmoded, with farm groups of all sections demanding a revision.

One of these, the parity formula by which the farmer's portion of the national income is determined, was brought to the fore by Harold E. Stassen in the Ohio primary. Stassen came out for a revision of the farm parity formula to include the costs of farm labor.

Robert A. Taft, early in the Nebraska fight, declared his belief that Government price supports for farm products at their present rate of 90 per cent of parity (92½ per cent for cotton) were too high. As price supports are inseparably tied to parity prices, both candidates emphasized the importance of a review of the entire parity setup.

Purchasing Power

PARITY, boiled down, is an attempt to apply to farm prices the old theory of barter. In other words, it seeks to measure how much a farmer can buy with his products as compared with an earlier, or base period.

If in 1914 a farmer could buy an automobile for 100 bushels of wheat, and in 1948 could buy the same car with 80 bushels of wheat, then the parity price of wheat would be above parity.

However, it isn't as simple as that. The whole list of things a farmer must buy are measured against the whole group of farm products. A general parity level is thus reached for farm products as a whole. Then, in turn, each farm is measured against the whole of the things a farmer buys, which establishes the parity for each product.

1909-14 Base Is 100

IN setting up the parity formula, a base period from August, 1909, to July, 1914, was chosen, as representing the most equitable relationship between the prices farmers pay for products they must buy and the prices they receive for their products. The average price they received for their various crops during that period was set at an index figure of 100. Likewise, the price they paid during that period also was set at 100.

As conditions changed, both indexes changed. Last April 15, for instance, the index for farm products stood at 291. In other words, the farmer was getting $2.91 for products that during the base period brought him only $1.

Offsetting this, the index for what he buys has moved up to 249. That means he was paying an average of $2.49 for goods that cost him only $1 in the base period.

Matching one against the other, it left the parity ratio at 117. That indicates he can buy 17 per cent more goods for his products than he could during the base period.

Paradox in Citrus

BROKEN down, the April 15 price of wheat was 104 of parity—or 4 per cent above parity. Rice was 150; corn 137. That indicated that the farmers growing those products were prosperous. But, looking further, it is found that grapefruit was only 7—in other words, the grapefruit raiser was able to buy only 7 per cent of the goods with a box of his product that he could in the base period.

This amazingly low price for this product brought out these figures: the parity price for grapefruit on April 15 was $2.06 a box, but he was actually getting only 15 cents a box on that date.

Citrus fruits do not come under the price support program, although the Government is aiding grapefruit raisers by buying large amounts for school lunch programs and for distribution to charitable institutions rather than allow it to spoil.

Parity for most farm products is based on the 1909-14 figure. Some deviations have been made for commodities for which satisfactory data was not obtainable for that period. The base period for potatoes and some other vegetables and fruits and all types of tobacco except burley and flue-cured, is 1919-1929. For burley and flue-cured it is 1934-'39.

Tractor a Factor

MANY proposals for changing the parity base period have been presented.

During the war, peanuts developed into a major crop, with production vastly increased over the index period. Over the years horses and mules have given way to tractors as farm power, which makes it necessary to revise the parity index for both. Into the field once dominated by cotton have come synthetic fibers such as rayon, nylon, etc., which would call for changes. Soybeans are now a major crop, where in 1914 they were minor.

Among the suggestions to change the parity formula are such as a "movable base period." This would take a 10-year average on an adjustable basis—taking into consideration the years of large production of individual crops along with periods of unusual demand for them. For instance, the recent period of huge grain exports would merge into the formula.

Stassen's suggestion of considering farm labor in figuring parity is an idea that has attracted much attention. The index now includes interest and taxes. Those who object to including labor costs argue that farmers formerly opposed that because of the cheapness of farm labor when parity laws were passed. Now that farm labor has gone up to such an extent that it is driving producers out of certain markets, the farmers are urging consideration of it.

The production of sheep and lambs has dropped below all years since 1867—largely because the cost of labor enters into that industry to a greater extent than into most agricultural ventures.

'Victory Insurance'

SINCE 1914, farm wage rates have increased as follows: per month with board from $22.09 to 95; per month without board, from $29.18 to $113; per day with board from $1.16 to $4.50; per day without board from $1.42 to $5.20.

Government support of farm prices was adopted during the war to guarantee farmers against loss due to a sudden lapse in demand with the end of hostilities, such as followed World War I. Because of the sustained foreign demand, maintained by UNRRA, interim aid and, now, the Economic Cooperation Administration, few of the products upon which prices are guaranteed have fallen to the guarantee point.

But when considered as the figure upon which Government price supports are based, any changes in the methods of establishing parity become of prime importance.

Cops Getting Fat On Black Market 'Enforcement'

BERLIN (AP).—Black marketing and scrounging in beat-up, hungry postwar Germany are virtually universal practices in which even police get caught.

Recently the chief of railway police at Wismar, in the Russian-occupied Province of Mecklenberg, was deposed when he was convicted of complicity with black marketers and smugglers.

This incident caused a German woman in Macklenburg to tell the newspapers of her experience with the province's police.

It was at the station in Schwerin, she related, that she was searched by railway police for black market goods. They found and took from her a pound of butter. The policeman, she said, placed the butter in his leather pouch.

"But I watched him," she continued, "and I lingered until he went off duty. Then I noticed that he deposited his pouch in a waiting room while he went into headquarters to report. I stealthily entered and stole his pouch.

"Imagine my joyful surprise, when I reached home, to find that the pouch contained not only my pound of butter but also two large sausages, a pound of bacon and a loaf of bread."

MARYLAND AFFAIRS

After 40 Years

Bay Bridge Dream's Coming True

By Rene J. Cappon
Associated Press Staff Writer

SANDY POINT, MD., May 8.—Forty years of dreaming and scheming on how to link their widely separated Eastern and Western shores are paying off for Marylanders at last.

The Chesapeake Bay Bridge is almost a reality. Congress has given the nod. Test borings are near completion. Contracts for the 30 million dollar State-financed bridge are scheduled for bidding this summer or fall.

Whatever the design adopted, the five-mile highway crossing will be among the world's great bridges. A 1400-foot center span is planned to keep the bay entrance to Baltimore Harbor as clear as possible.

To allow passage of ocean-going vessels, the bridge will soar 200 feet or so above the water.

Yet some citizens may not quite believe it until they see the toll span rise across the narrows of Chesapeake Bay, from Sandy Point, near Annapolis, to Kent Island on the Eastern Shore.

Streetcar Project

THEY recollect the frequent disappointments in the project's history. This began in 1907 with a proposal by the Baltimore Merchants and Travelers Association for a trolley car link between the mainland and the peninsula.

Since that year the crossing plan has been alternately adopted and scuttled by the State Legislatures. Private financiers have espoused the project, then let go.

Politicians have treated the scheme as a fantastic vision or a practical necessity. The State repeatedly went begging to the Federal Government for funds—which it never got.

But considerations of commerce and geography kept the project alive. Its supporters down through the years have pointed out that Maryland, alone among the 48 States, has 30 per cent of her land area, 20 per cent of her motor vehicles and 20 per cent of her population (outside Baltimore) sliced off from her mainland.

The peninsula is shared by Maryland, Delaware and a bit of Virginia.

Diverted Trade

FARMERS of Maryland's Eastern Shore found quick produce markets in Wilmington and Philadelphia rather than in trans-bay Baltimore. Western Shore businessmen became increasingly unhappy. Motorists were plagued by hour-long delays at the ferry points.

In 1926 a private company was formed to build the span. Bids were asked in 1929. Then came the big bust. The company quit. The State took over and appointed a study commission.

Meanwhile opponents were not silent. One was the formidable H. L. Mencken, in those days a special writer for the Baltimore Sunpapers, who assailed the State's proposed method of financing the project (then estimated at 10 million dollars.).

In 1933, after the RFC refused financial aid, the Maryland Senate killed the bridge bill.

Two years later the sad cycle began all over. The State set up a Chesapeake Bay Bridge Authority which asked the Government for a $4,500,000 PWA grant and a $3,500,000 loan. It got neither.

In 1937 President Roosevelt vetoed the span project on War Department advice. The State Legislature abandoned the Bay Bridge Authority.

A Campaign Promise

BUT by 1938 Maryland Senators Tydings and Radcliffe, joined by Delaware Senator Kennedy, had another bridge bill ready for Congress.

Once more—in 1939—the PWA said no to a money request. In 1940 a Maryland commission recommended that the scheme be abandoned.

And so it was— until 1945, when William Preston Lane, jr., running for Governor of Maryland, gave the campaign pledge that the bridge would be built. What's more, the State would do its own financing.

Lane was elected. Again Maryland's dream bridge is rising—but Marylanders, used to disappointments, are keeping their fingers crossed.

Hot Issue Isn't on the Ballot

Bleak Isle Debates Tieup With U. S.

By Robert Bunnelle
Associated Press Staff Writer

ST. JOHN'S, Newfoundland, May 8.—Economic union with the United States has become one of the hottest issues in Newfoundland's forthcoming election to change its status as a colonial dependency of Britain.

The date for the balloting has not been fixed, but it probably will be early in June—after the sealing fleets return and before the codfishing fleets go out. That's when most voters will be at home.

The people, from the capital to outposts reachable only by ship or airplane, are being bombarded with campaign literature and radio speeches. Arguments over the best form of government rage on nearly every street corner and in nearly every home.

Actually, economic union with the United States will not appear on the ballot. The issue has been injected by a new political party.

In 'Receivership'

NEWFOUNDLAND, the bleak, rock-ribbed island of 320,000 inhabitants at the mouth of the St. Lawrence, once was an independent dominion like Canada. It reverted to colonial status in 1934 because of inability to manage its 100-million-dollar national debt.

Since then Newfoundland has been ruled by a crown-appointed governor and commissioners under a kind of bankruptcy arrangement. War, with establishment of American military bases at St. John's, Argentia and Stephensville, helped restore the island's finances.

Britain now has agreed to let Newfoundlanders choose a new form of government by plebiscite. The ballot provides these alternatives:

Confederation with Canada as the Dominion's tenth province; return to the old independent status with a responsible government; or retention for another five years of the commission government.

Early in the discussion one group of Newfoundlanders sought consideration of closer trade and economic relations with the United States. This was ruled out as beyond the authority of the convention discussing the proposals for balloting.

Now a new party has been formed under the presidency of Chesley A. Crosbie, prominent sealer and businessman, to seek economic union with the United States by first winning a victory for responsible government.

In an open letter to the people, Crosbie declared:

"Because the wishes of Newfoundlanders are ignored by the British government, economic union with the United States will not be on the ballot paper. It will be necessary, therefore, to return to self-government before economic union can be arranged. . . . Immediately self-government becomes a reality I will have the privilege of heading a party pledged to bring about economic union with the United States."

Expect Investments

CROSBIE contends that union not only will open United States markets to Newfoundland, but will bring the island "millions of dollars in American capital" to develop its natural resources, "particularly fisheries and the fabulously wealthy mineral and timber areas of Labrador."

Crosbie claims more than 50,000 members for the Economic Union Party. The party also is soliciting kinsmen of Newfoundlanders in Brooklyn, Boston, Montreal and other cities to urge their homefolk to vote for economic union. About 100,000 votes are expected to be cast in the plebiscite.

Proponents of confederation with Canada, headed by Attorney F. G. Bradley, are concerned about the new party. There also is concern in Canada, which offered Newfoundland cash benefits of $23,350,000 and about $27,150,000 annually in services, plus relief from 63 million dollars of the island's debts, to become its tenth province. Britain, which has always felt that Newfoundland should amalgamate with Canada, also is anxiously watching the drift in sentiment.

Crosbie's campaign is strengthened by the fact that another group of Newfoundlanders favors return to self-government with closer trade relations, but not economic union, with the United States. This is the Responsible Government League, headed by F. M. O'Leary, a prominent commission merchant.

'Kick in Pants'

UNLESS one of the three propositions gets a clear majority, there will be a runoff between the two getting the largest votes. Until Crosbie's campaign got under way March 20, the confederation group felt fairly secure. The St. John's Evening Telegram bluntly commented: "The formation of a new party is a kick in the pants for the confederates."

Political experts in St. John's say a considerable number of "substantial people" favor keeping the commission government for five years for further determination of the island's position. However, this group seems smaller and certainly less active than either the confederates or self-government advocates.

are now aboard at least two carriers, however, and more will follow.

Jet Bomber Nebulous

NAVY CHIEFS will not discuss the development of jet carrier-based bombers, but hint they are on the way. Whether such craft are possible with present flat-tops, or whether they must await the new 80,000-ton flush-deck (no "island" superstructure) vessel to be laid down next year, is not yet clear.

The so-called "Gallery proposal," put forward individually by Rear Admiral Daniel Gallery, one of the Navy's outstanding younger air admirals, does not depend on such a plane. It contemplates one-way A-bomb missions like the Doolittle raid on Tokyo, with long-range jet bombers taking off from carriers in the Arctic or Mediterranean.

Gallery's idea never has been adopted by the Navy high command. This is not because of the Air Force feeling—or at least not just because of it. Many ranking Navy men consider it a one-shot possibility, like the Doolittle raid, and not a real basis for planning a fleet.

It is in antisubmarine warfare, in fact, that naval aviation has its main future challenge and opportunity.

Actually, Russia has a sizeable navy, only it is a different kind from what Japan had. The Soviet has some 300 submarines, and if USSR plants are able to build any considerable number of the new type developed by the Germans, with long underwater endurance and speed, before we have a defense against it, the Red navy will be tough.

The U-boat—in German hands—twice came dangerously close to winning control of the Atlantic. To prevent another such close call, the Navy is trying to develop "hunter-killer" forces of highspeed carriers, planes and destroyers.

A-Bomb Assignment

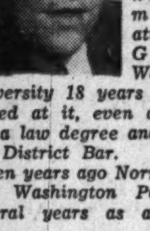
BUT CARRIER aviation may have an even more vital and dangerous role against enemy subs in another war. The submersibles will need bases on or near the Atlantic to be effective, and bases can be bombed.

Therefore, a major role of the big carrier forces might be to knock out such bases.

Destruction of such enemy bases may be the vital factor in determining whether such a future war is fought largely overseas or in this country. For the possession of mid-Atlantic bases would be at stake.

The above, we suspect, may be what Navy officials will tell the squadron and group commanders about the outlook for naval aviation. This outline of the future may not be complete and official; at least it is what many top officers feel is ahead.

They believe that carrier aviation—the tool wrought by Towers, Bellinger, Reeves, Halsey, McCain, Radford and hosts of others—has as brilliant a future as it has a past.



John G. Norris, military writer of The Washington Post, who wrote this article, knows the Navy from long association as a reporter and wartime officer. A native of Washington, he became a newspaperman while attending George Washington University 18 years ago, and stayed at it, even after taking a law degree and passing the District Bar.

Ten years ago Norris joined The Washington Post after several years as an editor and reporter on the Army and Navy Journal. He covered Congress during the draft and foreign policy debates just prior to the war, and now he is back covering the new draft and defense legislation on Capitol Hill. . . .

Norris "covered the war" from the Pentagon during the first part of the conflict, writing the battlefront news from the communiques. Then, as a Navy lieutenant, he served with an aviation unit in England, aboard an aircraft carrier in the invasion of southern France and as public relations officer for the Iwo Jima invasion.

Since the war, Norris has had newspaper assignments in the Near East, the Mediterranean, China and Pacific Islands.

Biggest French Group Is 500,000 Catholics

By Roxane Pollock

PARIS, May 8.—There are 300,000 French boys and girls in the Communist youth group. General De Gaulle's Youth Rally claims a half million members. But the largest young people's movement is the Catholic Association of French Youth, with 500,000 active members.

Youngsters in the Communist group start at the age of 6 to learn about the class struggle. The movement started off with a bang in 1945. The Communists had fought well against the Germans and were popular. Young people joined in droves. But in the last two years there has been a reaction, and other movements have prospered.

De Gaulle's muscular young men speak of wearing snappy uniforms and have an almost religious faith in their general. They are offered a "dynamic spiritual program of reconstruction and reawakening" and their leaders hint at "close ties between General De Gaulle and Washington."

The Catholic Association of French Youth is not basically political. Being Catholic, it falls naturally in the anti-Communist category, but it is not nearly as violently so as the De Gaullists.

The Catholic group vigorously urges labor laws to protect women, it provides leisure time activities for girls, it is active in the trades unions, it helps prepare young women for futures as housewives and mothers.

In France, as in many European countries, social and religious differences are sharp. The Boy Scouts are divided into Catholic, nondenomination and Jewish units. Even the Catholic group is split on social lines, having separate organizations for workers, students, farmers, white-collar workers and sailors.

Probably more truly international than the other groups are the Young Socialists, now somewhat on the decline.

There are hundreds of small young people's organizations, from extreme right to extreme left. But three fourths of all French youngsters belong to no group at all. Many are active in the black market. A feeling of defeatism is strong among a lot of these young folk.

Extreme Alternatives Offered Chinese Youth

By Jean Lyon

PEIPING, May 8.—A young student from Hangchow died in jail last fall because he belonged to the wrong one of China's two large youth groups. One of them is run by the Kuomintang, governing group of China. This boy belonged to the other.

In China almost the only young who join youth movements are students. They have a choice of the Kuomintang Youth Corps—admittedly a branch of the Nationalist Party—or the National Student Federation, called Communist by the government and now operating more or less underground.

For the youth who wants to support his government while reserving the right to criticize some of its policies, there is no answer. He must jump far to the right or far to the left if he wants to join; otherwise his voice is not heard.

Almost every student belongs to the Nationalists' Youth Corps. It is accepted almost as Americans accept the Boy and Girl Scouts. It has the blessing of government officials and teachers, and this is important to the young Chinese, who traditionally respects the judgment of his elders.

But whatever the merit of its programs for health, social service and military training, many see in the corps the trappings of the youth movement that flourished in Germany under Hitler. Yet, it claims to stand for the liberal beliefs of Dr. Sun Yat-sen, father of the Chinese Republic.

Many boys and girls, however, have joined the National Student Federation despite a feeling that it is too far left. It is at least spontaneous, they say. The government disagrees, saying it is led by the Chinese Communists. Whether this is true or not, the federation has no liking for the government's civil war.

Repression of the federation has not been successful. For one thing, students badgered by the government have turned further left and some have actually gone to rebel territory to join the Communists.

Middle-of-the-road groups are rare. One, however, was started recently at Yenching University, where United States Ambassador J. Leighton Stuart was president. The YWCA, too, has started valuable women's groups.

India's Youth Facing Political Crossroads

By Vashti Roberts

NEW DELHI, May 8.—The young people of India today are drawing a breath and making a choice. Behind them is a successful struggle for independence. Ahead lie political roads to the right, center and left.

The youngsters of India today will be the country's government before long. This is true not only because youth always inherits the reigns, but because the older people, living under foreign rule, were not trained for top government positions.

Country-wide youth groups in India are few. Each province has a young people's movement, but the one national group is the All-India Student Association. This organization, solidly in support of India's present government, is really a federation of student unions.

On entering high school, all Indian youngsters become members of their student unions. These small groups simply stand for the welfare of their immediate members. But an increasing number of them are joining the All India organization.

The Indian youngsters who get to high school usually go on to college. This has led to a tiny minority of well-schooled youth who make themselves heard. The All India group is sending teachers to remote places to teach children there—if only reading and writing. It is supporting a plan in one university that would require every student to teach for some months in a village before receiving a degree.

The Communist youth movement in India is not large, but it is becoming more active. The Communists, like others, see here a nation of 300 million people that has just won its independence and is not yet quite sure how to move forward.

So the Communist youth, under P. C. Joshe, working overtime in villages. By giving village youngsters only a few things—especially education that will improve their standard of living—the Communists hope to win them over.

On the other hand, the Boy Scout movement has 400,000 members and is expanding rapidly now that anyone can join. Before the war there were separate groups, for British and Indian youngsters. That segregation is now ended.

For Indian youngsters these are exciting times. Students are paying less and less attention to caste. Old taboos and customs are dying. Child marriage is becoming less usual. Young people know that they may now reach the top in government if they work for it.

His Wallop Is Stadium's Longest in 26 Years

By Shirley Povich
Post Reporter

Larry Doby hit the longest Griffith Stadium home run in 26 years, a rookie pitcher named Gene Bearden held the Nats to three hits in his first big league start and the Cleveland Indians took away a 6-1 victory yesterday.

Young Beardon, who had a major league career consisting of one third of an inning before he took the mound against the Nats, was the transcendent figure of the ball game until Doby swatted his semi-historic eighth inning home run.

Doby's puissant poke was a massive fly ball against a Sid Hudson pitch that struck against the screen amplifiers atop the 35-foot wall in dead center field. It was reckoned as a 450-foot clout by the graduate of the Negro American League, the longest swat since a Babe Ruth homer cleared the wall in the same sector in 1922.

Ball Bounces Back on Field

It was a three-run homer by Doby that clinched the game and flabbergasted the 11,902 customers who watched Center Fielder Earl Wooten race to the fence in vain. The ball was still in play under the ground rules as it dropped back on the playing field, but the hasty Doby beat the relay back to the plate with ease.

The 185-pound Doby was restored to the Indians' lineup only yesterday after being benched for a display of crude outfielding. He was shifted to the outfield this season after a brief trial as a second baseman last year. A stiff wind, blowing into center field, lent some distance to his swat.

The Nats averted a shutout only by the ninth-inning generosity of Rookie Bearden, a tall left-hander who brought a knuckle ball from Oakland of the Coast League, where he performed last season. Bearden walked the Nats' only run across the plate with four bases on balls in the ninth inning.

Two-Hitter for 7 Innings

Bearden was only one pitch away from going the full nine-inning route. With the bases full and two out, he was replaced by Russ Christopher, who ended the game with the next pitch to Pinch Hitter Sherry Robertson, who grounded to Joe Gordon.

For seven innings the only Washington athlete to get a hit off Bearden was Gil Coan, who dumped a Texas League single into left field in the first, and a fuzzy two bagger to the same spot in the fourth. The Nats' only other hit was Johnny Sullivan's single through the infield in the eighth. Bearden didn't issue a walk until the ninth.

Hudson had a rough first inning out of which the Indians took a 1-0 lead on singles by Tucker and Boudreau, and Robinson's infield out. He steadied and the game rocked along at 1-0 until the eighth when the Indians conked Hudson with an extra-base hit assault for five more runs.

Joe Gordon tripled over Wooten's head with one out in the seventh and mosied home after Wooten's catch of Keltner's fly to deep center. Hegan renewed the attack with a soft double to left, and Bearden got him home with a single to center. An infield

To Whom It May Concern:

THE WASHINGTON club is running up a long-distance phone bill with repeated calls to Gastonia, N. C., in an attempt to talk Outfielder Buddy Lewis out of his retirement, and Clark Griffith hopes Lewis is weakening . . . Eddie Arcaro accepted with reservations his invitation to play in The Washington Post's National Celebrities Golf Tournament next Sunday at the Columbia Country Club . . . "I'll be there if I win the Preakness on Citation," said Arcaro. "If I don't win with Citation, I'll be too ashamed to show up" . . . Within 48 hours after the Laurel trotting track announced it was ready to reserve stalls for the first meeting next month, barn space for 156 trotters, more than the track's limit, was applied for . . . Manager Joe Kuhel of the Nats is planning to disclose the club's hit-and-run signs to Washington baseball writers, pledging them to secrecy . . . "The writers will know whether a man was out stealing or was simply caught when a hit-and-run play was missed," he says . . . Tony Janiro, who fights Beau Jack at Griffith Stadium on May 17, shook hands with a well-dressed, gray-haired man in his dressing room after a winning fight in Madison Square Garden in 1944. Later he was told his visitor was Harry Truman, the Vice President. "Jeepers," said Janiro. "I didn't know the Garden has a vice president." . . . The New York Yankees have a scout assigned to Washington High School baseball games.

POVICH

NEW YORK and Maryland official track handicappers don't see eye to eye on the ratings of Stymie and Armed. Stymie was top-weighted over Armed in the Dixie Handicap entries at Pimlico, but in New York's Gallant Fox Handicap Armed has been given a pound more than Stymie . . . Redskin Fullback Jim Castiglia is threatening to quit the Redskins over a salary squabble. Despite the fact that Castiglia was the leading ground-gaining fullback in the Eastern Division, and third in the League, they offered him less than $5000 for 1948. He says he won't sign for less than $10,000 . . . The winning driver in the Indianapolis Speedway's 500-mile race on Decoration Day will collect $10,000 extra if he happens to be using RPM Motor Oil, product of a California company which has posted that prize . . . and the golf statisticians have now figured it out that Lloyd Mangrum, the leading pro money winner to date with $12,604.99 in purses, has been earning $3.75 per stroke in the 51 tournament rounds he has played. He has averaged 69.4 strokes per round. Bobby Locke is doing nicely at $3.22 per stroke and Ben Hogan is the only other pro in the three-buck-per-stroke class . . . if Joe Walcott wins the heavyweight title at the age of 35, it will not be without precedent. When Bob Fitzsimmons knocked out Jim Corbett for the title with a solar plexus punch in 1897, he was three months past his thirty-fifth birthday.

THE PGA IS widely split over the refusal of Tournament Director George Schneiter to permit Bobby Locke to play for the PGA title at St. Louis later this month, despite the fact that Locke was admitted last year . . . Important United States pros are accusing Schneiter of one-man rule of the Association . . . Reports have it that the Giants are trying frantically to acquire a pitcher from the St. Louis Cardinals, even offering to trade Catcher Walker Cooper back to the Cards . . . The last week was rough on the top pitchers of the major leagues. In four starts, Bob Feller, Hal Newhouser and Ewell Blackwell were unable to win a game . . . Briggs Stadium in Detroit, third most capacious in the American League, holds one record. There are more bulbs in its lighting system than in any other park, 1458 . . . And it's the only playing field in the league with a built-in drainage and sprinkling system . . . The men's wear people are now feeling whopping demand for golfing plus fours ever since a half dozen of the top pro golfers began affecting knickers on the links again . . . The pictures of heavy-jowled Joe Louis that are coming out of his Michigan training camp have produced a wave of betting on Joe Walcott and the odds that were expected to go to 4 to 1 against Walcott are now being held steadfast at 3 to 1.

PAUL FAGAN, vice president of the San Francisco Seals, wants major league recognition for his club, even if he has to pull out of the Pacific Coast League and organize a new big league circuit to include Houston and Dallas, Tex. . . . Ed Pauley was host to Eastern sports writers in his private plane on the return trip from the Kentucky Derby. He flies the two-motored ship himself despite a bad crash that once crippled him for months . . . Harry Wismer has done the commentary on the Redskin film that will be distributed to schools, colleges and organizations . . . Eighty-five-year-old Connie Mack, who rarely ribs anybody, made an exception after Lou Boudreau labeled his Athletics among the league's "Bums." After his A's beat the Indians three in a row, Mack yelled from the dug-out, "Now who are the Bums?" . . . Bob Feller's defeat by the A's the other day was something rare. In 32 previous starts against them since coming into the majors, Feller had lost only four games . . . Grantland Rice is heading up a sports writers committee that is raising funds for shipment of food to the Olympic athletes of foreign countries. The Olympic commisaries in England are passing their food-distribution to the competing athletes on the standards of GI fare in England during the war.

Navy Trackmen Lose to Tar Heels

Durham, N. C., May 8 (AP).—North Carolina's track team brushed Navy aside, 69 to 62, here today in a see-saw battle that was decided in the 220-yard low hurdles. A Tar Heel trio made a clean sweep of that [illegible]

Leading by the slim margin of 55 to 53 after 12 events, the Tar Heels picked up 9 points in the hurdles to go ahead 64-53 with the broad jump and mile relay [illegible]

Stymie Bows To Fervent In Dixie

By Walter Haight
Post Reporter

Pimlico, Md., May 8.—Putting on the Calumet Farm's copyrighted burst of speed approaching the stretch, Fervent took command and went on to carry the devil's red and blue bars to victory in the forty-fourth running of the $25,000 added Dixie Handicap.

The 4-year-old, winner of the Pimlico Special last year on a slow track, found similar conditions today and drove into the wire a length and a half in front of Mrs. Ethel D. Jacobs' Stymie, racing's Mr. Moneybags.

Three and a half lengths farther back came Incline, owned by Joseph Tucci, Washington, D. C., contractor, to be third in a photo finish for the position with King Ranch's Contest and Faultless, 1947 Preakness winner and stablemate of Fervent.

Calnmet Entry Pays $5.60

The Calumet entry, as usually in Maryland, was the favorite and paid $5.60.

For the second time Stymie was forced to accept the runner-up honors in the famed mile and a sixteenth test first run here at the old Hilltop track in 1870. He was far from disgraced, however, and was running his usually honest race, closing in on Fervent at the end.

A crowd of 24,401 saw the field of nine—Christiania's Service Pilot was the lone scratch—perform under the first clear skies at the meeting.

However, despite the efforts of a strong wind, bright sun and track crew, the racing strip was considerably off and Fervent was clocked in 2:01 3-5, the slowest Dixie time since Only One's victory in 1935.

Fervent, shipped here in the same car with Citation, the Derby champion, was capably handled by Jockey N. L. Pierson, a former half-mile track rider, who admits he "couldn't buy a mount" when he arrived in Florida last winter.

One-Two Punch Again

In winning its fourth Dixie Handicap—Whirlaway 1942, Sun Again 1944 and Armed 1946, were the others—Calumet used the turf's one-two punch effectively. Faultless was kept in the first flight to force the front runners while Pierson waited with Fervent until the closing stages.

Starter Eddie Blind got the field away well, though Stymie, as is his habit, did little more than walk for the first few strides. Tide Rips on the outside showed in front briefly before Butler forged to the front followed by Contest, Faultless and Fervent.

Going into the clubhouse turn, Butler showed the way with Jockey

Everybody Must Be Seated by 7:30 At Big Broadcast

This is important:

All persons who attend the Edgar Bergen-Charlie McCarthy broadcast with Bing Crosby as guest star at Uline Arena May 16, next Sunday, MUST be seated by 7:30 o'clock.

If you are late, it simply will mean that you will NOT be admitted after Bergen's regular NBC broadcast (WRC) locally) begins.

The entire performance at Uline will run approximately two hours. All of the notables in the National Celebrities golf tournament at the Columbia Country Club Sunday afternoon will be guests at the broadcast.

Ceremonies at the golf tournament will begin about 11:30 a. m. with the first match teeing off at 12 noon.

Celebrities Golf Tournament Cast Dotted With Many 'Official Washington' Notables

By Bus Ham
Post Reporter

MISS MARGARET TRUMAN, Secretary of State George C. Marshall, Attorney General Tom Clark, Senator Robert Taft, presidential candidate . . .

Those and many other notables here will add an "official Washington" backdrop to the National Celebrities golf tournament May 16, next Sunday, at the Columbia Country Club.

Miss Truman will join Barbara Ann Scott, Canada's charming Olympic figure skating champion; Barbara Jo Walker, Miss America of 1947, from Memphis, and Miss Eunice Kennedy, daughter of Joseph P. Kennedy, former Ambassador to Great Britain, in touring the course as scorers.

Marshall is an enthusiastic golf fan. He frequently visits such widely known links as Pinehurst, N. C. He will not tee off in the Celebrities tournament, however, because of an arm injury. He will score one of the foursomes.

Clark will officially start the tournament by hitting the first ball. He will play the full 18 holes as he did last year. He is no par shooter but he loves the game.

Taft is a consistent scorer in the 80s. Last year Taft played both days of the tournament, going 36 holes and shooting 91-82—173.

Other good golfers from Capitol Hill who played in the inaugural tournament and will participate again are Senator Scott Lucas (D., Ill.); Senator William Fulbright (D., Ark.); Representative Leslie Arends (R., Ill.), and Representative

Macks Rout Chisox, 16-1; Sixth in Row

Philadelphia, May 8 (AP).—The Philadelphia Athletics pulled the first triple play of the young 1948 major league baseball season today and retained their slim first place lead by walloping the Chicago White Sox, 16-1, for their sixth straight victory.

The triple play started in the seventh inning when Second Baseman Pete Suder snared a liner off the bat of Chicago's Taffy Wright, flipped it to Shortstop Eddie Joost who caught Luke Appling off the sack. Joost's throw to Ferris Fain nabbed Tony Lupien.

The A's slammed six of seven White Sox pitchers for 15 hits as 21-year-old Righthander Carl Scheib garnered his third victory of the season. Scheib also led the A's batting with a single, double and homer with the bases loaded, which accounted for five of the A's runs.

Rodney Shatters World Record in $50,000 Trot Race

Arcadia, Calif., May 8 (U.P.).—Rodney, the giant of the harness world, today cracked the world's record for a mile and a quarter trot as he captured the $50,000 Golden West trot by a length before a crowd of 18,258 fans.

Rodney was the second horse on the day's program to break the world's record. A race earlier, Dr. Stanton broke the mile and a quarter pacing record in a special race carded because of the poor running of last week's $50,000 Golden West pace. Rodney won by a little over a length in the time of 2:31 3-5, cutting two-fifths of a second off the mark set two years ago here by Kaola. Dr. Staoton slashed a full second off the pacing mark for the same distance, going it in 2:31.

Brecheen Holds Phils To One Hit

St. Louis, May 8 (AP).—Harry (The Cat) Brecheen stopped the Philadelphia Phillies with one scratch hit tonight and the St. Louis Cardinals swept their two-game series with the Phils, 5 to 0. Nippy Jones batted in four Card runs with a single and a home run.

An infield roller by Rookie John Blatnik down the third-base line with two out in the seventh inning was all that kept the brilliant Oklahoma southpaw from pitching a perfect game.

Blatnik beat Whitey Kurowski's throw to first by an eyelash. Blatnik was subbing for Harry Walker, last year's National League batting champ, who was benched for weak hitting.

Brecheen did not walk a batter and struck out eight. The Cards gave him perfect support in the field. It was his third shutout in three starts this season. He has blanked the Chicago Cubs twice.

Blix Donnelly hurled creditably for the Phils, but was a victim of bunched hits. Kurowski doubled home the Cards first run in the fourth and Jones took care of the rest.

Bert Haas, Phils third baseman, was hit on the head by a ball in batting practice and was removed to a hospital where he was found to have suffered a serious concussion. He remained in the hospital when the team left tonight for Cincinnati. Ralph Caballero replaced him in the lineup.

Giants Blast Bucs, 12-5; Take Over Lead

Pittsburgh, May 8 (AP).—The New York Giants pushed past Pittsburgh into first place in the National League today when they pounded five Pirate hurlers for 15 hits and a 12-5 victory.

A crowd of 11,535 spectators had hardly settled in their seats when the Giants exploded for five runs on six hits at the expense of Lefty Vic Lombardi, an old nemesis when he pitched for Brooklyn.

With Kirby Higbe, another former Dodger on the mound, the Giants added three more runs in the second on home runs by Billy Rigney and Bobby Thomson and doubles by Johnny Mize and Buddy Kerr.

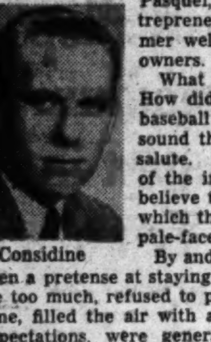
On the Line

—With Considine

MEXICO CITY, May 8 (INS).—About 40 American big leaguers, or embryo big leaguers, jumped their U. S. contracts at the end of World War II to play in the Mexican Baseball League.

Perhaps two dozen others were tempted by the gold of Jorge Pasquel, Mexico's foremost fan and baseball entrepreneur. They used his bona fide offers to hammer well-deserved money out of their American owners.



Considine

What became of those who rushed down here? How did they make out? Well, ask any Mexican baseball fan and he'll answer you with a rasping sound that is roughly the equivalent of a Bronx salute. I have yet to hear a kind word for any of the immigrants, and there is ample reason to believe that they destroyed most of the good will which the Mexican baseball fan once held for his pale-faced muscular brothers to the north.

By and large, few of the American players made even a pretense at staying in physical shape. They drank too much, ate too much, refused to practice, went A. W. O. L. for weeks at a time, filled the air with alibis about their inability to play up to expectations, were generally hostile to Mexican fans, took the money and blew town.

Some of them gave out fancy stories at the border—including Mickey Owen's pipe dream that somebody was trying to assassinate him.

BY 1947 THE LIST had been reduced to 16, notably Roland Gladu, Murray Franklin, George Hausmann, Myron Hayworth, Louis Klein, Ace Adams, Nap Reyes, Roberto Ortiz, Danny Gardella, and Roy Zimmerman—who made up for what they lacked in talent by giving the Mexican fans a little more of a run for their pesos.

This year there is only one active American ball player in the Mexican League, which has fallen off from eight teams to six. He is Joe Lindsay, who played a lot of Class A ball around the States. Efforts were made to get most of the others to live up to player contracts they had signed, or feel some moral responsibility for bonuses accepted for signing long-term contracts, to no avail.

The feeling down here is that Max Lanier, formerly of the St. Louis Cardinals, and whose jump to Mexico caused Sam Breadon to come down here to talk "peace terms" with Pasquel (which in turn caused Happy Chandler to slap a heavy fine on Breadon, and then relent) was the leader of all American players. Some who refused to return for the 1948 season told their respective Mexican owners that Lanier had recommended that they stay at home.

Another thing the Mexicans cannot understand about their experience with the American and National Leagues was the vigor of the U. S. indignation over the so-called "raids." Mexicans seem to know their baseball. At least they know it well enough to remember that the American League itself was formed by "raids" on the old National League, the Federal League was engineered through "raids" on both the National and American Leagues, and so on. Pasquel, in other words, was hardly the inventor of raids, nor had the cry been raised when U. S. owners took the cream of Mexican ball players through the years preceding the arrival of Pasquel on the scene.

THERE IS A MOVE HERE at the present to cut the Mexican League to four teams, all of which would play in Mexico City. Attendance at games played here averages 15,000. It is thus a more profitable ball town, so to speak, than four or five big league cities in the U. S.

But attendances are microscopic in Vera Cruz, Monterrey, Tampico, Pueblo and San Luis. To stimulate interest there the league has been shifting good players to these clubs, a move heartily deplored in U. S. baseball circles though held to be sound business by the All-America Conference Football League.

Some of the Latins who jumped down here from the States have stayed on to become managers, notably Rene Monteagudo and Napoleon Reyes. Biggest disappointment among the "Norte Americano Blancos," as the Mexican baseball guide "Quien Es Quien" identifies them, was Owen.

The fans here expected a cross between Mickey Cochrane and Bill Dickey, but after a bit they came out to the ballyards to see Mickey only because they wanted to see the fellow who let a third strike go through his legs in a memorable World Series game in Brooklyn, U. S. A.

PASQUEL REMAINS SUCH a fan, especially of his pet home-town team, Vera Cruz, that he has been known to appear in the city room of his newspaper Novedades, after a game—bearing a silver tray of champagne and cigars for a celebration. His plan now is to concentrate more on Mexican talent. There's a lot of it around.

Mexico City itself has more than 900 amateur ball clubs. As for the fans of the Mexican League, they just hope that the U. S. won't swoop down one of these dark nights and pick up Vinicio Garcia, second baseman for Pueblo, or Adolfo Garcia, shortstop for Mexico City.

"I've covered eight of your World Series and I saw a lot of big league ball while I was going to school at the University of Chicago," Fernando Campos, sports editor of Novedades, said today. "But either of the Garcias could more than make the grade in your major leagues.

"And we've got a fellow down here named Chit Martinez, a shortstop, who may be the best player in Mexico or anywhere else. But he won't play with any of the Mexico League teams. He likes to play semi-pro ball around the little towns up north. You see, he just doesn't like the metropolitan life. He hates crowds."

Sounds like a natural for the St. Louis Browns.

Williams, Spence Hit Home Runs

Boston, May 8 (AP).—The St. Louis Browns, consigned by nearly everyone but themselves to the American League cellar, up and socked Boston's highly regarded Red Sox, 9-4, today before 11,662 windswept customers.

Errors by the Sox didn't help the Sox starter, Lefthander Mickey Harris, who needed all the assistance he could get.

In the opening inning Sam Mele booted Bob Dillinger's drive and the Brownie third sacker went to third whence he scored on Chuck Stevens' ground-out.

The Sox scored singletons in the first and second and Ted Williams and Stan Spence homered on successive pitches in the eighth for the two final Boston runs.

Yanks Belt Tigers, 9-1 After Losing, 3 to 2

New York, May 8 (AP).—Hal Newhouser, Detroit's ace left-hander, went down to his fourth defeat today when the New York Yankees drove him from the mound with a seven-run seventh-inning blast to win the second game of a double-header, 9-1, and gain a split.

The Yankees bowed to Freddie Hutchinson's six-hit pitching 3-2 in the opener.

A seven-run seventh inning finished Newhouser. Until then the unfortunate southpaw had waged a keen pitching duel with Righthander Vic Raschi. A triple by Joe DiMaggio with two mates aboard in the sixth chased two runs over for the Yanks and ended a scoreless duel.

Vander Meer Beaten by Braves, 3-2

Cincinnati, May 8 (AP).—The Boston Braves, aided by a Cincinnati error and a walk pushed over three runs in the eighth inning to snatch today's game from the Reds 3-2. A crowd of 8,252 saw Johnny Vander Meer hand out seven hits to suffer his third defeat, a loss that left Cincinnati just 14 percentage points out of the National League cellar. Red Barrett was the winner.

Tulane Netters Down Navy, 8-1

Annapolis, Md., May 8 (AP).—Tulane's heavily favored tennis team beat Navy as expected today, but the going was a lot tougher than the 8—1 match score indicated.

Three of the Middie losses were in extra sets, and five additional sets were deuced before Tulane netmen pulled them out.

Sophomore Jack Tuero, Southeastern Conference champ, set down Navy's Leonard (Mike) Vogt, 6—4, 7—5, in a fiery match on the No. 1 court. Tuero, fourteenth ranking amateur in the Nation, lost the first four games before rallying to take control.

Army Vet Finally Sees Celebrities

Lieut. Ralph J. Anslow is particularly eager to actually see the National Celebrities tournament at Columbia Country Club next Sunday.

For almost five years, the 38-year-old Walter Reed patient wasn't able to see anything.

Then, just last week, Washington's Dr. James N. Greear, jr., renowned eye surgeon, performed an almost miraculous operation that has given Anslow 20/30 vision with corrective lenses.

Able to read about The Washington Post's star-studded Celebrities Tourney, the lieutenant promptly expressed a desire to attend. He will be a guest.

Said the lieutenant: "The affair sounds extremely interesting to me. I was here last year but, of course, only heard about it. Since my sight has been restored, I'm anxious to get out and see some of the biggest figures in our country."

For our money, there won't be a bigger celebrity at Columbia next Sunday than Lieutenant Anslow. He stout heartedly has spent a difficult five years in Army hospitals. He still has a long road to travel, but he is displaying indomitable courage.

Being blind hasn't been his only handicap. He's armless, too.

After serving a tour of duty in the Pacific, Lieutenant Anslow was the victim of an explosion in the Third Army's demolition school in Louisiana where he was an instructor.

Since August 11, 1943, it's been a wearisome round of hospitals, operations and suffering. He was told he had the most severe case recorded of powder burns about the face and head, but he never gave up.

How well he fought may be attested by the fact that Federal Security Administrator Oscar Ewing invited him to the National Health Assembly here as an expert on mental rehabilitation.

Spencer's 138 Paces Virginia Open Tourney

Hampton, Va., May 8 (AP).—Wynsol Spencer was an odds-on favorite tonight to become the first amateur to win the Virginia State Open Golf Championship since 1932.

The 28-year-old insurance salesman from Newport News breezed over the par 72, 6146-yard Hampton Country Club layout this afternoon in 3-under-par 69 for a total of 138 at the 72-hole tournament midway mark.

By coming in today with what was almost a carbon copy of the 69 round he fired yesterday, Spencer moved out in front of his nearest opponent by three strokes.

Three strokes behind Spencer was Eddie Dodson, unattached professional from Richmond. Dodson, 27 years old, fashioned a 71 today to with yesterday's 70 for a halfway score of 141.

Tied for third were Jack Isaacs, for 10 years professional at Langley Field, and Johnny O'Donnell, Norfolk pro, who had 143s. Isaacs, a familiar figure in State open tournaments for more than a decade, matched Spencer's 69 by touring the front nine in 34 and coming back in 35.

Yesterday, though, he had to settle for a 2-over-par 74.

Spencer and Isaacs weren't the only golfers from the field of 111 to mark up 69s today. There were two others—Bonnie Lowton and Fred Williams, both Norfolk amateurs. Both were far down the list in total scores, however.

One Round to Go

Barron Takes 17-Point Lead In Goodall Golf Tourney

New Rochelle, N. Y., May 8 (UP).—Herman Barron of White Plains, N. Y., virtually clinched victory in the Goodall round robin golf tournament today when he fought off the challenge of Bobby Locke and Bob Hamilton to take a 17-point lead with one round to go.

Face to face with his two closest rivals, the steady South African and the former P. G. A. champion from Prince Georges Country Club, Landover, Md., Barrow was scrambling his shots.

But he pulled himself up by his boot straps with crackling recovery shots and a nerveless putter for a one-under 71, his fourth straight sub-par round, and his second of the day.

Hot Fourth Round

Earlier he had fired another one-under par 71 to go with his previous 70-69. That put him farther out in front, but the blue chips were really down when he went out in the fourth round with his two closest rivals.

So the chunky fellow who hadn't won an important tournament since All-American Open two years ago went out in a wailing wind and proceeded to mow them down.

When the firing ended as the shadows settled over damp Wykagyl Country Club, he had taken one point from both Locke and Hamilton and padded his top spot with three points from Cary Middlecoff of Memphis.

That clutch round, with only one to do, virtually clinched it for Barron. For now he has a point total of 39—17 better than Hamilton's second-place tally of 22 and a cool 21 in front of the favored Locke.

Under Par With 281

Hamilton and Locke just couldn't cool him off. As a matter of fact they couldn't even match him, both scoring 72's to break even between themselves while Hamilton gained two points from Middlecoff's 73 and Locke drew with the Memphis dentist.

Barron, who forged in front yesterday despite a twisted ankle which almost caused his withdrawal, took an even greater edge in the morning round with a 38-33-71.

That was good for six points from Jimmy Demaret, four from Herman Keiser and held P. G. A. Champ Jim Ferrier all even.

Then came his chips-down 71 in the shadows of evening to send Hamilton and Locke reeling back and give Barron a 72-hole total of 281, seven under par for the four rounds.

Fervent Wins Dixie Handicap, Stymie Second, Incline 3d

Mike Corona having a good grip on the long shot. Contest was saving ground with Faultless lapped on him and Fervent being restrained a short distance away. Far in the rear, came Stymie with Conn McCreary having a strong hold on his long reins.

Contest Takes Lead

Contest, surprise stake winner at Havre de Grace last week, went to the front with a rush on the back stretch as Butler began to wilt.

However, Jockey D. MacAndrews hustled Faultless to keep close. In the meanwhile, Pierson continued to rate Fervent. There was some shuffling in position among the others, but Stymie was still the trailer, a dozen lengths off the top be exact.

It was on the swing to the stretch that the real action began. Pierson placed Fervent to a drive and the son of Blenheim 2d fairly ate up the ground to break up the front-running duel of Contest and Faultless.

Nearing the final bend, Fervent shot to the front as if he were representing gun powder instead of baking powder, Calumet, that is.

It was at this point, too, that McCreary took Stymie out and gave him his head.

Stymie's Bid Fails

Fervent made short work of Faultless and Contest. At the eighth pole he had a three-length lead and it was apparent that the only possible catcher in the crowd was Stymie. Double Jay had already made his move and was faltering.

In the final drive, Stymie came on and on—flying in his usual stretch-running fashion. But it was no dice. Pierson was driving Fervent for all he was worth. At the end, Stymie was still coming, but he was forced to be second just as he was in 1946 behind Calumet's Armed.

Incline proved something of a surprise third. The Washington horse, rested since his defeats at Bowie, showed a game finish to be third on the inside rail.

Stymie followers will tell you that Pimlico is a jinx track for the $818,560 money winner. He has won here only twice, taking the Riggs and Pimlico Cup, both in 1935.

This was the race Calumet would have liked to have won with Armed. However, Fervent proved a worthy substitute and gathered in $21,950 in winnings to make it $39,775 for this year, and $245,685 for his career for winning 13 of 24 races.

Henry A. Parr, 3d, presented a trophy to Jimmy Jones, the Calumet trainer, and it wasn't a Dixie cup, if you know what I mean.

D. C. 'Family' In Golf Play

George Smathers (D., Fla.)

Postmaster General Jess Donaldson and Secretary of Labor Lewis Schwellenbach also will take part.

Five of the top men who look after national defense will see what they can do with a golf ball. Gen. Omar Bradley, Chief of Staff, is the man the others will have to beat, for he is likely to dip into the 70's.

The others entered are Secretary of Army Kenneth Royall, Secretary of Navy John L. Sullivan, Secretary of Air W. Stewart Symington and Chief of Naval Operations Lewis Denfeld.

Pairings for the tournament, with approximately 50 celebrities entered, will be announced in a few days.

St. Albans Victor

St. Albans tennis team won its first Interscholastic Conference victory yesterday, defeating St. Andrews of Middleton, Del., 8-1, on the winners' courts. Jack Faircloth, Phil Israel and Murray Miles each won in singles and doubles for the victors.

single by Tucker set the stage for Doby's climactic clout.

Bearden's control was perfect for eight innings. For seven innings he was such complete master of the Nats that only three balls were hit out of the infield.

He tired obviously in the ninth when with one out he walked Yost and Kozar in succession and then filled the bases with two out by walking Vernon. McBride drew a walk on four straight pitches to force Yost home, and Manager Lou Boudreau excused Bearden with a comforting pat on the back.

IN SHORT—Gil Coan not only made the Nats' only two hits of the first seven innings, but he was a tremendous help in the field with one-hand catches of long drives by Gordon and Mitchell . . . In the first inning, Coan was out trying to stretch his single to short left, but his double in the fourth was a single to the same spot that he did stretch . . . Bearden's pitching was no complete surprise to the Indians who saw him beat the left-hitting Giants three times on their spring barnstorming tour . . . They got him originally from the Yankees as a thrown-in deal a couple of years ago . . . The Nats drop down into slower company today when the Browns move in for the start of a three-game series . . . Walt Masterson, a shut-out winner in his last start, will get the pitching job.

St. John's Beaten At Richmond, 10 to 3

Richmond, Va., May 8.—St. John's of Washington, D. C., jumped off to a 3-0 lead in the first inning but lost to Benedictine Prep, 10-3, here today. The losers were throttled after their initial outburst, making only five hits all day.

Howard 2d In CIAA Meet

Baltimore, May 8.—Going into the CIAA finals with one less qualifier than Howard University, Morgan College nonetheless successfully defended its championship by amassing 53 11/12 points here today.

Howard, of Washington, D. C., trailed with 37½. Closest to the runnersup was North Carolina State with 21.

Howard's James Bruce was the only double winner, coming home first in the mile and 2-mile. Morgan's mile relay team recorded a snappy 3.22 time to nip Howard's speedy quartet by a yard.

The other teams finished in this order: Shaw, 15; Delaware State, 14 1/6; West Virginia State, 8 /3; Virginia State, 8; Lincoln, 8; St. Augustine, 2; Johnson C. Smith, 2; Winston-Salem, 1; Greensboro A. & T., 1/6; Bluefield, 1/6.

Sanford Prep Easy Winner in Interstate Meet

Sanford Prep of Delaware ran away with the Interstate Athletic Conference track meet yesterday at Sidwell Friends School, piling up more than twice as many points as its nearest rival.

Sanford took five firsts and six seconds in running up 81 points, far ahead of second place Friends with 36. Landon was third with 31½, St. James next with 29½, followed by St. Andrews, 12 and St. Albans, 2.

Friends' Warren Groome was high point man of the meet, as he won the 120-yard high hurdles and the high jump and was a member of Friends' winning mile relay team.

Buckner's Home Run Wins for Silver Spring

Dave Buckner hit a home run in the sixth inning to give Silver Spring a 5-4 victory over Rockville yesterday at Rockville.

Pitcher Ralph Meikeljohn set down the losers with four hits.

Fairfax Loop Stars Make College Team

By Herb Heft
Post Reporter

The two-year old Fairfax County Baseball League has already become a major training ground for area college ballplayers. Seven loop graduates have earned college berths.

Last year's M. T. Rust team contributed Third Baseman Bob Huff and Centerfielder Bob Parrott to the University of Virginia, and First Baseman Don Druckenmiller and Outfielder-Pitcher Pete King to George Washington.

Falls Church helped develop Pitcher Lefty Freisen for Georgetown. Third Baseman John Hunten of Maryland played for Forestville last year. And another Terp, First Baseman Jim Moeller, performed for Fairfax.

Francis (Red) McMenamin, former Heurich Brewer infielder, has been appointed manager of the Post 24 team of Alexandria, junior American Legion champion of Virginia. McMenamin played for the same Legion team back in 1931. His assistant will be another former Heurich player, Woody Godfrey . . . D. C. Fire Department of the Recreation East League does its bit for the American Cancer Fund Society Lrive today. The local firemen journey to Schenectady, N. Y., where they meet the Kral Plumbing Co. of that city, with all proceeds going to that charity. Either Ben Harrell or Ernie Boggs will pitch for the firemen.

Leo May is different from the usual sandlot baseball team sponsors. Instead of providing uniforms and then forgetting about the team, he comes out and roots for his boys. He has backed a May Hardware Co. team in the Boys Club Western League for eight straight years, and has never missed seeing a game . . . These are busy days for Deet Lare, 16-year-old Capitol Heights, Md., athlete. A Prince Georges County High League ruling permits him to play for the school and on the sandlots during the same season. So on weekdays, he catches for Maryland Park High, and on Saturdays he toils for Maryland Aces in the Boys Club East League . . . Joe Cole, representing the District Recreation Department, and Cleo Michael of the Metropolitan Amateur Athletic Association, still have a few team openings in their new Negro Junior League for boys 17 and under. Managers desiring to enter are invited to call Cole at Adams 2050, extension 17.

6-Run Spree In 8th Wins Loop Game

George Washington University made a rousing bid for Southern Conference baseball honors yesterday as the carefree Colonials dug out of an 8-run deficit to score a 14-9 victory over Davidson on the Ellipse.

The Colonials collected only nine hits, but seven of them were bunched in two innings. Their first cluster of three hits accounted for five runs in the fourth, and it took only four safeties to put the game on ice with a six-run uprising in the eighth.

The eighth GW hit was Joe Wapinsky's home run with nobody on base in the fifth frame, one of three hits the converted gridman collected in four trips to the plate.

Tim Shank started for the Colonials and held Davidson to a 2-1 lead before being replaced by Bones Becraft at the start of the third inning. Becraft went all right for one stanza, but in the fourth the one-time conference leaders jumped on him for seven runs. Two hit batsmen, four errors behind him and Burris' triple featured the onslaught.

While Gene Gould and Pete King were holding the visitors runless thereafter, the Colonials were nibbling at Davidson's lead. Going into the eighth it was only 9-8, and coming out the Colonials were confident of their fifth league triumph in eight games.

Ten of the hosts went to bat in the 6-run eighth. It started off with losing Pitcher Torrence hitting King with a pitched ball. As it progressed the G-Streeters profited by a passed ball, wild pitch, sacrifice, stolen base, two bases on balls, two singles and doubles by Krikorian and Kuldell.

Randolph-Macon Beats Catholic, Wins Title

Randolph-Macon won the baseball championship of the Mason-Dixon Conference by defeating Catholic University, 8-7 yesterday at Brookland.

The winners banged 15 hits off three Cardinal hurlers, taking a 7-0 lead in the second inning. Catholic U. came back with three-run rallies in the seventh and eighth but were halted by R-M Pitcher Mack Thrift who relieved Al Tutwiler in the eighth.

Laurel Raceway Chief Really Has Rich Background

Richard H. Hutchison, jr., president and general manager of the new Laurel Raceway, brings a decided "horsey" background into harness racing.

The 30-year-old sportsman, whose farm is near Laurel, started riding in horse shows when he was in short pants. He captured a number of blue ribbons with his prize hunter, Keelhaul.

Then, while still a student at V. M. I., he was breeding, training and racing on the flat his own stable. He also found time to play four years of varsity polo at V. M. I.

War interrupted his interest in horses and he spent four years in the Army, being separated as a lieutenant colonel.

Since then he's been busy organizing the $600,000 plant that will present 20 nights of trotting with pari-mutuel betting beginning Monday, June 21.

Hoya Golfers Take Title

Philadelphia, May 8 (AP).—Georgetown University's golf team remained undefeated today in Southern district play in the Eastern Intercollegiate Golf Association tournament completing competition with successive triumphs over Penn, Navy and Virginia.

Georgetown, victorious over Penn 5-4 yesterday, edged Navy by a similar score in morning play today and then routed Virginia 7-2 in the round robin tourney.

By winning, Georgetown qualified to compete in the final championships at Atlantic City, N. J., next Saturday. In other matches today, Navy defeated Virginia, 5-4, and Penn lost to Virginia, 6-5.

Towson, Md., May 8.—Catholic U. netmen swept six singles matches and two of the three doubles to trounce Towson, 9-0, here today. Towson forfeited one doubles match.

It's a Game of Choose-up

By Tom Kelley—The Washington Post

Grad of Kids' School Now Teaches Class

KIDS ATTENDING the Walter Johnson Memorial Baseball Schools have become so proficient in their studies that they're now able to conduct classes themselves.

One of them did yesterday. He's Maurice "Sonny" Wills, a "graduate" of last year's Walter Johnson Memorial Baseball School.

Sonny, who says Chic Pieretti taught him all he knows about baseball, served as the instructor at Parkside yesterday when Nat Pitcher Dick Welteroth was unable to attend. He limited his talk to batting and pitching, which he does for Cardozo High School, and in the estimation of his class he did "a whale of a job."

Over at Union Market, where 100 assembled for another one of the fine classes conducted by Sherry Robertson, 14-year-old Gary Mays stole the show. He's a one-armed kid with the spunk of a tiger. He's in his second year at the Johnson School, too, and what do you think he did yesterday?

He caught. That's right. He caught the full game when the kids chose up sides.

Yesterday's second classes brought out crowds at all 20 locations. Session No. 3 comes up next Saturday. The names of the playgrounds where the schools will be held will be published in The Washington Post this week. Come on out and join the gang.

Public Links Trials Slated

New York, May 8 (AP).—Sectional qualifying trials for the National Public Links Golf Championship at Atlanta, Ga., July 19-24, were scheduled today at 44 points between June 27 and July 5 by the United States Golf Association.

The Mid-Atlantic area trial will take place June 29 at the Mount Pleasant Golf Club, Baltimore.

The 36-hole qualifying rounds will reduce the field to 210 players for both the individual championship and the play for the team title, slated to precede the tournamen proper on Atlanta's North Fulton Park course by two days.

Entries close June 16. Officials expect an entry list comparable to the 2633 players who participated in the qualifying tests last year.

The individual title will be decided entirely on a match play basis for the first time, a plan already adopted for the National Amateur Championship.

Also for the first time, the team title will be determined on a sectional basis, instead of intercity, and at 18 holes of stroke play, instead of the usual 36.

The three lowest scorers in each qualifying trial will become that section's team, provided they are bona fide residents of the section and qualify for the individual championship.

Yale Rowing Team Defeats MIT Easily

Cambridge, Mass., May 8 (AP).—After being delayed for more than three hours by rough water, Yale's powerful eight-oared varsity crew defeated the Massachusetts Institute of Technology sweepers by four lengths for a regatta clean sweep tonight on the Charles River.

The Eli bladesmen, beaten only by Navy this season, took command at the half mile mark and, rowing most of the time at a 34-beat, covered the 1¾-mile course in 10 minutes 45 seconds in almost total darkness.

Harvard Crew Wins, Navy Second in Regatta at Penn

Philadelphia, May 8 (AP).—Picking up the beat in the last third of a mile, Harvard University's crew defeated Navy and Penn today on the rough and windswept Schuylkill River to retain the Adams Cup.

The 5000 chilled spectators saw Coach Tom Boiles' conditioned crew squeeze to victory one length ahead of the midshipmen. Penn, which led through the first half of the race, was one-half a length behind Navy.

Harvard turned in the surprisingly fast time of 5:48 for the Henley distance of a mile and five sixteenths. The Middies covered the distance in 5:22 2/5 while Penn crossed the finish in 5:53 2/5.

It was Harvard's seventh victory in the Adams Cup Regatta since it was started in 1933. Navy has won three times, Penn twice.

Wisconsin Triumphs

Syracuse, N. Y., May 8 (AP).—Wisconsin's varsity crew, making its 1948 debut, showed the way today against Boston University in the final heat of a quadrangular regatta over a three-quarter-mile course.

The Badgers, stroked by Floyd S. Nixon of Grosse Point, Mich., won the right to meet Boston in the finals by eliminating Syracuse University. Boston reached the finals by outdistancing Columbia.

Brown Victor

New London, Conn., May 8 (AP).—Brown's crew, winning three of six races, piled up 55 points to set the pace in the two-day New England dinghy championships which opened today on the Thames River here. Yale, which finished on top in the other trio of brushes, trailed with 52.

Navy Holds Lead

Annapolis, Md., May 8 (AP).—Navy skippers held a slim lead at the halfway mark of the eighth annual Middle Atlantic Dinghy Championship Regatta on the Severn River today.

Only one point separated the three top teams when the boats were hauled up after the first of two days' sailing. Navy had 81, George Washington 80 and Army 70.

Placed behind the three team leaders were Penn with 71 points, Princeton 67, Drexel 54, Fafayette 53, Cornell 52, Haverford 46 and Stevens 43.

Yale Beats Harvard

Cambridge, Mass., May 8 (AP).—Yale's well balanced and favored track forces defeated Harvard 83½-56½ in the stadium today in the fifty-second such meeting between the ancient rivals.

Beau Jack Still a Power At Box Office

By Morris Siegel
Post Reporter

BEAU JACK isn't the boxing power he was three years ago, but he still retains a heavy wallop at the box office.

He's got a bad leg and he isn't even accorded an honorable mention spot in the welterweight ratings, but the former shoeshine boy manages to drag in the customers, nevertheless.

He's had three "major" fights since his kneecap collapsed against Tony Janiro 15 months ago, but from the tale of the box-office tape you'd deduct that he was a ranking contender instead of just another fighter wandering down comeback road.

In his first big outing since Janiro, whom he fights here May 17, made him a four-round TKO victim, the Beau broke Johnny Bratton's jaw before 16,000 Chicagoans who paid $73,000 to see the action. Next was a return to Madison Square Garden, where he holds the record as a main eventer, and a $50,000 house for his losing bout against Terry Young.

ONLY LAST month he invaded Canada for a rematch with Johnny Greco and a Montreal crowd chipped in $54,000 for the privilege of watching him whip the home town boy.

He'll never be the fighter he was before his kneecap busted, but the Beau retains one thing—a fighting heart. His rooters have come to know that whenever the Beau is in there, he's levelling. He, showed Washingtonians that as a preliminary boy in 1942 when he flattened one Joe Torres at Turner's Arena.

Four years later he headlined two consecutive shows at Griffith Stadium, dropping Sammy Angott in seven rounds on the first and pounding out a 10-round verdict over Danny Kapilow in a thriller in the second.

THE JACK brain trust, headed by wily Chick Wergeles, is trying to maneuver its meal ticket into a title scrap with Ray Robinson, king of the welters. A decisive win over Janiro here, mastermind Wergeles figures, would be a step in the right direction.

The first Beau Jack-Janiro fight in New York did $98,000 worth of business. Goldie Ahearn & Co., promoter of the May 17 venture, would shout to the heavens if the return did half that much. And you'll hear no moans from them, either, if the payoff is at the expected $25,000 mark.

After all, Jack isn't the hot shot he once was.

Hoya Sailors Win

Georgetown's "A" sailing team defeated George Washington's "B" team, 31-23, in a regatta on the Potomac yesterday. Bud Rohrer won all four races for the Hoyas.

7-6 Margin Saved by Tom Flynn

Georgetown University gave Pitcher Howie Newhard a 7-run lead over North Carolina after three innings at the Hilltop yesterday, but Tom Flynn was called in to save the game after the Tar Heels scored six times in the eighth inning. Flynn saved it, 7-6.

The victory is Georgetown's fifteenth against four losses and one tie.

The Hoyas scored three runs in the first on three singles, one run in the second on three Carolina errors and three runs in the third on three walks and a triple by Elmer Raba. Connie O'Doherty and Al Naples worked a double steal in the third, O'Doherty scoring from third.

North Carolina chased Newhard in the eighth with six hits, good for six runs. Flynn loaded the bases with Tar Heels in the ninth, but Dick Falvet threw out Jim Kelly at the plate to end the threat.

Terps Beat Quantico Behind Loomis, 8-1

Quantico, Va., May 8 (AP).—Bucky Loomis, former Marine, returned to Quantico this afternoon and limited his former teammates to two hits as the University of Maryland slapped out an 8-1 win over the Leathernecks.

Collecting their eight runs in the first three innings, and sending Jim Pope to the showers, the Terps were held to one hit during the remaining six innings by Relief Pitcher Jiggs Gilbert.

Al Cesky, Maryland left fielder, clouted a home run in the first frame after Al Tuminski had singled to left, for the first two tallies.

American U. Splits With Green Terrors

Westminster, Md., May 8 (AP).—American University of Washington nosed out Western Maryland, 7-6, in the first game of a double-header here today but ran into a 2-0 shutout in the second.

Both games were scheduled for seven innings, but the first had to go nine innings after the teams found themselves in a 6-6 tie at the end of the seventh inning.

In the second game, Munroe of Western Maryland held the visitors to four hits and struck out five men. Western Maryland garnered its scores in the first when, with two men on, Left Fielder Ernie Leake hit a triple.

3 National League Clubs Join BAA

Chicago, May 8 (AP).—The 10-year-old National Basketball League today appeared in danger of collapse. This followed disclosure that three key members will jump to the rival Basketball Association of America and Commissioner Ward (Piggy) Lambert will quit his $15,000-a-year job.

The Indianapolis Kautskys, Minneapolis Lakers and Fort Wayne Zollners are expected to announce their switch at a league meeting here Monday when Lambert also is scheduled to submit his resignation.

The BAA, only two seasons old but firmly entrenched in large cities, and the NBL were booked to meet jointly here Tuesday for a bi-lateral player draft meeting.

The National blowup was confirmed today by a spokesman of the Indianapolis Kautskys, who said the three jumping clubs considered the BAA "a tougher league" with bigger crowd potentials.

The break-up still would leave eight National League clubs—Anderson Packers, Tri-Cities Blackhawks, Syracuse Nationals, Oshkosh All Stars, Toledo Jeeps, Sheboygan Redskins, Flint Dow A. C., and the Rochester Royals—but some observers believe that the powerful Rochester entry also might hop to the BAA.

The BAA's present membership includes Washington, New York, Boston, Providence, Chicago, St. Louis, Philadelphia and Baltimore.

Quarter Finals
Maryland 4-Ball Golf Resumes

By Roger Wolbarst
Post Reporter

Four Washington teams, three twosomes from Baltimore and one from Annapolis meet in the quarter-final round of the Maryland State four-ball championship today at the Army-Navy Country Club.

Two of the District teams, Washington Golf and Country Club No. 2 anad Indian Spring No. 2 meet in one of the matches. In the other three brackets two Washington teams face out-of-town rivals and Baltimore and Annapolis clubs play.

The Annapolis Roads Club's team of Ralph Bogart and Jerry Hart, who upset defending champions George Voigt and Jim Kinder of Prince Georges last week, face Eddie Johnston and Ken Scales of Country Club of Maryland.

The other matches pit Harold Hare and Eddie Steptoe, Washington Golf and Country Club No. 2, against Jim Hunt and William McFerren, Indian Spring No. 2; Claude Rippey and Jim Gardner, Washington No. 1, against Bob Jones and Jesse Dowling, jr., Hillandale, and Buddy Sharkey-Eddie Ault, Indian Spring No. 1, against Eddie Meyer and Sid Schwinn, Country Club of Maryland.

DISTRICT GOLF is losing two of its stanchest supporters this month when Comdr. O. L. Young and Mrs. Young leave for Japan. Commander Young, former co-chairman of the Southern California junior golf program, is chairman of the executive committee of Prince Georges, chairman of the Middle Atlantic Golf Association youth activities committee and was general chairman of the National Capital Open Tournament. Mrs. Young is treasurer of the Women's District Golf Association and a WDGA first team captain. Area golfers wish the Youngs lots of luck in their lew locale . . .

DAVE SHERMAN playing the sixth hole at Bethesda Country Club, found himself in the rough 180 yards from the hole following his drive. He had previously taken a club from his bag, but when he came to his ball, he decided he needed a different one. Dave called to his caddie, but the boy was looking for another member of the foursome's ball on the other side of the fairway. Dave called again, but the boy didn't hear him. "Oh, well, I'll use this club," said Dave. Whereupon he hauled off and socked the ball to within 3 feet of the pin. Dave's new moto is: "You'll never flub, if you use the wrong club . . ."

MANOR CLUB is holding an all-day golfing event Thursday featuring a blind bogey tournament and driving contest. For information, call Lou Strieter at RE. 0015 . . . One of the most popular events of the District Golf Association season is the mixed Scotch foursome tournament at Prince Georges. The tourney will take place May 21 with members of all association clubs eligible. Entry fee is $3 and entries, together with handicaps, must be sent to Albert Steinem or Al Houghton at Prince Georges before May 16 . . . Bill Hardy, Chevy Chase's master clubmaker, did a rush job on Skip Alexander's seven iron after Skip broke the club after the third round of the Capital Open. Hardy had the club back in Skip's hands in time for the final day's play when Alexander clinched the tourney.

Miles Runs 220 in 22.3 For Record

By Herb Heft
Post Reporter

Three meet records were broken and another tied yesterday as Washington-Lee of Arlington successfully defended its Metropolitan High School Track Championship at Wilson Stadium.

The Little Generals scored a record 48 points to win the Wilson-sponsored meet for the third time in five years. They scored seven firsts and three seconds on the 14-event program. Trailing were Western with 32, George Washington of Alexandria with 22 and Woodrow Wilson with 14.

Eastern's Forrest Miles stole the show by setting a meet record in the 220-yard dash and tying the record in the 100, in the face of a stiff wind. He set the 220 record,

Team scores:
Washington-Lee of Arlington, 48; Eastern, 32; Georgetown Washington of Alexandria, 22; Woodrow Wilson, 14; Anacostia and Calvin Coolidge, 11 each; McKinley Tech, 9; Western, 3; Central and Roosevelt, 2 each.

during an early-morning trial heat by sprinting into the tape in 22.3 seconds. This was 3/10 seconds faster than the 1945 standard of G. W.'s Billy Rowe.

Runs 10-Second 100

Miles ran the "century" in 10 seconds to equal last year's record set by Gene Schroeder of Anacostia and Walter Camp of Roosevelt.

Bobby Jones, GW's smooth-striding junior, broke his own half-mile meet record for the second straight year. Galloping around the fifth-of-a-mile oval in 1:59.7, he beat out Wilson's Leigh Gunn by 30 yards.

He clipped 2.3 seconds off his old mark by romping home in 1:59.7 Undefeated for the past two years, Bobby has broken a meet record in his last three outings.

Relay Mark Set

Washington-Lee's swift foursome of Chuck Thomasson, Tommy Hilton, Rex Johnson and Eddie Fowler collaborated in setting a mile relay mark of 3:29.5, 1.5 seconds faster than W-L's previous record for the meet, set in 1944.

These four were the major figures in W-L's victory accounting for 20 points. Thomasson, Hilton and Johnson, and Jack Velardi won first in the mile relay. Fowler and Hilton finished one-two in the 440, and Johnson took a third in the 220.

Trophy as outstanding field performer went to another W-L boy, Les Cockerill, who won the discus competition with a heave of 115 feet 9½ inches.

National Capital Saddle Group Holds Its First Show Today

By Harry De Mawby, Jr.

The first annual horse show of the National Capital Saddle Horse Association is scheduled at 11 a. m. today at the Meadowbrook horse show grounds, East-West hwy., Chevy Chase.

The association, organized to endeavor to increase the interest and further the prestige of the American-bred saddle horse in this section of the country where hunters and jumpers have long been predominant, is sponsoring the event for the benefit of the Silver Spring Boys' Band of Silver Spring.

One of the largest collections of the high-stepping horses seen in this locality in the past few years is expected.

Among the entries anticipated are Nehi Sensation owned by Ray Book of Dover, Del.; Daisy C. Dare owned by Ben Johnson of Dover, Del.; Senator Wayne B. Morse's Spice of Life, Warner Pumphrey's Nobel Gala, Silver Day, Amity Peavine and Idle Boy; Dr. F. Masino's Kings General, A. W. McDormand's Mr. Bee and Mercer's Copper King.

D. C. Drivers in Phila.

Philadelphia, May 8.—Stover and Willard Babcock, Washington, D. C., brothers, will present 100 miles of competition tomorrow when they open the Langhorne, Pa., Speedway's 1948 season with a speed stock car racing card.

Georgetown Track Winner

Georgetown brushed past Quantico Marines, 70-56, yesterday in a dual track meet in which two Georgetown records were established.

Vince Cino, member of the crack freshman mile relay team, gave an extremely satisfactory sprinting performance. The Brooklyn lad won the 100 and 220, setting a new record in the latter—22 seconds.

Quantico's Bill Jessie established the other mark, throwing the javelin 184 feet, 6 inches. Jessie also was a double winner, taking the discus event.

The Hoyas' superiority in track events paid off. When the Marines threatened in the field events, Georgetown swept the broad jump.

Bill Mitchell, Hoya hurdler, fell in his specialty and had to be content with a second in the discus.

The summaries:
100-YARD DASH—1, Cino (GU); 2, Allen (GU); 3, Winger (Q). Time, 9.9 seconds.
220-YARD DASH—1, Cino (GU); 2, Sause (GU); 3, Allen (GU). Time, 22 seconds (track record).

Leahy Coaches

Chicago, May 8 (AP). — Notre Dame's Frank Leahy will coach the Nation's top collegians against the Chicago Cardinals, National Football League champions, in the fifteenth annual all-star game at Soldier Field, August 20.

Leahy was in command a year ago when the Collegians spilled the favored Chicago Bears, 16-0.

Bowling Benefits Honor Frazier at Two Area Alleys

Two area bowling alleys, Lucky Strike and Clarendon, will honor Monk Frazier, late manager of Lucky Strike, with a pair of benefit bowling matches this week. Proceeds of both matches will go to Frazier's family.

The Metropolitan Washington Duckpin Operators Association will hold a memorial tourney at Lucky Strike Sunday, May 16. Entry fee is $3.75 and scratch is 128 with full handicap for men and women.

Julie Singer's Winchester Packard team of the men's major District league will oppose Bob Davidson's Baltimore Recreation Center team in a special benefit match at Clarendon Friday, May 21.

The Sports Reel
Blackwell OK, Just Needs Rest

Cincinnati, May 8 (AP).—There is nothing wrong with Ewell Blackwell's right shoulder and arm that a few days' rest will not cure, the Cincinnati Reds' star pitcher was told today. Blackwell, who had to leave yesterday's game with Boston in the sixth inning because of pain in his shoulder, got the good word from Dr. Reed Shank this afternoon after the ailing member had been X-rayed.

Chandler's Visit Social?

New York, May 8 (AP).—Spud Chandler, veteran pitcher released by the New York Yankees a month ago, visited his former mates today before they took the field for a twin bill with the Detroit Tigers. Although Chandler insisted the visit was entirely social, the rumor persisted that he came north from his St. Petersburg, Fla. home in hopes of finding a major league berth, perhaps with the Yankees.

Ruth Signs Again

Detroit, May 8 (AP).—Babe Ruth has been re-engaged as consultant in the American Legion Junior baseball tournament, the Ford Motor Co., tourney sponsor, announced today.

Ford did not disclose terms of its 1948 contract with Ruth, but J. R. Davis, a vice president, said the Babe would be "high on the list of baseball's top money earners."

Cooper Out for 2 Weeks

Pittsburgh, May 8 (AP).—Dr. Robert F. Hyland told the New York Giants today it would take Catcher Walker Cooper's injured knee two or three months to heal permanently.

On the other hand, Hyland said in a telephone conversation from St. Louis, if the bone chips were removed from the knee by an operation, the slugging catcher would be ready to play in two or three weeks.

Cooper injured the knee in a collision with Bobby Bragan of the Brooklyn Dodgers in the second game of the season.

Stanky Feverish

Cincinnati, May 8 (AP).—Eddie Stanky, second baseman for the Boston Braves, was ordered to stay in bed today when he developed a fever.

It was Stanky's single in the sixth inning yesterday that drove in the winning runs against Cincinnati. The final score was 4 to 3.

No Parking Problem

Chicago, May 8 (AP).—Owner Joe Lencki and his "Speedway Cocktail Special" won't be troubled by a space problem at the trials for the Memorial Day 500-mile race in Indianapolis.

Lencki will leave for the trials tonight with a "traveling garage," a 22-foot trailer which easily accommodates his 15-foot racer and is completely tooled for all emergencies.

Kramer, Riggs Tangle Here Saturday

Jack Kramer and Bobby Riggs make their second appearance here this year when they meet in a best two-out-of-three set match Saturday night at Uline Arena.

The two tennis stars played before a sell-out crowd of 6300 in their last match here in January. At that time, however, the two were battling for the lead in their series. When Kramer won 6—2, 6—2, it caused some surprise among local tennis followers.

But since then the rangy Kramer has demonstrated his superiority over Riggs in no uncertain manner. He has won on an average three of every four matches the two have played and it is a rare night when Riggs can crack through to a victory.

Although much of the tension has vanished from their individual series, Riggs and Kramer continue to play before large crowds.

Perhaps it is because they are the greatest players in the world today. Kramer, without a doubt, has proved the best, both in amateur ranks and now against the professional titleholder, and Riggs is still second only to Kramer.

In a preliminary match, Dinny Pails, formerly Australian amateur champion, will meet pigeon-toed Pancho Segura, the foremost crowd pleaser among the pros. Following the Kramer Riggs singles encounter, Kramer and Segura will face Riggs and Pails in doubles.

Loss First Of Year for Maryland

West Point, N. Y., May 8 (AP).—Paced by All-American Ted Marley, who scored three goals and was credited with three assists, the Army lacrosse team scored a surprising 10-1 victory over previously unbeaten Maryland on The Plain today.

The Cadets took a 6-1 lead in the first half and coasted to their most impressive victory of the season. Bill Ruppersberger avoided a shutout for the Terps when he scored in the opening minutes.

Navy Stickmen Loses to Hopkins

Annapolis, Md., May 8 (AP).—Johns Hopkins' championship lacrosse team came from behind in the last five minutes to halt an underdog Navy team, 9 to 8, in a breathless bone-crushing encounter at Farragut Field.

Unbeaten Hopkins won its sixth straight when Midfielder Ray Greene flicked home a backhand heave in the final minute.

Navy Goalie Dick Seth was practically impregnable going into the last five minutes when the roof fell in. Hopkins, trailing 6 to 8, poured in three goals for the victory.

Navy	2	2	2	2—8
Hopkins	2	3	1	3—9

Scoring: Navy—Coulter (4), Sivinski, Chambers, Allen, Wall; Hopkins—Tunstall (3), Smith (2), Fewster, Shepard, Greene, Pohlhaus.

No-Hitter Tops Play in Three WBC Leagues

Al Herndon, pitching for Murphy's, hurled a no-hitter yesterday to give his team a 7-0 victory over Alexandria "B" and feature hostilities in the Boys' Club of Washington Midget Baseball League. Other games went to Peoples, 5-4, over Washington Flour; Maloney, 6-1, over George's; Trinidad, 13-4, over Eastern Nats; and Alexandria "A," 12-2, over the Early Birds.

In the junior division Hutchison defeated Industrial Home School, 13-1; Edmonds tripped Barney House, 10-7; and Alexandria nosed out Georgetown Blues, 8-7.

Senior division clashes went to Federal Storage by 9-3 over May's; Barney House by 13-0 over I. H. S.; and Alexandria by 12-0 over Sealtest.

Fred Daly Wins Golf by 10 Strokes

Southport, England, May 8 (AP).—Fred Daly, British open champion, won the Dunlop £2000 ($8000) professional golf championship today when he defeated Ted McNeill of Ireland by 10 strokes in their 36-hole playoff.

Daly shot a 69 on the second 18 to finish with 141, while McNeill's 80 gave him a 151 total. McNeill, a former RAF radio operator who is assistant to Daly at the Belfast course, forced the playoff when he posted a brilliant 34 on the final nine holes yesterday.

Howard Loses Doubleheader

Two Howard University pitchers gave a pair of opponents only 12 hits in two games, but the Bisons lost a twin bill on the Ellipse yesterday. Upsala beat the Bisons, 13-9, and Lincoln won, 1-0.

Howard outhit Upsala, 15-7, in the first game but 10 Howard errors handed the visitors an easy triumph.

Lincoln's Walter Brooks held the Bisons to two hits in the nightcap. His teammates scored once in the first inning on three hits and made only two more off Howard Harriss.

TICKER, $5.60, $3.60, $3.00; TROUT LAKE, $4.60, $3.60; IMAGE OF LOVE, $4.40.

TICKER went to the front at once, drew out and won with speed in reserve. TROUT LAKE broke slowly, worked way to contention and closed gamely. IMAGE OF LOVE was well placed from start and held on well. GREMY, away slowly, rallied mildly. SOME WHERE failed to rally when placed to pressure. GIFTED MISS had early speed. GOLDEN BROWN weakened early.

DAILY DOUBLE—HUNTER F. AND TICKER—PAID $178.80.

THIRD RACE—One and one-half miles. Purse, $3500. For 4-year-olds and up; claiming. Start good for all but Free Speech. Won galloping; place easily. Went to post at 3:10. Off at 3:10½. Winner, D. K. †Calumet Farm entry.

FERVENT, $5.60, $3.20, $2.60; STYMIE, $5.00, $3.60; INCLINE, $6.00.

FERVENT was steadied while within striking distance and on the outside, responded when put to pressure leaving backstretch, circled FAULTLESS and CONTEST to take command and was under strong handling at end. STYMIE, slow to begin as usual and bearing out slightly leaving the gate, was allowed to race on his own courage for the half, came to the outside when placed to a drive and was closing in on FERVENT at end. INCLINE went in a good position, came to inside and held on gamely under good handling.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $2500. For 4-year-olds and up; claiming. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 5:45. Off at 5:45. Winner, D. Gilkey's br. g. (6) by Bow to Me—Bohemian Lass by Polymelian. Trained by D. Gilkey. Value to winner, $1625. Time, 1:53.

Cleaners Delve Into Problem Of Shrinkage

There's dirty business going on out in Silver Spring, Md.

The National Institute of Cleaning and Dyeing is concerned with every part of it—why some materials are harder to clean than others, why some fabrics shrink in dry cleaning, for example.

The NICD is a cooperative for research. Started in 1907 in Milwaukee with 25 large and small cleaning companies as members, it now has 6285 member firms, and more than 100 employes.

For its membership the NICD provides information on cleaning problems and cleans difficult garments sent from all parts of the country.

Growing Necessity

Research has been a growing necessity for cleaners, says J. M. Matson, managing director. "Before the war claims in cleaning plants ran about one-half of 1 per cent of total sales," he says, "now they are up to 1-and-a-half per cent."

Inexperienced help is part of the reason, he grants, but another is the rapid postwar development of new fabrics and materials. Analysis work on "troublesome" articles of clothing forwarded by member firms is the major job of the NICD's staff of chemists.

To aid their work they have a mechanical "agitator" which gauges the amount of wear and tear a fabric can take, and a "fado-meter" to test light fastness. NICD experts claim they can distinguish between holes due to chemical damage and those due to mechanical damage by studying the material under a fluorescent lamp.

More Shrinkage Complaints

Cleaners have had more complaints since the war about shrinkage of wool than anything else, Fulton says.

Sometimes it is the fault of the fabric itself, he says, and at other times it may be the relative humidity in the cleaner's room before the wool is cleaned—and the moisture added during cleaning—that causes the wool to shrink.

Institute researchers also say the reason some plastic-coated raincoats "crinkle" after cleaning is because cleaning solvents dissolve the "plasticizer." Their solution: put the "plasticizer" back into the raincoat after cleaning.

The NICD, 8001 Georgia ave., in Silver Spring, now has two buildings, one of which houses the executive offices and the other a modern cleaning plant.

A new $640,000, three-story brick building is expected to be ready about August 1, according to Matson.

When the building is ready, the NICD will increase its students from 150 to 200. The students come from all parts of the country. They must have at least a year of practical experience in cleaning before they can take up the NICD's 12-week course.

"The course is intensive," Matson says, "eight hours a day and home work. They soon find it is no vacation."

The NICD last year set up a West Coast branch at Glendale, Calif., where members in 11 Western States sent their analysis problems.

Among the Institute's members are many foreign companies, and the organization is now helping New Zealand establish its own research institute.

Train Crashes Into Another In Dense Fog

Montgomery, Ala., May 8 (AP).—Two luxury trains narrowly missed a tragic wreck today when one rammed the other head-on in a dense fog.

As it happened, one of them—the Miami-to-Chicago Florida Arrow was standing still—and the Louisville & Nashville Railroad's Hummingbird, a streamliner, was slowing up.

A trainman said the Hummingbird missed a signal in the fog and failed to take a siding.

Several persons were injured but only four were taken to a hospital for treatment. The others were given first aid at the scene.

The engines of both trains, two cars of the Hummingbird and one of the Arrow were realled. None overturned. The Streamliner was making a run from Cincinnati to New Orleans.

It was the fourth minor accident for the Hummingbird this year.

In another railroad mishap today, a New York Central mail and express train hauling one passenger coach was derailed 2 miles south of Shelby, Ohio. The locomotive and 10 of the 14 cars left the tracks, but no one was injured.

Carnival at School

Saint Bernadette's School, Four Corners, Md., will open its second annual Pot O'Gold Carnival Monday on the school grounds. Kiddie rides and other entertainment for the youngsters will open at 6:30 p. m. The carnival will be held through May 22.

Navy Camera Takes Pictures At Rate of 100 Million a Second

Inyokern, Calif., May 8 (AP).—A camera which can take pictures at the rate of 100 million per second was shown publicly for the first time today by the Navy.

It is so fast that a light ray, traveling at 186,000 miles a second, can move only 10 feet during one exposure.

Some day, its inventor said, it may be able to photograph the head of a beam of light coming out of an electric bulb.

Shown at Dedication

The camera was displayed at the dedication of the eight-million-dollar Michelson laboratory of the naval ordnance testing station. This laboratory will pioneer the Navy's guided missiles and other weapons of the future.

Inventor of the camera is Dr. A. M. Zarem. The instrument consists mainly of two light-polarizing lenses set in such a way that light will not pass through them. When two electric terminals in a glass tube are placed between the lenses and a high voltage charge is sent through the circuit, light can pass through as long as the electrical charge remains there.

Requires 100 Cameras

Film could not be moved through one camera fast enough. To photograph the whole period of a millionth of a second requires 100 cameras, each focused on a particular part of a long film strip and set off in a sort of chain reaction.

The ordnance testing station occupies a space roughly the size of the State of Rhode Island on the Southern California desert. Here among a population of 12,000 technicians, servicemen and laborers, 130 scientists dream up, build and test many of this country's most destructive missiles. Much of their work is top secret.

Panama Tense For Balloting On President

Panama, May 8 (AP).—Panama entered an uneasy weekend today with balloting for President, two vice presidents and 42 national assemblymen to take place Sunday.

Political tempers were keyed to a high pitch anad many believed the situation potentially dangerous.

There are five candidates for President in Panama's first popular voting for the office since February 6, 1940. Three considered really in the running are Jose Isaac Fabrega, Domingo Diaz Arosemena and Arnulfo Arias Madrid.

Last Sunday's country-wide municipal elections showed them almost evenly matched.

The Liberals, who are the government party, support Diaz. Arias of the authentic Revolutionary Party, was bloodlessly deposed from the presidency in 1941.

Spokesmen for his party have warned that unless there was honest voting and an impartial count Panama might have the same experiences as Colombia and Costa Rica, scenes of recent revolts.

Strong police precautions will be taken.

Questions Put To Folsom in Paternity Suit

Cullman, Ala., May 8 (AP).—James E. Folsom, Alabama's newly wed Governor, was asked today, in an amendment to a paternity suit, whether he had not acknowledged Mrs. Christine Putman Johnston as his wife on numerous occasions.

Mrs. Johnston, and her 2-year-old son, asked that Folsom be declared her common-law husband and the father of the boy in suits filed two months ago.

Attorneys for Mrs. Johnston filed interrogatories in the case in Circuit Court today.

Folsom was married Wednesday to Jamelle Moore, 21-year-old State employe.

In the paper filed today, Folsom was asked to file answers to several questions bearing on the suit.

One question asked if the Governor and Mrs. Johnston occupied the same bedroom at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Billy Pickelmayer in Hanceville, and whether he informed the Pickelmayers that they were married.

Another question asked of Folsom was whether he said to Pickelmayer, "Billy, us men ought to keep our wives barefooted and pregnant."

A hearing on the case will be held Wednesday.

De Facto Rule Established In Costa Rica

San Jose, Costa Rica, May 8 (U.P.). A de facto government was set up today by Jose Figueres, leader of the successful right-wing revolution that overthrew Communist-supported Teodoro Picado last month.

Known as the Founding Junta of the Second Republic, the new government consists of Figueres as President and commander in chief of the army, and nine cabinet ministers.

The junta will rule by decree for 18 months to 2 years.

One of its first acts was to dissolve Congress, where Picado's Republican Party had a majority.

Mother's Day Play

A play entitled "The Jewish Mother of 1948," and an address by Rabbi Harry J. Kaufman, will highlight the Mother's Day celebration of the Sisterhood of Beth Sholom Congregation and Talmud Torah, at 8:30 Monday night, in the auditorium of Beth Sholom, 8th and Shepherd sts. nw.

Strikes Close Puerto Rico University

San Juan, Puerto Rico, May 8 (U.P.).—The University of Puerto Rico was closed today for the remainder of the term after a week of demonstrations by striking students. Thirty-five students have been arrested.

The closing was decided at a meeting of Gov. Jesus Pinero, University Chancellor Jaime Benitez, Senate President Luis Munoz Marin, Maj. Gen. Roy Porter, commander United States Army Antilles Department; Brig. Gen. Luis Raul Esteves, commander of the National Guard, and Insular Police Chief Col. Salvador T. Roig.

Unconfirmed reports said they had decided to declare martial law if student disorders continue.

Summer vacations begin in two weeks.

Student agitation began April 15 after Benitez refused to allow Nationalist Leader Pedro Albizu Campos to speak at the university auditorium. A number of demonstrations have occurred.

Officials have described the situation as "very serious."

They see the student insurrection as the start of a series of disorders between now and the November insular elections, when Puerto Rico is slated to elect its own governor for the first time. Heretofore, the governor has been appointed by the President of the United States.

The Nationalists, demanding outright independence from the United States, have boycotted the elections. They also have announced that they will refuse to register if the U. S. Selective Service is reinstated here.

Sleeping Baby Cut When Ball Hits Window

A 14-month-old baby cut by glass while sleeping when a baseball crashed through a window, was among the 113 District residents hospitalized by home accidents last week, the District Red Cross Accident Prevention Service reported.

Six deaths also resulted from such accidents, three of them from falls. A young woman died after accidentally discharging a gun into her chest, an infant was suffocated, and a 44-year-old man took a fatal overdose of a drug.

By far the greatest cause of injury was falls, 52 of which sent persons to hospitals with broken arms, ribs, a nose, a collarbone and a dislocated shoulder. One young woman fell down stairs and cut a long gash in her mouth.

A middle-aged man sprained his back by lifting a stove, while two children and a 60-year-old woman had their arms caught in washing machine wringers. A 9-year-old girl cut her knee on a piece of wire while doing somersaults, and a baby of 10 months cut her cheek with a hanger hook which caught in her mouth. A woman who was hanging a picture injured her eye with a nail, while another was burned in the eyes and face when an oven exploded as she lit it.

Children were also injured during the week by swallowing pencil lead, a toy jack, drug tablets, baby powder and liniment.

Senate Interior Committee Backs C&O Parkway Bill

The Senate Interior Committee indorsed yesterday a bill authorizing $40,000 to survey of a proposed parkway between Great Falls and Cumberland, Md.

The House-approved measure would authorize the survey to be undertaken jointly by the Public Roads Administration and the National Park Service along the route of the historic Chesapeake & Ohio Canal.

The parkway paralleling the canal would connect at Great Falls with the George Washington Memorial Parkway leading into Washington.

Like Something Unusual?

If you do, come and see this unique house, between 2 and 6 today. You'll be intrigued. The setting is lovely, with the careful landscaping which has gone into it. The house itself is white frame and from the outside you'll never guess the floor plan. You'll find the arrangement suitable for 1 family or for use as 2 apts., and if you've ever been lulled to sleep listening to rain on a tin roof, you'll love the 2 pine-paneled bedrooms upstairs. There is a recreation room and a laundry room with Bendix. The garage seems hardly one at all for it is insulated, paneled, asphalt-tiled and even has a built-in radio. All this for $12,650, believe it or not. Come out Wilson blvd. to Jefferson st., left one block, right to Kensington and left to 709 Kensington st. and Open sign.

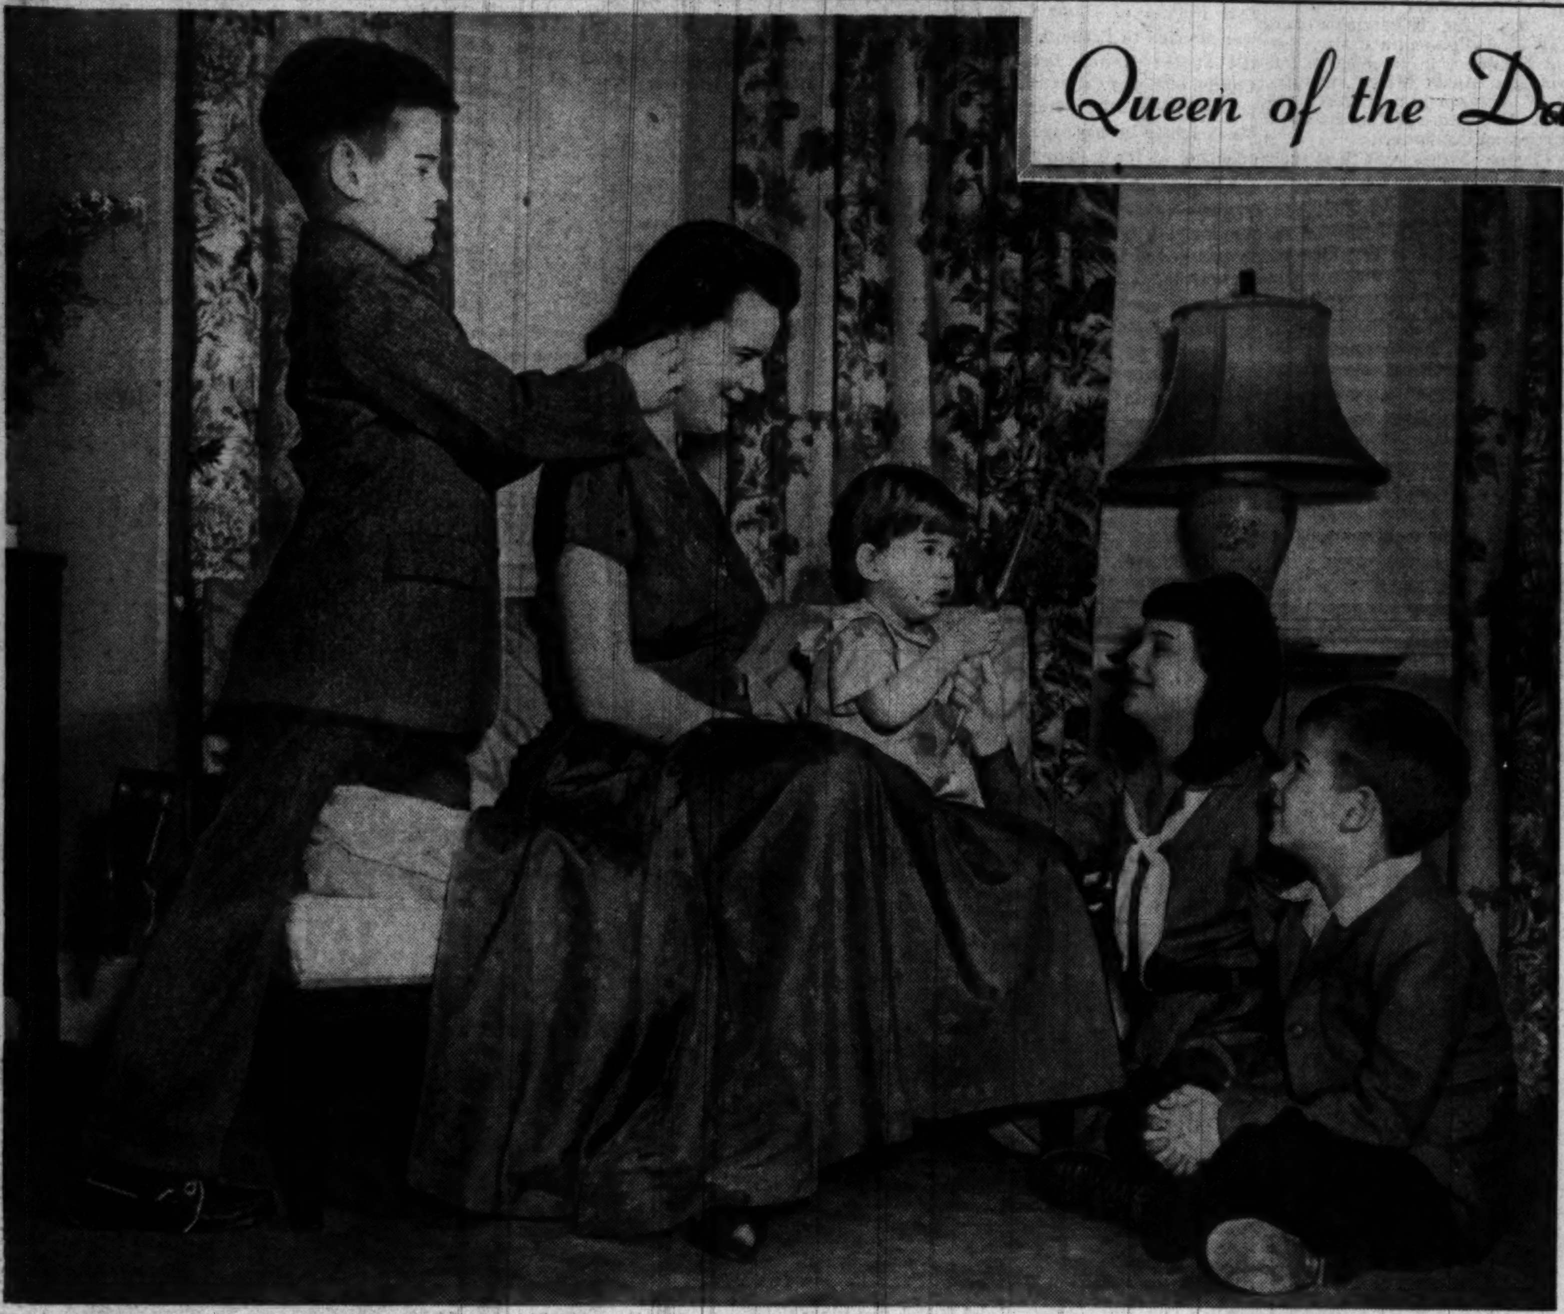
Queen of the Day



Harris & Ewing Photos

Miss Thomson Betrothed

Emily Saltonstall and R. E. Byrd, Jr., Engaged; Miss Alvord to Marry

DURING MAY, in the lull before the June bride appears, engagement announcements claim the attention of society. Three particularly interesting announcements just made are the Alvord-Loweth engagement and the Saltonstall-Byrd and Thomson-Lees betrothals.

SENATOR AND MRS. LEVERETT SALTONSTALL of Dover, Mass., have announced the engagement of their daughter, Emily Bradley, to Richard Evelyn Byrd, jr., son of Rear Admiral and Mrs. R. E. Byrd of Boston.

Miss Saltonstall attended Windsor School, St. Timothy's School and Scripps College. During the war she served three years in the Waves as R. M. First Class in Naval Communications. She is now studying at Northeastern University.

Mr. Byrd attended Milton Academy and Harvard College, graduating in 1942. In the war he served as a lieutenant with a special naval aviation unit in the Pacific. He was a member of the United States Naval Expedition to the Antarctic which was led by his father in 1946-47. He is now in the television field in Boston.

MRS. ALEXANDER THOMSON of Warrenton, Va., announces the engagement of her daughter, Miss Eleanor Torrence Thomson, to Douglas Harcourt Lees, jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. D. H. Lees, also of Warrenton, Va.

Miss Thomson attended Sacred Heart Academy, New York City, and was graduated from Warrenton Country School. Following her 18 months service in the Waves she attended Katherine Gibbs School, Boston, Mass.

The bride-elect is the daughter of the late Alexander Torrence Thomson of Edinburgh, Scotland, and the granddaughter of Mrs. Albert Ranlett of New Orleans, La., and the late Mr. Ranlett.

Her fiance attended Episcopal High School, Alexandria, Va., and served four years in the Army. He is the grandson of the late Mr. and Mrs. George Stone of Warrenton and of the late Sir Harcourt and Lady Lees of England. The wedding will take place in June.

MR. AND MRS. ELLSWORTH CHAPMAN ALVORD have announced the engagement of their daughter, Betty Pierpont, to William Richard Loweth, son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph H. Loweth of New Rochelle, N. Y.

Miss Alvord attended the National Cathedral School for Girls and will be graduated from Vassar College this month. She is majoring in music. She is a direct descendant of the Rev. James Pierpont, one of the founders of Yale University, and also of Dr. John Darby, a founder of Alabama Polytechnic Institute, Auburn, Ala. Mr. Alvord, senior partner in the law firm of Alvord & Alvord, is treasurer and a director of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States.

Mr. Loweth is a graduate of Columbia College, class of '43 and is a member of Alpha Delta Phi Fraternity and of the Senior Society of Nacoms. He was president of his class during his freshman and junior years and a member of the Varsity Crew for three years.

During the war the prospective bridegroom was commanding officer of a submarine chaser and a patrol craft escort type vessel. He was discharged as a lieutenant (j. g.) after three years' service in the Atlantic and Pacific waters.

The wedding will take place in the fall.

War Alumni, All Smiles, Return to Toil for ECA; G.O.P. to Introduce Glide

By Mary Van Rensselaer Thayer

THINGS WE'VE LIKED LATELY. The White House pansy beds, the tall pink tulips fringing the jetting fountains.—The raspberry, white, green mints, all for free, the discreet bowl of toothpicks, ditto, at the Carlton . . . The shamrock green ink Jim Farley uses to sign his personal letters . . . The added zing to spring cocktail parties—dozens of gents, their faces crinkled in smiles, all wartime Washington alumni, happily returned from such far-flung outposts as New York to toil in ECA.

Rear Adm. Neill Phillips and the French Embassy's Capt. Pierre Lancelot's invitation: "Combined Operation. Two marins celibataires will drop anchor at—such and such a place, day, hour—and invite you to 'casser la croute' with them." Then, in the corner the superfluous admonition "informal." . . .

Mrs. Hendrick Eustis' red burnoose, a handy evening wrap these chilly evenings . . . The epistolary salutation accorded Henry Knott Sherrill, Presiding Bishop of the Episcopal Church, by his irreverent Harvard 1911 classmates—"Dear Hank, Your Lordship." . . . The week's most rending plaint: former Herald-Tribuneman Joe Barnes, who has just picked up PM's editorship, sighed "I'm so tired I've had to stop drinking!" . . . Max, the Herbert Ellistons' tailless cat. Max acquired his distinguished New Look the hard way. Curiosity overcoming caution, he made a too intimate investigation of a motorized lawn mower . . . The newly reshaped "figgers" around town now that Emmerich Siposs, the Hungarian born exerciser-de-luxe, has returned from California . . .

The Republican Ball

AT THE Republican Ball at the Mayflower, May 24th, all presidential candidates, including the jettest of black horses, are expected to put in an appearance. Besides appraising presidential possibilities at close range, paying guests, (and thousands are expected), will have the giddy opportunity of seeing a new dance introduced. By a curious coincidence, it is called "The Republican Glide."

Trivia of the Times

PALS FROM Philadelphia are telling tales of pre-Republican boom. Offered $500 for their small house during convention week, they have refused to miss the fun unless the ante is raised another five hundred smackers. Meanwhile, houses, rooms, beds, sofas and, probably, air mattresses and hammocks, are being snapped up like cheesecake . . .

"Pop" Harsh, otherwise known as Allen M., is en route to his Meadow Lane farm near Hot Springs. Composer of Yale's famous "Boola-Boola" song, nowadays he is the country's biggest pipeman. Pop puts water, not tobacco, in his pipes, recently re-did Santo Domingo's water system, is currently burrowing in Brazil . . .

Cheerful note in the Capital's struggle to maintain the National Symphony Orchestra—Conductor Hans Kindler's marriage to the former Persis Myers Hill.

Fairfield Osborn, author of the best-seller, "Our Plundered Planet," here briefly for the Health Conference. President of New York's Zoological Society, he is an expert about food in relation to conservation. His absorbing book deals with man's conflict with nature. With terrifying clarity Mr. O. shows how man is destroying his own life's resources, how misery more dreadful than we have ever experienced, even man's annihilation, is due if we don't correct our thoughtless ways. But despite approaching doom, Mr. Osborn manages to retain humor, wit and, out socially, is very gay indeed . . .

Entertaining Mrs. McCleery

MRS. RICHARD McCLEERY, Burlingame's crack bridge player, has dropped in, sub-let the Norman Armours' house until June. Entertaining more than anyone, except possibly inexhaustible Mrs. George Mesta, she is not satisfied with crowding in friends day and night, and is giving a dance at the F Street Club . . .

Speaking of clubs, the Sulgrave made an experiment in luxury last week. As spring harbinger, a bottle of Elizabeth Arden cologne was placed in the ladies' room. Since there is nothing more femininely tempting than perfuming-for-free, the bottle was emptied by dinner time. Now Sulgraveites and guests must smell nice strictly on their own! . . .

Good works we're going to like—Tuesday's Lisner Auditorium Carnival and Fashion Show gotten up by the Women's Board of the new George Washington University Hospital. Outstanding feature, as this greedy department sees it, is the welter of door prizes. One is a television set which Mrs. Dolly Gann wants very much to win. The center of the 1920's most exciting protocol whirlwind, the late Vice President Charlie Curtis' sister, has never missed a Republican convention. But should she win the television set, she'll stay home June 23d. Other prizes include a flock of Sportsmen watches. Remember the angler in Minnesota who lost his wrist watch? Days later it was discovered in a trout's tummy, was wound and ticked perfectly.

European Notes

LATEST round of Eastern Europe political refugees are Czechs. To connoisseurs on escape, the Czech underground functions more efficiently than any other. They even manage to dim lights on the trains carrying political bigwigs to border towns, thus making disguises more effective. Latest story on Jan Masaryk's death is that he poisoned himself and, found by Communist-controlled secret service men, was thrown out the window to make his death more dramatic propaganda instrument . . . Positively last bulletin on King Michael—Princess Anne has said "yes," the wedding is to take place in Lausanne.

Bruces Say Farewell At Dance

By Marie McNair

MR. AND MRS. DAVID K. E. BRUCE'S dance last night was their farewell to Washington—for a time.

Around the first of June they'll be sailing for France, taking their dogs with them, and for the next year, perhaps more, Paris will be home.

Mr. Bruce, until recently Assistant Secretary of Commerce, has been appointed Economic Co-operator for France, a post which carries with it the diplomatic rank of Minister.

Mrs. Bruce had supervised the building of a dance floor in the garden for last night's party, and lights twinkled from the trees. "Best-dressed" Mrs. Harrison Williams was down from New York for the occasion and from the same city were Mr. and Mrs. John B. Ryan, Mrs. Averill Clarke and Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Lowman.

The Lowmans were among the dinner guests of the Assistant Secretary of the Air Force and Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt Whitney who entertained in honor of the British Ambassador and Lady Inverchapel, soon to sail for England.

Mrs. Dwight Davis was a dinner hostess, so, too, were Mrs. Warren Delano Robbins and Mrs. Rowan Shevlin.

Mr. and Mrs. Whitney had as other guests the French Ambassador, Henri Bonnet, without Mme. Bonnet who took off by plane on Friday for France; Senator and Mrs. Henry Cabot Lodge, Undersecretary of Commerce and Mrs. William C. Foster, Assistant Secretary of the Treasury and Mrs. Arthur Gardner and Mr. and Mrs. Clark Clifford.

WHEN Wollmar Bostrom retired from diplomatic service and went home to Sweden, his friends here were sure he would be back. Twenty-one years at one post grows ties too strong to sever. The former Swedish Minister is back, and Mme. Bostrom, too, and at the moment they're visiting their son-in-law and daughter, Sixten and Ellis Wolmar who live in Hartford, Conn. But they're coming to Washington the middle of the week, and have been invited by Henry Benning Spencer, an old friend, to stay with him.

Presumably there'll be parties by the dozens to welcome them back. I know of one dinner being planned by a combination of friends—and undoubtedly there'll be a few tennis matches at the Chevy Chase Club, where Mr. Bostrom was considered one of the fastest players on the courts. A one-time champion of Sweden, the former Minister was a favorite partner of King Gustav Adolph, who was still batting tennis balls at the age of 80.

Dean of Ministers when he resigned his post here, Wollmar Bostrom and his wife had achieved great popularity during their long stay here, not among the Diplomatic Corps, perhaps, but with Washington cave-dwellers. They were inclined to be clannish, made their own circle of friends and stuck to them.

TOWN TOPICS: Word from Florida brings distressing news of the serious illness of Mrs. Lawrence Townsend, grande dame if there ever was one. Happily she's on the road to recovery now at Pass-a-Grille, where she and Mr. Townsend spend their winters.

Mrs. Cordell Hull, wife of the former Secretary of State, whose devotion to her husband has kept her almost constantly at his side, has slipped off for a vacation in Atlantic City.

Senator and Mrs. Albert Hawkes will entertain at dinner Saturday, May 15, for their daughter, Mrs. Morgan Padelford, who will visit them from Pasadena, Calif., and Senator and Mrs. Owen Brewster's dinner Saturday, May 22, will be in honor of the Senate Majority Leader Wallace White and Mrs. White.

Diplomatic Circling

By Elizabeth Maguire

AFTER A MONTH in Bogota the Uruguayan Minister, Jose A. Mora, and his charming Senora have returned to Washington. When they arrived in Bogota on March 28, flags were flying at the airport and at the Capitolio. Throughout the town an air of cordiality and hospitality prevailed.

On Friday, April 9, Senora de Mora was quietly writing letters in her husband's office at the Capitolio when a porter burst in the room. "Gaitan has been killed and the revolution has started," he cried. That was at 1:15. By 1:30 the Capitolio was assaulted and by 3 the lovely building was a shambles.

Meanwhile, the Minister and his wife sought safety in the basement dining room while the crowds roared outside. Later in the afternoon the Moras were taken to the armory of the Presidential Guards, where they remained 26 hours, part of the time lying flat on the floor to avoid shots.

At night the sky turned purple from fires around town. The

To Entertain at Mount Vernon Seminary

Mr. and Mrs. George W. Lloyd will be at home this afternoon, May 9, from 4 to 6 o'clock to their friends in Washington who are interested to see the new home of Mount Vernon Seminary.

Alumnae and friends invited to assist at the tea table are Mrs. Joseph Davies, Mrs. Clinton Anderson, Mrs. Everett M. Dirksen, Mrs. Clifford Davis, Mrs. Eric Johnston, Mrs. Henry Parsons Erwin, Mrs. Charles Fairfax, Mrs. Charles Hamilton Maddox, Mrs. Willard Holbrook, Mrs. Willard M. Kiplinger and Mrs. Duncan Phillips.

The list of guests includes many members of the diplomatic circles, prominent Washington educators, members of the Alumnae Association, patrons and friends of the school.

Reeders in New Home

Mr. and Mrs. Fred W. Reeder have moved into their new home on Telegraph rd., Alexandria, where they entertained recently for Col. and Mrs. John Livingston of Fort Belvoir, Comdr. Ronald Eicher and Comdr. Kendall of Norfolk, Va.

In Washington's Orange Blossom Parade

Mr. and Mrs. William Gordon Nelson of Jackson, Miss., announce the marriage of their daughter, Pauline Evelyn, to Lieut. Comdr. Charles Pendleton Trumbull, USN, son of Mrs. Horace Niles Trumbull of Cleveland, Ohio.

The wedding took place at 5 p. m. yesterday in the St. Andrews' Chapel of United States Naval Academy at Annapolis, Md. A reception followed at the Alumni Club.

The bride was given in marriage by her father and wore a ballerina frock of white cotton lace with a halo of fresh flowers in her hair. She carried a muff of gardenias and stephanotis.

Lieut. Col. and Mrs. Wilton Earle of Washington, brother-in-law and sister of the bride, were attendants and their small daughter, Patricia, was flower girl. Mrs. Earle wore yellow pique.

After a wedding trip to St. Thomas, Virgin Islands, the couple will reside in Washington where Commander Trumbull is stationed.

Thomas—Brownley

Northminister Presbyterian Church was the scene of the wedding yesterday afternoon of Miss Jane Phyllis Brownley, daughter of Mrs. Edward R. Brownley and the late Mr. Brownley of this city, and Joseph John Thomas, son of Mrs. Lawrence V. Lampson and the late J. J. Thomas of Washington.

The Rev. William Kepler officiated and Richard Bischoff gave the bride in marriage. She wore a wedding dress of tulle and lace, a veil of illusion falling from a Mary Queen of Scots headdress covered in lace, and she carried white orchids and sweet peas.

Mrs. M. F. Disney, jr., matron of honor, was in yellow taffeta. She wore a yellow net picture hat and carried yellow roses and purple iris. The bridesmaids were Mrs. M. J. Reitman and Mrs. Harold Romberg, in lavender taffeta and Mrs. Abbot Marsh and Mrs. R. W. Jackson in nile green taffeta. They wore picture hats and carried spring flowers.

Clayton Norris was best man and the ushers were Ernest Travis, Robert E. Latimer, jr., Neal J. Edwards and William E. Krouse.

A reception was held at the Washington Club after which the couple left for a northern trip. They will reside in Washington.

The bride attended Mary Washington College of University of Virginia and the bridegroom attended University of Maryland.

Jones—Vannoy

Miss Virginia I. Vannoy, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Emmett G. Vannoy of Takoma Park, became the bride yesterday of Capt. Harold Reed Jones, AUS, son of Mrs. Ernest T. Jones of San Francisco, Calif., and the late Capt. Jones. The ceremony took place at Walter Reed Memorial Chapel at 4 p. m., Chaplain LeRoy Raley officiating.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore a gown of candlelight satin fashioned with sweetheart neckline, long sleeves and tight basque waistline. Her full skirt fell into a long train, and her veil of chantilly lace was caught with orange blossoms. She carried a prayer book covered with an orchid and a shower of lilies of the valley.

Mrs. Dorris Belles of Wilkes-Barre, Pa., was matron of honor, costumed in yellow taffeta and carrying talisman roses. Miss Alberta Sked of Wilkes-Barre, maid of honor, wore a lavender taffeta gown and carried yellow roses. The bridesmaids, Mrs. Ann Jones and Mrs. Julia Dixon, both of Takoma Park, wore pale aqua taffeta gowns and carried bouquets of red roses.

The flower girls were Miss Frances Berryman and Miss Jane Lake, costumed in pink and carrying baskets of rose petals.

Capt. Daniel Harris of Fort Eustis, Va., was best man, and the ushers were Maj. Raymond Schwab, Capt. Henry Fisk and Maj. Marcus King, all of Washington.

A reception was held at Stone House Inn at Four Corners, Md.

Splain—May

Miss Rose Mary May and Dr. Robert Douglas Splain were married at 10 a. m. yesterday at the Shrine of the Most Blessed Sacrament with Msgr. Thomas G. Smyth officiating.

The bride, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Paul May of this city, was given in marriage by her father. Her husband is the son of Mr. and Mrs. James Francis Splain of Chevy Chase, Md.

For her wedding Mrs. Splain wore a princess style, candlelight satin gown embroidered in pearls. With her veil she wore a crown of lace worn by her great grandmother more than a hundred years ago. Her flowers were white butterfly orchids and lilies of the valley.

Mrs. Paul May, jr., matron of honor, wore madonna blue illusion and carried gardenias and blue delphinium. Similarly dressed were the bridesmaids, Miss Doris Beck of Tarrytown, N. Y., and Miss Rose Eileen Smith of Fort Wayne, Ind., and the flower girls, Mary Claire Donohoe and Rose Mary Hinchcliffe.

Paul May, jr., was best man and the ushers were Leo Bernard Sherry, Edward Farley Sherry, Henry Daniel Morehouse, Albert May, jr., Frederick Randall and Dr. Lester Dean Johnson.

A reception was held at the Mayflower after which the couple left by plane for Bermuda.

The bride attended Rosemont College at Rosemont, Pa., and the bridegroom attended Mount St. Mary's College at Emmitsburg, Md., Georgetown College and was graduated from Georgetown University School of Dentistry.

Merritt—Hughes

Miss Jeanette Ellen Hughes, daughter of the Rev. and Mrs. J. Earl Hughes of Evans City, Pa., was married to Bernard Lee Merritt at the United Presbyterian Church of Evans City at 3:30 p. m. yesterday. The Rev. Hughes gave his daughter in marriage and also officiated at the wedding.

The bride wore a gown of candlelight satin with a fitted bodice and sweetheart neckline. Her finger-tip veil of illusion was held by a crown of white roses and orange blossoms and she carried a satin-covered Testament which the bridegroom had carried with him during the three years he spent overseas with the Army. The Testament was topped with an orchid and had a shower of lilies of the valley.

Miss Darlene A. Hughes was her sister's maid of honor. She wore aqua taffeta, a bonnet of pink tulle and carried a colonial bouquet of spring flowers. Similarly costumed in pink with aqua bonnets were the bridesmaids, Mrs. James C. Hefner, jr., of Pittsburgh, and Miss Helen A. Wahl of Evans City.

John Merritt, jr., was best man and the ushers were James C. Hefner, jr., and Ross B. Wahl.

A reception followed the ceremony, after which the couple left for a Southern wedding trip. They will reside in Washington.

The bridegroom attended Westminster College in New Wilmington, Pa.

Dworken—Lustine

Miss Elayne Carol Lustine, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Phillip Lustine of this city, became the bride of S. Curtis Dworken, son of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Dworken of Bridgeport, Conn., at 7 last evening at the Shoreham Hotel. Dr. Norman Gerstenfeld officiated.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a wedding dress of Chantilly lace and taffeta with a mantilla of Chantilly lace. Her flowers were orchids and lilies of the valley. Mrs. Bertram Finley, matron of honor, wore champagne colored lace and carried tea roses. Bertram Finley was best man.

A dinner at the hotel followed the ceremony. The couple will spend their honeymoon in California and will reside in Cambridge, Mass., until the bridegroom is graduated in August from the Harvard Law School. He previously attended Harvard University.

Townsend—Greer

Miss Anne Carolyn Greer, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Hollingsworth Greer, and John Barclay Townsend were married yesterday at Fairlington Methodist Church, Arlington, at 2:30 p.m., the Rev. Hugh M. Burleigh officiating. Mr. Townsend is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Floyd Townsend of Columbus, N. J.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a gown of white dotted marquisette and carried a bouquet of lilies of the valley. Her finger-tip veil was held by a coronet of lace.

Miss Joanna Raiford was maid of honor, costumed in lilac marquisette. The bridesmaids were Miss Jean Oswald, Miss Jane Merwin, Miss Miles Lind and Miss Aileen Heinekamp, costumed in yellow and green marquisette and carrying daisies.

Charles Angle of Columbus, N. J., was best man, and the ushers were George Greer and William Greer, brothers of the bride, and Lewellyn Beatty of Beverly, N. J., and Robert Olifiers of Scarsdale, N. Y.

The bride attended Wilson College and George Washington University. The bridegroom attended Bordentown Military Institute and New York Institute of Photography.

Smith—Dimond

The marriage of Miss Elizabeth Ann Dimond and Thomas Harold Smith took place yesterday at St. Anthony's Church. The Rev. Francis E. Garner, the bride's uncle, officiated.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Elliott T. Dimond of Washington. Her husband is the son of Benjamin F. Smith, also of Washington, and the late Mrs. Smith.

The bride's costume was ivory satin embroidered with seed pearls and she carried a prayerbook with a white orchid. Miss Mary Virginia Dimond, maid of honor, wore aqua taffeta and carried pink roses. John Francis Smith was best man and the ushers were Michael F. Dimond and Robert J. Dimond. A reception followed at the Catholic Daughters Club house. Mr. and Mrs. Smith will spend their honeymoon in Atlantic City, N. J., and return to reside in Washington.

JOSEPH WHITEFORD, son of Mr. and Mrs. Roger Whiteford, rehearses for Mrs. Thad Brown, jr., the organ recital he will give next Sunday at the home of Mrs. William S. Corby, Chevy Chase Circle. Under the auspices of the Salvation Army Auxiliary of Washington, a garden tea will be given that day for the benefit of the rebuilding fund of the organization. The campaign for $350,000 is now under way. Mrs. T. Stanley Holland is general chairman of the event. Tickets for the benefit may be obtained at Salvation Army headquarters, 1736 R st. or from Mrs. Robert Lee O'Brien, jr.

Old Seminary Will Be Scene Of Carnival

The oak groves and lawns of the historic Virginia Seminary, at Quaker ln. and Seminary rd. in Alexandria, will lose their academic serenity from 2 to 6 next Saturday afternoon, May 15, for the carnival atmosphere of the annual benefit fair sponsored by the Women's Auxiliary of Immanuel Church-on-the-Hill.

Providing entertainment will be magicians, fortune tellers, ventriloquists, acrobats, an Australian lady juggler with her trained dog, Flash, a London Punch and Judy show, a mammoth pet show with ribbons and prizes, jeep and pony rides, balloons and games.

Food booths will offer popcorn, ice cream cones, soft drinks and hot dogs while other popular attractions are the homemade food, handsewn and knitted articles, rare "white elephants" and flowers and plants from neighboring gardens.

During the afternoon a six-piece clown band, provided by the seminary students, and an old-time Italian organ grinder, with his live monkey, will roam the grounds to delight the children. A play yard where very young visitors may be left for a while under expert care is a new feature this year.

Colorful road markers and decorative signs, designed by Mrs. Alfred R. Taylor, will make it easy for visitors to find the seminary. Admission to the fair will be free.

Congressional Capers:

Speaker Martin Gets a Southern Lift

By Genevieve Reynolds

SOUTHERN hospitality makes it well nigh impossible for a person to get in his or her daily constitutional jaunt. At least that is the experience of affable Speaker of the House, Joe Martin, an habitual early riser and morning walker. While on a recent trip to Nashville, Tenn., he arose at the peek of dawn and started hiking down Belle Meade Boulevard before his hosts, the J. C. Bradfords, were awake. In less than one-half mile, three different motorists stopped and offered him a lift. None knew his identity.

The friendly approaches made a deep impression on the GOP leader. He's convinced the Volunteer State will go Republican in the forthcoming elections.

POETS as well as promotion salesmen have written millions of lines about the fragrance of flowers and perfumes. Representative Edith Nourse Rogers of Massachusetts, who generally wears an orchid but sometimes a pink camellia over the lapel of her well cut suits, vows that yellow jasmine once changed the fate of a Congressional bill. It was one of her pet legislation bills pertaining to veterans. For several months it had been stuck in a committee. Then one day Mrs. R. dropped by committee headquarters to inquire about the pending legislation. The committee clerk jumped to attention when he got a nostalgic whiff of her yellow jasmine corsage. "That reminds me of my mother and the South," he remarked as he figuratively drank in the sweet aroma of the blossoms.

Two days later the bill was reported out of the committee. But there's a sad ending to the tale—a few months later the clerk died.

PETITE, DAINTY Mrs. Charles R. Clason, wife of the Massachusetts Representative, has a unique method of entertaining constituents. She invites them to 11 a. m. breakfasts and greets the arrivals with a steaming cup of coffee. All set for the usual bacon and eggs or waffles, the visitors get original "breakfast hors d'oeuvres and canapes" —all made by the hostess. Some of the dainties include minature-sized popovers filled with fresh lobster salad, tiny chocolate doughnuts, cheese-puffs light as down and brown bread. After the feast all tour the Capitol.

By the way, Emmie Clason is a perfectionist in all that she undertakes. So it is natural that when she prepares a meal, it will be not only done to a gourmet's taste, but to her own satisfaction. Incidentally, she's a home economics graduate and took a short fling teaching the subject.

WANT TO KNOW anything about the District schools? If so, ask the Washington Representative and Mrs. Walt Horan. They're sure to have the information, for they have a child in practically every school level. There's daughter Kay, who will graduate with honors from Radcliffe in June. With the art degree safely tucked under one arm, she hopes to head for the University of Washington to start work on a master's degree in philosophy. Then there is Scott, a student at Bethesda-Chevy Chase. Harold is studying at Leland Junior High and Walter, jr., goes to the Chevy Chase Elementary School.

A GROUP of Senators is scheduled to appear on a new series of radio broadcasts to Italy over Station WRUL. Each of the Nation's lawmakers will describe his home State, according to Mrs. John Davis Lodge, wife of the Connecticut Representative, who is arranging the "Bridge of Friendship" broadcasts. She says that the description of States, whenever possible, will be compared to like provinces in Italy.

The Service Set

By Norma Foust Lanum

IT'S MIGRATING season for military personnel and thus far the Marine Corps appears to be leading mover in springtime transfers.

Maj. Gen. Oliver P. Smith, who relieved Maj. Gen. Lemuel C. Shepherd as assistant commandant, is due here the first of this week. With his wife, his daughter, Mrs. Virginia Smith Benedict, and his small granddaughter, Gale, the general will take over his predecessor's quarters at the Marine Barracks.

Brig. Gen. and Mrs. Fred S. Robillard—he has been the corps' supply chief here—will leave the 21st of this month for assignment in San Francisco. The Robillards have been in Washington for 10 years and the farewell parties in store for them are many. They include a dinner to be given by Col. and Mrs. E. J. Mund, Mrs. Blythe G. Jones' luncheon and a cocktail party the supply staff has scheduled for the 19th.

In California, General Robillard will command San Francisco's Marine Corps Depot of Supplies and the Marine Repair Depot in Barstow. Brig. Gen. Andrew E. Cressy, who now holds those posts, will come here in turn to assume General Robillard's duty.

Brig. Gen. William E. Riley and his family will leave next month for a new assignment at Camp Le Jeune, N. C. Mrs. Riley has resided in the Capital for the past six years —she remained here while her husband served overseas during the war.

Her son, Bill, jr., takes his diploma from St. John's College High School and her daughter, Kathy, will be graduated from Blessed Sacrament Elementary School here, both during moving week.

GEN. AND MRS. OMAR BRADLEY entertained at a small dinner party yesterday evening at their Fort Myer quarters. Among the guests were Maj. Gen. and Mrs. Hobart Gay, Brig. Gen. and Mrs. Vernon Evans, Mrs. William Schmidt, Col. Arthur Purvis and Capt. and Mrs. H. S. Beukeman.

The West Point Class of '29 met last evening at the Officers Club of Fort McNair for cocktails and buffet supper. Arrangements for the reunion were made by Col. Charles Tench, Col. John L. Person and Col. James Orstrand.

Vice Admiral and Mrs. A. W. Radford had as their house guests Friday Mr. and Mrs. Temple Joyce of Annapolis. And yesterday the foursome, along with Vice Admiral and Mrs. J. J. Clark, spent the day at Stratford, Westmoreland, Va., as guests of Mrs. Alfred I. du Pont. The occasion was the annual celebration at the restored birthplace and early home of Robert E. Lee.

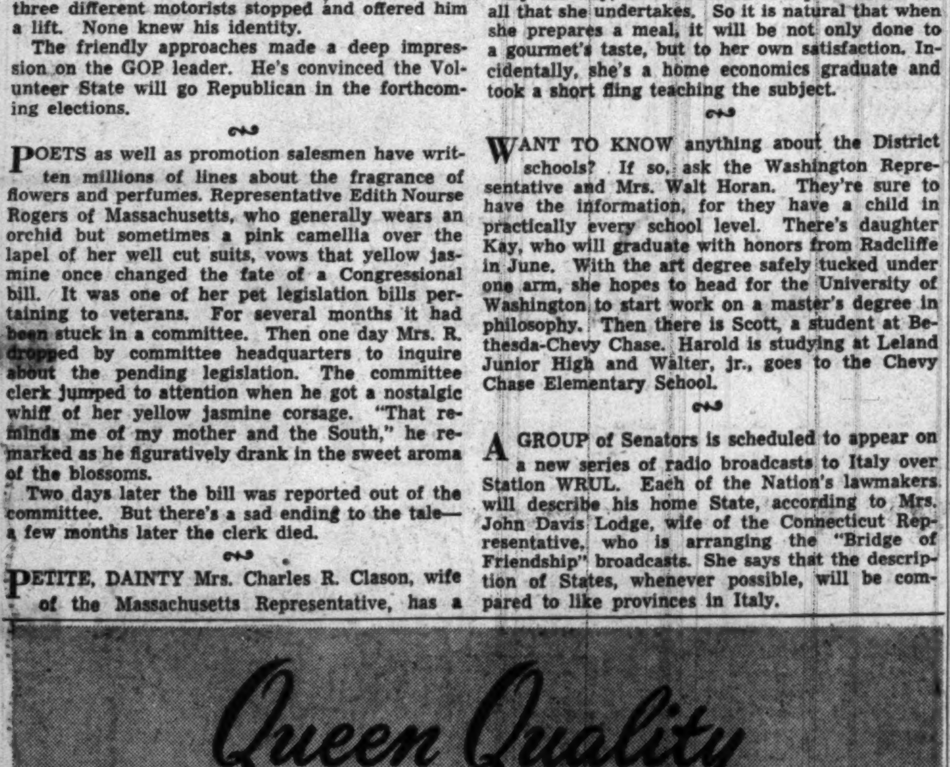
Thursday afternoon Mrs. Radford entertained at a small tea for some of her Navy friends and their mothers in celebration of Mother's Day.

BRIG. GEN. GEORGE BEACH, commanding officer at Walter Reed Hospital, and Mrs. Beach arrived home from San Antonio, Tex., last Tuesday.

Mrs. Beach was in Texas for a two weeks' vacation with friends. Her husband went to the convention of the American College of Physicians and then came back by San Antonio and made the trip back with Mrs. Beach.

The Beachs had been stationed in San Antonio a few times and Mrs. Beach confesses she's so fond of the locale that she goes back for visits just as often as possible.

Parties last week at Walter Reed included a buffet supper given Friday by Maj. and Mrs. William M. Ream and Col. and Mrs. John B. Coates' dinner the same day.



Open Friday evening until nine.

Travels, Teas, Club Events Interest Leesburg Residents

Leesburg, Va., May 8.—Miss Mary Lintner, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Lintner, of Leesburg, will sail May 12 from New York on the SS America for Cherbourg, France. She will serve as informational secretary with the Army and will be stationed at Karlsruhe, France.

Miss Lintner, recently employed in New York, served for a number of years under Civil Service with the District Playgrounds in Washington, and was at one time employed by the National Geographic Magazine. She visited her parents here over the weekend and was joined by her sister, Miss Eleanor Lintner, of Washington.

Section B, Woman's Auxiliary of St. James' Episcopal Church, will meet on Monday afternoon with Mrs. E. Ray Keene, near Leesburg. Mrs. Edmund Noyes will give a report on the annual meeting of the Woman's Auxiliary in Alexandria this week. Mrs. David N. Rust, jr., member of the diocesan executive board, also attended the meeting in Alexandria.

Announcement was made here this week of the marriage of Frederick Lintner, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Lintner, and Miss Edith Veronica Anglin on April 30 at Anchorage, Alaska. The bride, formerly of Seattle, Wash., is serving as a draftsman under Civil Service in Anchorage. Mr. Lintner was in Alaska several years before the war. He served in Italy for 18 months as a lieutenant in combat engineers and after the close of the war returned to Alaska.

Miss Florence Manning entertained at tea on Saturday, honoring Mrs. Charles Pope of Cleveland, Ohio, who is the guest of Mrs. Talbot Pierce, and Mrs. Haines Lippincott of Atlantic City, a guest of Mr. and Mrs. George J. Durfey.

Mrs. Arthur S. Jenkins attended a reunion of her class at Wilson Teachers College, Washington, on Tuesday night. While in the city, she was the guest of Mrs. H. A. Cox.

Mr. and Mrs. Jones Lawson were recent guests of Mrs. J. Hunter Hume and Mrs. Benjamin Hume in Carterville, Va.

Miss Agnes di Zerega spent the weekend with her sister, Miss Lucy di Zerega, who is taking a course as laboratory technician at the Graduate Hospital, Philadelphia. Alfred di Zerega 3d spent the weekend in Winston-Salem, N. C., and attended the May dance at Salem College as the guest of his fiancee, Miss Mary Porter Evans. Mr. and Mrs. N. C. Nichols are visiting relatives in Belmont, Ohio.

Col. and Mrs. E. N. Slappey are on an extended trip to Dayton, Ohio; Louisville, Kentucky; Jackson, Miss., and Albany, Ga. While in Jackson, they will be the guests of their son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. E. P. Sullivan.

Mrs. B. Powell Harrison, who spent the winter in Washington, will come to Leesburg on Monday to reopen her home, Knox House, for the summer.

Mrs. Clay Carr and children, of Boyce, Va., spent the weekend with Mr. and Mrs. Gray W. Hume, jr., and Mr. and Mrs. Jones Lawson, in Leesburg.

Mr. and Mrs. Roy Harshman have returned to Wilmington, Del., after visiting relatives in Leesburg. While here, they attended the wedding of Mrs. Harshman's niece, Margaret Ann Gibson, to Arthur Reynolds Pritchard, which took place in Mount Vernon Place Methodist Church, Washington, on April 24.

The Rt. Rev. Frederick D. Goodwin, Bishop of Virginia, has appointed Mrs. Jones M. Lawson of Leesburg, a member of the executive board of the diocese as the leader of the Little Helpers. This place was formerly held by Mrs. J. H. Cunningham of Marshall.

Mr. and Mrs. Morton Riddle 3d and their young son, left Monday for Bremerton, Wash., where they will be the guests for several weeks of Mrs. Riddle's parents, Capt. and Mrs. John Dudley.

Stanley Green, sr., was a judge at the annual horse show at Hood College on Saturday. Mr. Green and his wife are the weekend guests of Mr. and Mrs. Kerbs Benchoff, and attended the annual May festival and dance at Hood College.

Miss Anne L. Cowan Is Bride

The Falls Church in Falls Church, Va., was the setting yesterday for the wedding of Miss Anne Louise Cowan and John Ralph Crotty. Mrs. Crotty is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Pryor Cowan of Arlington, and her husband is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Edward Crotty of Charleston, W. Va.

The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Francis W. Hayes, jr., and a reception followed at the home of the bride's brother and sister-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Pryor Cowan. Dressed in candlelight satin with heirloom lace veil, the bride was escorted and given in marriage by her father. She carried an ivory and gold prayer book with a shower of lilies of the valley.

The matron of honor was Mrs. Cowan, sister-in-law of the bride, and the bridesmaids were Mrs. Ray Wendell Horton, jr., of Radford, Va., and Mrs. William Kennon Bouldin of Warren, Ohio.

Charles Shelburn Crotty, brother of the bridegroom, was best man, and the ushers were Joseph Smith and Otto A. Holstein of Philadelphia.

The bride was graduated from Radford College and the bridegroom was graduated from Virginia Polytechnic Institute. During the war he served overseas with the Eighty-ninth Division.

After a motor trip in Virginia mountains, Mr. and Mrs. Crotty will reside in Merion, Pa.

Medical Congress Delegates To Be Honored

Tea with Mrs. Truman, luncheon at the Army and Navy Country Club, receptions and sightseeing are among the activities planned this week for wives of delegates to the fourth International Congresses on Tropical Medicine and Malaria.

Registration will take place today and tomorrow at the Washington Hotel. Dr. Fred L. Soper, director of the Pan American Sanitary Bureau and chairman of the entertainment committee for the Congresses, plans to have an "entertainment desk" at the Washington Hotel which will be serviced by members of his committee each day from 9 a. m. to 2 p. m. Invitations and tickets to events will be given out and questions answered.

Most of the foreign guests at the congress will be on their first visit away from their homelands since the beginning of the war. Under the direction of the hospitality committee, with Mrs. George C. Marshall as honorary chairman, and Dr. Eloise Cram, chairman, a ladies' lounge will be open in the Washington Hotel at all times for information and assistance. Hostesses speaking Spanish, French and Portuguese, in addition to English, will be there each day under the guidance of Mrs. Willard H. Wright.

Monday, May 10, the State Department will give an official opening reception at the Pan American Union beginning at 5 p. m., and Tuesday, May 11, a hospitality session has been planned for the two congresses of nearly a thousand, at the Shoreham Hotel from 5 to 7 o'clock.

On Thursday Mrs. W. A. Sawyer, wife of the executive secretary of the congresses, has a group of some 15 hostesses who will take the ladies in private cars on a two-hour tour of suburban Washington. In the afternoon, Mrs. Truman will receive wives of delegates and women doctors who are attending as official delegates.

Under the chairmanship of Mrs. Thomas L. Smith, the ladies will be entertained at luncheon on Friday at the Army and Navy Country Club. Assisting Mrs. Smith on her committee are Mrs. Raymond W. Bliss, Mrs. Claude A. Swanson, Mrs. George C. Beech, Mrs. E. G. Hakansson, Mrs. Tom F. Whayne, Mrs. Rufus Holt and Mrs. Albert W. Kenner.

There will be a garden party at Dumbarton Oaks on Saturday, May 15, and many small dinner parties throughout the week.

"Satin it must be" . . .

Many of our young brides are being frankly sentimental and most emphatic about their preference for satin. To them, satin is THE wedding gown to be cherished through the years as a lovely heritage.

Gray Hair?

RE-COLOR it with Canute Water

A few applications of this delightful beauty aid will re-color your gray hair completely—similar to its former natural shade. In one day if you wish—gradually if you prefer. Then primp just once a month to KEEP it young looking. Do not confuse Canute Water with tints or rinses that wash off. Shampooing actually improves the rich, warm new color and leaves your hair fresh, clean and natural to the touch. You may even curl it or get a permanent, if you wish.

No Other Product Can Make All These Claims

Skin test NOT needed. Colorless and crystal-clear. Proved harmless at one of America's Greatest Universities. Thirty years without injury to a single user. Is it any wonder that leading dealers in most of America's largest cities sell more Canute Water than all other hair colorings combined! At drug stores everywhere.

In Wedding Procession

In Luther Rice Memorial Baptist Church yesterday, Miss Margaret Jean Edwards and Carl Winfrey Weedon were married at 3 o'clock, the Rev. H. Clayton Waddell officiating. Mrs. Weedon is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William E. Edwards, and her husband is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Larkin W. Weedon.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a gown of white satin and a fingertip veil which fell from a Juliet cap of seed pearls. Her flowers were white roses centered with white orchid.

Miss Barbara Ann Edwards, sister of the bride, was maid of honor, dressed in orchid silk marquisette and carrying pink roses. The other attendants were Mrs. Francis Clore, sister of the bridegroom, and Miss Elaine Dawson. They wore pale green silk marquisette and carried Brandywine roses.

Larkin W. Weedon, jr., brother of the bridegroom, was best man, and the ushers were J. William Talbott, jr., and Stanley Curtis, cousins of the bridegroom.

After a wedding trip through the Shenandoah Valley and Virginia, Mr. and Mrs. Weedon will reside in Washington.

Doyle—Blake

St. Paul's Church yesterday morning was the scene of the marriage of Miss Mary Patricia Blake to Phalam John Doyle, the Rev. John Burns officiating.

The bride is the daughter of Thomas L. Blake and the late Mrs. Blake. Her husband is the son of William T. Doyle and the late Mrs. Doyle.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore white satin, a seed pearl tiara holding her full length veil, and she carried an orchid surrounded with white roses and lilies of the valley.

Miss Margaret Frances Doyle, a sister of the bridegroom, was maid of honor. Her gown was of pale green taffeta and she carried yellow roses. The bridesmaids, Mrs. Paul White and Mrs. James Horlander, wore pale yellow taffeta and carried talisman roses. Miss Donna Doyle was flower girl and Ronald Smith was ring bearer.

The best man was Charleton W. Doyle and serving as ushers were Robert J. Doyle, William S. Doyle and John L. Doyle, brothers of the bridegrom.

A reception followed the ceremony after which the newlyweds left for a honeymoon in Nassau. They will return to make their home in Virginia.

Sherr—Sugar

Miss Claire Sugar, daughter of Samuel J. Sugar of Washington, and Dr. Henry I. J. Sherr, son of Mrs. Rae Sherr of Philadelphia, Pa., were married yesterday evening. The ceremony took place at the Mayflower Hotel, Rabbi Solomon Metz and Rabbi Jacob Barkin officiating.

Mr. Sugar gave his daughter in marriage. Her costume was of white lace and tulle, an orange blossom tiara holding her veil, and she carried white sweet peas centered with an orchid. Mrs. Edith Markus, matron of honor for her niece, wore flesh colored lace and tulle and carried pink roses and pale blue delphinium. The maid of honor, Miss Thelma Zellan, was gowned in turquoise silk faille and carried a sping nosegay. The bride's other attendants, Misses Elinor Sokolove, Erma Hamburger and Barbara Horowitz, wore yellow silk faille and carried nosegays.

Samuel Sherr was best man for his brother and the ushers included Dr. Martin Wolgin, Dr. Leonard Lit and Herman Rubenstein. The newlyweds will return from their Miami Beach, Fla., honeymoon to make their home in Washington.

Mrs. Sherr attended George Washington University and her husband was graduated from Temple University.

Johnson—Springman

Miss Mary Regina Springman, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Gay Springman of Alexandria, Va., was married on May 1 to Frank Calvin Johnson, son of Dr. and Mrs. Arthur Frederick Johnson of Arlington, Va. The ceremony took place in St. Rita's Church, Alexandria, the Rev. William D. McGonigle officiating.

Mr. Springman gave his daughter in marriage. Her gown was of white satin embroidered with seed pearls. Her tulle veil fell from a seed pearl coronet and she carried white roses.

Mrs. Fred C. Anderson of San Antonio, Tex., matron of honor, wore blue taffeta and carried roses. Gerard S. Blackburn was best man. The ushers included Edwin M. Macon and Vincent R. Brown.

Mrs. Johnson was graduated from St. Mary's Academy, Alexandria, and Strayer Business College and she also attended George Washington University. Her husband attended George Washington University and was graduated from Randolph-Macon Military Academy.

Hamm—O'Bannon

National Baptist Memorial Church on May 1 was the setting for the marriage of Miss Anne Thomas O'Bannon, daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Jackson S. O'Bannon, to G. Stuart Hamm, jr., son of G. Stuart Hamm of Charlottesville, Va., and the late Mrs. Lora T. Hamm. The Rev. Edward B. Willingham officiated.

The bride wore a navy blue gown with a flowered hat and orchid corsage. Her matron of honor, Mrs. Mattie J. D. Taylor, wore a navy gown with a pink hat and a corsage of roses. Virginius S. Hamm was best man for his brother.

A reception followed at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Lee O'Bannon of Falls Church, Va., uncle and aunt of the bride. After a honeymoon in White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., the couple will reside in Charlottesville, Va.

Robinson—Roenfeldt

Miss Elsie Carolyn Roenfeldt, daughter of Andrew Roenfeldt and the late Mrs. Roenfeldt of Garde City, Kans., was married yesterday to Herbert William Robinson, son of Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Robinson of Hull, Yorkshire, England. The Rev. Harry V. Porter officiated at the ceremony, which was held in the Church of the Epiphany.

Given in marriage by Cabell B. H. Phillips, the bride wore a white gabardine suit and hat trimmed with white roses and green satin ribbon. She carried a bouquet of white roses.

Miss Edna Robinson, sister of the bridegroom, was maid of honor, costumed in slate blue suit with navy accessories and carrying a bouquet of pink rosebuds. Bernard Barton was best man, and the ushers were T/Sgt. Harry Hoffman and Leslie Butcher.

A wedding breakfast for relatives and close friends followed at the Carlton Hotel.

After a trip to southern Virginia, Dr. and Mrs. Robinson will reside in Falls Church.

Fleet—White

Miss Jane White and Robert Gordon Fleet were married yesterday at Walter Reed Memorial Chapel, Chaplain Leroy W. Raley officiating. Mrs. Fleet is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Myron White of Alliance, Ohio, and her husband is the son of Mr. and Mrs. A. Gordon Fleet of Annapolis, Md.

Mrs. Richard Kennedy of Columbus, Ohio, attended her sister as matron of honor, and John Archer of Bel Air, Md., was best man.

After a motor trip through the Southern States and to Sea Island, Ga., the couple will make their home in Washington.

Doting Mamas Are Promoters

Child Model Business Now Booming

By Rader Winget

New York, May 8 (AP).—The child model business—sparked by doting mamas whose children are photogenic—is booming today.

An advertisement featuring a child at play, a gurgling baby or a mother-daughter combination has strong consumer pulling power. The teen-age girls of the type that grandma called "wholesome" are in big demand to sell products in magazines and newspapers.

And thousands of mothers are willing to pay the expense of $50 or more to list their child with a recognized agency and take the gamble for success.

One man riding the crest of this newly expanding business is Walter Thornton, a former G. I. of World War I who created the "Pin Up Girl" of World War II. Private Thornton pinned his girl's picture to the canvas wall of his tent. The pin put a hole in the tent, and the sergeant put Thornton on K. P. The new soldiers, however, lived in barracks and could pin up pictures of pretty girls without punching a hole in the wall. So one day in 1940 Thornton dug about 5000 photographs of girls out of the files of his famous model agency and shipped them off to Fort Dix, N. J. The idea, as you know, was a winner.

Thornton has been in the model agency business since 1931, but only in the last five or six years has he stressed child models. Today it accounts for 45 per cent of his business and is still expanding.

He isn't the only one, of course, but he operates with more child models and over a wider field on a mass production basis than any other agency.

How to Break In

How does a child become a model? Well, take your own case. You have a beautiful child. Maybe you don't think so yourself, but people stop you on the street and comment: "My! What a beautiful child!"

So you take the child to a model agency. There your child will be accepted as a model, or you will get the most gentle bum's rush ever devised by man.

Your child doesn't have to be beautiful to make the grade. A youngster with unruly hair, a mass of freckles and one front tooth missing is a perfect picture of a real boy.

Mothers certainly hate to take "no" for an answer. One of them went on a sit-down strike in Thornton's office vainly trying to force a favorable answer.

If your child is accepted by an agency, your work is only beginning. A fee of $50 is charged by Thornton to cover advertising expense. You pay for the photographs, taken by any studio, but he won't accept a picture costing more than $10. That is the only fee, and registration continues as long as the model is available for work.

Agencies send a selected group of photographs of what they consider their best model possibilities around to clients who want to use them in their advertisements. Either that particular photograph is used, or the child itself is called in to pose.

Thornton has the photo purchaser send the fee directly to the model. He gets nothing. For posing, however, he collects a standard 10 per cent commission on earnings of $7.50 an hour to as high as $10 to $15 an hour. Children under one year are paid $10 an hour.

Earnings Vary

How much does that come to? Well, one 13-year-old model, who has been working steadily since she was age 2, had gross earnings of $10,000 last year. But, and it is a big but, there is a mighty long list of models who don't make a dime.

The biggest users of models are the large mail order houses, magazines, department stores and manufacturers of nationally advertised products.

If little Willie doesn't click with the advertisers, you wind up in the red to the extent of the cost of your advertising and photographs.

But the more money little Willie makes, the more money the agency makes. Realizing such simple arithmetic, Thornton shoots at the mass market. He has around 1400 child models registered, and he sends their pictures individually and in a large catalogue to some 1500 clients around the country.

This year he is distributing his catalogue to the usual clients and in addition plans to sell it for $5 direct to advertisers who can select one of the photographs and pay the model direct. Thornton makes nothing from such sale. His profit, if any after expenses, comes from the sale of the catalogue which he hopes to place with 5000 to 6000 firms annually.

Thornton proudly lists among his model-discoveries such stars as Susan Hayward, Lauren Bacall, Lizabeth Scott, Dorothy McGuire, and a newcomer, Arline Dahl.

When mothers think of models they think of those names or probably of movie star Peggy Ann Garner or cover girl Jackie Miles, age 13. They never realize the great odds against top-flight success.

MAUREEN and Sharon Doyle, children of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Doyle of New York, are among the top favorites of the child models employed by the Walter Thornton model agency in New York

PRETTY little Mary Yeoll, 9-year-old daughter of Mrs. W. J. Yeoll, lives in Philadelphia and commutes to to New York, 90 miles away, to do her jobs as a model. She ranks as one of the favorites among the hundreds of child models employed by the Walter Thornton model agency in New York

Message for Mother's Day

I am a woman from Czechoslovakia and because it is Mother's Day I want to say a few words.

Today, in my thoughts, I am with all mothers who are happy—happy because they have their children with them.

But I am also in my thoughts with the mothers who have only tears and memories on this day because they have lost, in war or by political persecution, that which is most precious to mothers. I am from Europe and I know all the miseries of dictatorship, nazism and communism.

America is God's own land. Freedom, democracy and the American manner of life are the only guarantees for happiness for the entire people and for the family especially. Children should not only be free but should be taught to appreciate their freedom. Communism is the destroyer of all family lives. It cannot use happy, free and smiling individuals. It needs rightless slaves, sinister fanatics without family and property.

The Etiquette of Entertaining a Bride

Is it proper etiquette for the aunt of the groom-to-be to give a shower for the intended bride? During a discussion about this, some of my friends said it is improper, and others said it was correct. Will you please advise me? M. K.

According to Emily Post, members of the bride's immediate family do not properly issue invitations for a shower for the bride, but other friends and more distant relatives may. Therefore, it would be proper and very nice for you to have a shower for the bride.

Does the presence of a weevil indicate the presence of worms in flour? That is, is the worm the first stage of a weevil? I have sometimes found one lone weevil in the strangest places far from the kitchen cupboards; for instance, on the living room Venetian blind. Recently, I found three worms in the sieve after sifting flour. Today, upon noticing tiny tunnels in between the brown sugar and the jar, I found a weevil. I buy flour in small quantities, keep it in a tightly covered canister, and use it rapidly. M. R.

Yes, a worm is an early stage of the weevil. Whenever either is found among foodstuffs, dispose of infested food immediately and scald and air containers. If food is badly infested, throw it away. If very slightly infested, packaged goods that are still valuable as food can be set well separated in the oven and heated through to a temperature of about 135° F. for 30 to 60 minutes. Wash cupboard shelves thoroughly before replacing packages. In the warm, humid season, weevils multiply rapidly and one should be constantly on the outlook for them. Sometimes weevils are present in cereal foods when they come from the store, so each package should be inspected before storing it in the cupboard to avoid introducing them into your other foods.

I recently purchased a new console piano and would like to know what can be used to retain the lovely finish. It is Honduran mahogany, and I also understand it should not be polished with an oil base furniture polish. Are there any precautions I may take to prevent any damage while it is being moved across country? It will be crated and shipped by Government packers. N. D.

A piano should not be subjected to rapid changes in temperature, for differences in temperature (on different parts of the piano) and sudden changes in temperature will tend to crack and damage the varnish. Also, the piano should not be exposed to dampness for it would rust the metal parts. When the finish is dull, wipe it with a soft, slightly damp chamois. When wiped, wring out the chamois and rub until the surface is dry. Dust and polish with a soft silk or rayon cloth.

For shipping, the piano should be completely covered with a soft blanket or fleece-lined cover before being crated. Before packing, suspend small bags of camphor inside of the piano to keep the felt free from moths.

Please print the recipe for the brandy sauce that can be lighted and served over ice cream. I believe several liquors are mixed in different proportions, then ignited and poured over the ice cream. V. P.

The only recipe I have for a topping of this type calls for half brandy and half liqueur. These instructions appear in a recipe for Ice Cream Flambee, which follows:

1 thin layer plain cake.
1 1 quart brick ice cream, frozen hard.
¼ cup raspberry jam.
¼ cup brandy.
¼ cup desired liqueur.

Cut cake to the exact size of the bottom of the ice cream brick. Place on serving late and spread with respberry jam. Place ice cream on top of it. Combine brandy and liqueur and pour around the base of the ice cream. Ignite and serve blazing. This recipe makes 6 portions.

I have six yards of very delicate black lace, imported from France, which I would like to sell. Do you know of anyone who may be able to tell me the value of this material and of any place that may buy it from me or the best way of selling it? S. P. S.

Luxury items, such as your lace, do not seem to have a ready market these days. However, there is a shop in Alexandria which sells all sorts of items for its customers. The proprietor tells me she would be glad to give you an idea as to its value and try to sell it for you. The plan there is for the customer to leave the merchandise at the shop, 113 South Royal st., Alexandria. When you leave it they give you a receipt. When sold, they retain 20 per cent of the sale price as commission and send the rest to you at the beginning of the next month following the sale. For further information, call them at Alexandria 0649.

My glass tea kettle, which gets hard daily use, is getting badly stained and yellow from hard water deposit. I wash it often in hot suds, with a little ammonia added, and I scrub at the stains with a soapy steel wool pad, but the discoloration remains. Is there some solution that can be boiled in glassware to make it clean? F. L. M.

Boiling a solution of 1 cup vinegar to 4 cups water in the tea kettle, then allowing this to remain in the kettle overnight, might soften the deposit so it can be more easily removed. Also, wiping the utensil out occasionally with the new solution for removing rust would probably improve the yellowed appearance. This product is sold in pints and quarts in the housewares department of a local department store. For further information about it, call National 5100.

Have you a recipe for dandelion wine? W. A. R.

The following recipe is given in "Homemade Wine Secrets," by Peggy Hutchinson (McKay).

DANDELION WINE

1 gallon dandelion flower petals.
1 gallon boiling water.
1 orange.
1 lemon.
3 pounds sugar.
1 inch whole ginger, well bruised.
½ ounce yeast on a slice of toast.

Wash dandelion flowers well as they are always gritty. Cover with boiling water. Let stand three days, stirring often, before squeezing flowers out.

Put liquid in pan. Add thinly pared rind of lemon and orange, sugar, ginger, and sliced lemon and orange. Boil for 30 minutes. Let cool.

Spread yeast on toast and float in liquid. Ferment for six days, then strain. Bottle and cork loosely until all fermentation ceases.

While doing some of my spring house cleaning I have seen one or two silver fish. What is the best method to get rid of and prevent them? They seem to prefer paper and rayon which brings me to another question. What is the best way to take care of a wedding gown and veil? They are both rayon and I know of one girl who had her veil practically eaten up by silver fish. I have the dress and veil in a large box. Is there something I can put in the box to ward off anything that might harm the garments? H. J.

Silver fish have great fondness for both starched or sized materials and rayons, so when storing clothing which contain either it is imperative that precautions be taken to prevent the silver fish. To get rid of and prevent them, spray the places where they are prevalent, baseboards, cracks in walls and damp places, with a liquid insecticide spray. To prevent them damaging stored rayon, dust the dress with fresh pyrethrum powder. It would be a good idea to air the dress occasionally and renew the sprinkling of pyrethrum powder. Spraying the inside of the empty box with insecticide spray while the dress airs would be an added precaution.

I have mahogany furniture and used to clean it by washing with soap and water and waxing it afterward. Now I have been told by a dealer to use linseed oil instead of water. Is that correct? E. N. S.

I wonder if you could mean linseed soap rather than linseed oil for washing your furniture? Linseed soap is one of the best agents to use in cleaning soiled furniture. Linseed oil would not work so well for this use, I'm afraid.

Is it possible to soften marshmallows after they have hardened? E. A. McK.

Dip the marshmallows in water, place in a shallow baking pan and put them in a warm oven. Leave them only long enough to soften, not melt. They must be used immediately or placed in a closed container when softened. A good way to use hard marshmallows is to cut them in quarters and add them to frosting or fudge while it is hot.

A FASCINATING version of vegetable soup is borsch, which serves equally well as the first course for dinner or the main course for lunch. Here is a recipe for its making that features fresh beets, sweet or soured cream, and table wine:

1 soup bone or 1 pound short ribs
½ pound stewing beef
3 quarts water
3 medium onions, sliced
3 stalks celery, chopped
1 green pepper, chopped
2 cups cabbage, shredded
3 tomatoes, cut in pieces
3 cups cooked beets, grated
1 cup Rhine wine, Sauterne, Chablis, or any white table wine
Salt and pepper to taste
½ pint sweet or soured cream, whipped

Cook soup bone or short ribs, beef and onions in 3 quarts boiling water for 2 hours. Add celery, pepper, cabbage, and tomatoes, and cook 10 minutes. Then add beets and wine. Cook 5 minutes longer. Serve hot and top each serving with generous spoonful of whipped sweet or soured cream.

Little Ideas for Bringing Cool Look to City Homes

By Dorothy Draper

EVEN if the spring breezes still carry a whiff of the Arctic with them, it's time to begin to think about getting our apartment or house ready for those sweltering days.

I think Mrs. Harris has the right idea. "I just dispense with things," she said, "and start from there."

Mrs. Harris knows what she's talking about because she and her husband stayed in the city last summer so they could have a winter vacation in Jamaica.

The first thing Mrs. Harris did was to take up her heavy living room rug and take down her curtains and send them to a cleaner, who stored them until fall.

Luckily the walls had just been painted chalk-white and looked as fresh as a daisy.

Mrs. Harris brought in an old fiber porch rug from the country, gave it a good scrub bath and painted it a vermilion-pink. As it turned out better than she had dreamed it would, she splurged on some heavy white cotton fringe (2-inch) and sewed it all around the edge of the rug.

WHEN the rug was finished there was still pink paint and white fringe left over. Mrs. Harris, with a gleam in her eye, pounced on the parchment lampshades (she needed new ones for the fall anyway) and painted them vermilion-pink. Just for fun she basted on the rest of the white fringe around the tops of the shades. As the lamp bases were large black cylinders the effect was crisp and cool.

She put her two upholstered chairs in the storeroom in the basement and bought two comfortable wicker chairs at an auction. She painted these shiny black and covered their cushions and all the remaining upholstered furniture in white bath toweling (terry cloth) which looked like billowy masses of fresh white marshmallows.

Paper curtains with bunches of pink and red roses and green leaves on a white background were draped over the top of the windows in a swishy valance.

When the room was finished Mrs. Harris rushed out and bought two great big pots of Boston ferns and ingeniously hid the electric fan behind them. With the ferns gently swaying in the breeze and tall minted iced drinks at hand, the room looked as cool and inviting as a frosted strawberry soda!

Mary Haworth's Mail

Boy Born Out of Wedlock Thinks Grandmother Is His Mother, But Weary Grandmother Urges Daughter, Recently Wed, to Claim the Child

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Wayne and I have been married 18 months. He is 27, a former veteran, and I am 18-years old. We have our own six-room house and are making progress in buying furniture.

My husband and I are very happy, but I am afraid I made a serious mistake in not telling him about my little son, who was born when I was 14 years old.

Only my parents and an older brother know that Benny is my child; because my mother claimed him as her own, due to the fact that I was so young (and unmarried) at the time. Benny is now three and a half years old and knows only his grandmother as his mother; and she has been very good to him.

However, for financial reasons, as she has five children of her own to support, my mother wants me to take Benny and rear him now. I can't think of anything I'd rather do, as I love him dearly and sincerely crave to be his "mother" instead of his "sister." But I know Wayne would find it difficult to forgive my long silence. And how could I explain to Benny and others how I had suddenly become his mother?

Please help me, as I am very confused and unhappy. E. B.

Problem Bears Thinking About

DEAR E. B.: The serious questions you pose certainly should be taken into consideration by your mother, in the process of trying to work out a constructive program of care for Benny, that will also be fair to her.

If she thinks she would be justified in buckpassing the whole problem to you at this point, on the theory that you started it and it's yours to "pay" for, now that you're grown and married, she's wrong.

All of you must bear in mind that you were a child yourself, by civilized social reckoning, when Benny was born; and thus, on the one hand, it was your parents' responsibility (in which they failed) to shield you from the sort of companionship which brought such consequences; and on the other hand, it was their duty to "save" the situation as best they could, with decent devotion to your welfare and Benny's, after the problem was developed.

Chance for Man To Show Greatness

IT SEEMS they sensed these basic truths at the time, by instinct rather than reasoning, probably, with feeling sensitized by panic and self reproach. In any event, they chose a good course—the best and kindliest possible in the circumstances. But if they abruptly abandon it now, without concern to help you prepare a sure footing before going ahead, they might just as well have thrown you and Benny to the wolves at his birth.

Now, about Wayne. He is 27, a former veteran, which suggests that in terms of experience he is a mature man who has seen the good and bad in human nature, knows the difference between naivete and viciousness, and perhaps has a fund of understanding that you don't give him credit for—thus would see your mistake in better, more charitable perspective than you've been able to.

For advice: Trust him. Show him this discussion and tell him the truth. It affords him a chance to do a great work in a cruel world; and given his loyal leadership and help, you can work out a permanently good solution for Benny. If Wayne is the man I hope he is, he will take Benny to his heart as a son and, in due time, legally adopt him, after which you can style yourself "mother" on a legal basis. The constructive explanation (to friends and kin) for taking Benny is that your mother needs relief from other family burdens. M. H.

Biennial Convention to Be Held

Parties Precede Pen Women's Sessions

Hundreds of writers, artists, musicians and lecturers from every section of the country will pour into Washington this week. They are the delegates to the colorful biennial convention of the National League of American Pen Women. A round of parties over the weekend will precede the formal conclave opening Monday, May 17, 10 a. m., in the Mayflower Hotel.

Three spotlight affairs scheduled for Saturday, May 15, will include a White House reception at 4 p. m. when Mrs. Truman will receive visiting delegates, an author's breakfast at noon in the Mayflower Hotel, and the Writers' Forum dinner at 7 p. m.

The authors' breakfast will honor members of the Diplomatic Corps, national league officers as well as celebrities in the art and music world. Principal speakers will be Kenneth McCormick, New York editor and publisher, and Leslie Ford, well known mystery writer.

An 18-piece symphony orchestra with Richard Bales, director of music at the National Gallery of Art, conducting, will present a musical program. Most of the numbers will be original compositions of league members. Iris Brussels' prize winner, "I Shall Lift Up Mine Eyes," will be sung by Mrs. Gordon Crosby, soprano; Mrs. Dwight Chase, alto; B. F. Boan, tenor, and Capt. Dwight Chase, bass. Miss Brussels will be accompanist. Miss Estelle Cover, winner of the first prize in the league's contest for a string ensemble, will have her composition, "Serenade," played by the orchestra.

Music on Program

A third Pen Woman composer whose music, "Two Views of an October Landscape," will be on the program is Miss Katherine E. Lucke, national chairman of music.

Two solo dance numbers will be presented by Miss Jacqueline Williams, senior student at the Washington School of Ballet.

Three members of the local branches are arranging the White House tea. They include Dr. Margaret Hayes Sebree, member of the Chevy Chase branch and national first vice president of the league; Elizabeth Simons Tilton and Agnes McCall Parker of the District of Columbia branch. Dr. Sebree is one of the candidates nominated for the national league's presidency. Three other Washington area women also have been nominated for national offices, among them Mrs. Cloyd Heck Marvin, vice president; Alice Hurst Garvey of the Chevy Chase branch for recording secretary; Margueretta Campbell Taylor of the D. C. branch, for corresponding secretary.

Sarah Jenkins Olmstead of the Alexandria branch has been renominated for the national treasurer's office, and Mattie L. Smith Jarrot of Washington is up for the registrar's post.

Elections will take place Tuesday, May 18.

Rounding out Saturday's events will be a Writers Forum dinner at 7 p. m. in the Mayflower Hotel, with the league's national president, Mrs. Alma Robinson Highbee, as principal speaker. Armenhouie Lamson of the Seattle Branch is in charge of the forum. Mrs. Lamson recently returned from Europe where she accompanied the Friendship Train.

To Meet Formally

Following registration on Sunday, May 16, Penwomen will meet informally for dinner at 7 p. m. in the main dining room at the Mayflower Hotel. Registration, which will begin Saturday, will continue through Monday.

First business session will be held Monday morning followed by a luncheon and juvenile program at 12:30 p. m. Principal speaker will be Loula Grace Erdman, winner of last year's Red Book's $10,000 novel award. Her prize winner was "The Years of Locust." Presiding jointly will be Ethel M. Baker, national chairman of juveniles and Eloise Lownsbury Clancy, biennial chairman.

A reception honoring Mrs. Highbee, national president, is scheduled for the afternoon. Dorothy Betts Marvin, national recording secretary, who is the wife of Dr. Cloyd Heck Marvin of this city, is in charge of reception arrangements.

Prizes will be awarded at the achievements award dinner 7 p. m. Monday by Margaret Ward, national chairman of achievements. Also featured that night will be a drama with Edna Riese of the San Francisco Branch, and Evelyn Packard Akerly of the Alexandria branch as program participants. The drama group of the Washington Work Shop, under the direction of Miss Mary-Averell Seelye, will present Miss Riese's one-act play "The Affair at Oscar's."

A joint short story-radio luncheon is scheduled for 12:30 p. m. Tuesday. Main speaker will be Catherine Annette Hubbell, national chairman of short stories. Guanette Gordon of the Alexandria branch and Lulu Gabel Giese, chairman of radio, also will be program participants.

David Morton to Speak

David Morton, former professor of English at Amherst College and well known American lyricist, will be the principal speaker at a music-poetry dinner Tuesday night at the Mayflower Hotel.

All convention sessions will switch to the Washington Club, 1701 K st. nw. on Wednesday. At the conclusion of business proceedings at noon a features luncheon will be held at 12:30 p. m. with Evelyn Booth Moore of the District of Columbia Branch, presiding. Problems of the feature writer will be discussed by Sallie Hill of the Birmingham branch, who is home department editor of the Progressive Farmer. Charles W. Ferguson, senior editor of the Reader's Digest will talk on, "Ladies, Your Slips Are Showing."

A Washington woman, Mrs. Victoria Faber Stevenson, who is also a past national president of the league, will preside at an American lectures program, 6:30 p. m. Wednesday. Mrs. Clyde Porter, author and lecturer of Kansas City, will be principal speaker.

Installation of new officers at 9 p. m. followed by a reception will conclude the five-day conclave.

Mrs. Clyde Porter of the Kansas City Branch, NLAPW, will discuss "Beyond the Wide Missouri" at the league's American Lectures dinner program on May 19 at the Washington Club

Catherine Hubbell, national chairman of Short Story, NLAPW, will speak at the Short Story luncheon, scheduled for May 18, at the Mayflower Hotel

Miss Sallie F. Hill, editor of the home department, the Progressive Farmer, will be the presiding officer and main Speaker at the NLAPW's features luncheon, Wednesday, May 19

Miss Estelle Cover of South Bend, Ind., will have her original composition "Serenade" played by an 18-piece symphony when the League of American Pen Women holds its authors' breakfast

Mothers Club Plans Show at Berwyn

The Mothers Club of Holy Redeemer School, Berwyn, Md., will sponsor a fashion show and dance under the direction of Mrs. Frank Greco on Tuesday, May 11, at 8 p. m., in the Berwyn Elementary School hall.

Fashions will be by Philipsborn, with Mrs. Florence Hawley as commentator. Bill Baxter and his orchestra will provide music.

Visits in Florida

Mrs. Julius Lulley is spending a fortnight in Orlando, Fla., as the guest of friends.

Midshipmen Entertained

Tea Dance and Dinners Are Given at Annapolis

Annapolis, Md., May 8.—Capt. Frank Trenwith Ward, jr., commandant of Midshipmen, and Mrs. Ward held a tea dance Saturday afternoon at their quarters in Porter Road for the midshipmen mid-year and spring "stripers" and their guests. A number of young ladies from Annapolis and the academy were invited to assist the hostess.

Rear Admiral James L. Holloway, jr., superintendent of the Naval Academy, and Mrs. Holloway entertained at luncheon Sunday for Mr. and Mrs. Thomas McKnew of Washington, D. C. Mr. McKnew is an official of the National Geographic Society.

Admiral and Mrs. Holloway were hosts at dinner Wednesday for Mr. and Mrs. Albert A. Curtice of New York City. Mr. Curtice, geological and geophysical consultant, lectured to the midshipmen of the first class that evening on the subject of petroleum. The Curtices were overnight guests of Capt. and Mrs. Cornelius S. Seabring.

Race to Bermuda

In the wake of the recent announcement that four Naval Academy yachts would leave Newport, R. I., on June 19 in the famous race to Bermuda, it was announced that Comdr. Richard C. Latham, present sailing officer, will leave the Academy this month for new duty. His duties here will be assumed by Lieut. Comdr. Vining A. Sherman, who will pilot one of the yachts to Bermuda. Another of the yachts is to be commanded by Lieut. Frank Siatowski, who last year won the cup offered by the Governor of Maryland for the first Chesapeake Bay boat to finish on corrected time in the Newport-Annapolis race.

Mr. and Mrs. Leonard J. Meyer of Severna Park, have announced the engagement of their daughter, Mary Louise, to Midshipman William Atherton Kanakanui, jr., son of Comdr. W. A. Kanakanui, USN, (ret.) and Mrs. Kanakanui of Honolulu, T. H.

Mrs. Kanakanui is the former Miss Harriet E. Stevens of Annapolis, and Commander Kanakanui was intercollegiate swimming champion at the Naval Academy during the years '22, '23, and '24. Midshipman Kanakanui, who is a first classman, is captain of the swimming team. The wedding will take place in January of next year.

Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Terwilliger of Eastport, have announced the engagement of their daughter, Miss Janet Lee Terwilliger, to Charles R. Howard, son of Mr. and Mrs. Ollie Howard of Annapolis.

To Wed at Academy

Mrs. Herbert Hayter has announced the engagement of her daughter, Marjorie Ellen, to Lieut. (j.g.) William Masek, jr., of Coronado, Calif. The wedding will take place on May 31, at 4 p.m., in the main chapel of the Naval Academy.

Lieutenant Masek attended the University of California at Berkeley, and is currently stationed at the Post-Graduate School here. Miss Hayter graduated from Stephens' College, Columbia, Mo., with the class of 1946.

The Naval Academy Women's Club closed its season on Tuesday with the presentation of an original "amateur hour" in the lounge of the North Severn Officers' Club. Officers for the coming year were elected at the business meeting, after which the various club activity groups gave programs, with Mrs. Elmer M. Jackson, jr., acting as commentator.

Preceding the meeting a luncheon was held for officers and standing committee chairmen with Mrs. Rollo N. Norgaard, president, and Mrs. James L. Holloway, jr., honorary president, the hostesses. A tea concluded the afternoon's program. Mrs. Paul Heineman was in charge of arrangements.

Dinner Honors Olsens

Comdr. and Mrs. George D. Hilding of Wardour entertained at dinner Friday night in honor of Rear Admiral and Mrs. Clarence Olsen of Washington, who were with them for the weekend. Guests at the dinner party included: Capt. and Mrs. Ransom R. Davis, Capt. and Mrs. Kenneth Noble, Capt. and Mrs. Carlton Todd, all of Washington; Capt. and Mrs. W. D. Leggett, jr., Capt. and Mrs. K. Roger Belch, Capt. Donald Giles, Lloyd Jones and Mrs Betty Lee Hall, daughter of Commander and Mrs. Hilding. Captain and Mrs. Davis also spent the weekend with Commander and Mrs. Hilding.

Mrs. Carl Roderbourg entertained recently at a tea for old friends. Mrs. Roderbourg's guests included Mrs. Carlos Cusachs, Mrs. Douglas Howard, Mrs. Benjamin Dutton, Mrs. Herman Krafft, Mrs. George Bingley, Mrs. Walter B. Tardy, Mrs. George Cobb and Mrs. Edwad Darlington Johnson.

Esther Weisblatt Will Be Bride

Mr. and Mrs. Herman Weisblatt of Washington have announced the engagement of their daughter, Miss Esther Weisblatt, to Dr. Morton Cohen, son of Mr. and Mrs. Mayer Cohen, also of this city.

Miss Weisblatt is a student of University of Maryland. Her fiance was graduated from George Washington University and the Georgetown University Dental School.

Dance Is Planned

Plans are being completed for the annual spring dance at the Officers Service Club to be given at Fort McNair Officers Club Friday evening, May 14, from 9 to 12.

Mrs. Clyde B. Parker is chairman of the dance, assisted by a large committee of officer members and club hostesses.

Miss Simeon, Major Copelston Engaged

Capt. Rufus King, USN (ret.) and Mrs. King of Providence, R. I., announce the engagement of their niece, Miss Elizabeth King Simeon, to Maj. Richard Guillemard Copleston of Wincanton, Somerset, England.

Miss Simeon is the daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Charles John Simeon of Providence. Her fiance's parents are Mr. and Mrs. Waters Edward Copleston. The bride-elect attended Wheeler School nad Bryn Mawr College. Major Copleston attended Winchester College, the Royal Military Academy and Sidney Sussex College.

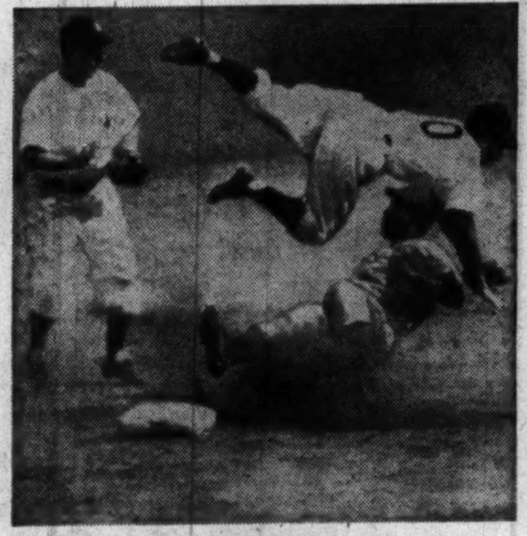
Hey Fellas!
SPEND 2 DAYS IN NEW YORK
Here's How You Can Earn an All Expense Paid Trip in Your Spare Time Between Now and June 19
There's still plenty of time for any boy in The Washington Post circulation area to win a thrill-packed trip to the world's largest city. You don't have to be a Post carrier—ANY BOY CAN WIN! This is not a contest, because there's no limit to the number of winners. If you live in a town where The Washington Post is delivered you are eligible to start earning the trip now.
Look At All The Fun You'll Have:
You'll go to New York in a special B & O train as far as Jersey City, N. J., then you'll get your first glimpse of the famous New York downtown skyline from a ferry as you sail across Hudson River. At the other end you'll get into special buses in downtown Manhattan and then ride up through the busy streets to the center of the city to Victoria Hotel.

World's Most Famous City Awaits You. Trip Includes Boat Ride Around Manhattan Island
For thrills galore, for the time of your life, New York is the place to go. Here's your opportunity to spend two days in this vast metropolis and it won't cost you a penny! . . . You'll see the crowds, the subways, the towering skyscrapers, the huge neon signs and become a part of the teeming city yourself.


CARDINALS vs. DODGERS
Ever see a National League baseball game? Well here's your chance! You'll see the Brooklyn Dodgers playing the equally famous St. Louis Cardinals in a night game at Ebbets Field. And you'll ride the subway to get there.

TIMES SQUARE
Your hotel is right in the heart of Times Square. Times Square has everything—theatres, entertainment, electric signs, crowds, all blending into an atmosphere you'll never forget.

RADIO CITY
Rockefeller Center, which includes Radio City, is almost a city in itself. You'll go on a guided tour, see beautiful floral gardens, statues and elaborate murals, visit broadcasting studios, and get a breathtaking view of the city from the highest tower.
READ THESE RULES CAREFULLY—Then Send the Coupon
1. This offer is open to any boy who is now a Post carrier or who registers with The Washington Post as a Junior Representative. A Junior Representative can become a carrier, if he wishes, whenever a suitable route becomes available.
2. This is NOT a contest. Everyone can win! Just get the subscriptions required—20 for this great two-day New York trip.
3. You don't have to collect any money. The subscriber pays the regular Post carrier. All you do is get subscriptions, and you'll find it easy.
4. The Post will accept either seven-day subscriptions (daily and Sunday delivery), six-day orders (week days only), or Sunday-only orders. But it takes two six-day orders to equal one seven-day subscription. It takes two Sunday-only orders to equal one seven-day subscription.
5. Subscription price of The Washington Post in Washington and immediate suburbs is $1.35 per month, daily and Sunday; 90c daily only; 45c Sunday only. Outside suburbs, per month: $1.50 daily and Sunday; 90c daily only; 60c Sunday only.
6. No subscriptions accepted from areas not served by Post carriers. All subscriptions subject to approval by The Washington Post.
7. Each subscription must be for a new subscriber, meaning one who was not a subscriber to The Post within 30 days before this offer was made.
8. This offer begins May 3 and expires June 19, 1948. If you have not turned in enough accepted orders by that time to win the trip, The Post will pay you at the regular carrier order rate for those you have turned in.
9. The New York trip will be on Friday, June 25, and Saturday, June 26.
10. All subscriptions must be submitted to the Circulation Department, The Washington Post, Washington 4, D. C., ATTENTION NEW YORK TRIP OFFER MANAGER.
11. To be sure you get credit for your subscriptions, send in the registration coupon and be enrolled immediately as a Junior Representative. Boys who are now Post carriers need not register, but ex-carriers and former Junior Representatives should register.
DON'T WAIT! . . . FILL IN AND MAIL NOW!

Tricks for the Teen Age Set

By Nancy Pepper

Petrillo or not, those disc jockies are still ruling the air waves, as far as you teenage listeners are concerned. The more they clown, the more you love them. In fact, your greatest favorites are the "Josh Dickey." And you don't have to be a Sam Spade to identify a "Josh Dickey" as a disc jockey who goes in for more chatter than platter.

POPULARITY POLL—No longer can you determine your popularity by the number of phone calls you get each night or the number of dates you have each weekend. Life gets very complicated when your rating depends upon how many records are dedicated to you on the local Disc Jockey show. Your friends and admirers send or phone in their request numbers to be dedicated to you—and the obliging Disc Jockey reads out your name before he plays the platter. Here's hoping nobody requests "Slap Her Down Again, Paw" or "She's Too Fat For Me" in your name.

HIT PARADE IN R"VERSE—One bright Disc Jockey has introduced a weekly flop parade—that is, a carefully picked group of records least likely to succeed. He's lifted many a Feeble Flipover from obscurity to oblivion.

ADDED ATTRACTION—As if Spike Jones' recordings didn't shatter the air waves enough, some Disc Jockies have discovered that they can add their own sound effects to records with hilarious—and noisy—results. Wait 'till you hear what they do with the "Bells of San Juanita." In comparison, "My Old Flame" is a lullaby!

HIGH SCHOOL HANGOUT—The Corner Casbah and the Teen Canteen are losing out to the Radio Stations where the Disc Jockies play hosts to all the teens in town on their late evening shows. After the movies, it's the new custom to drop in at the Radio Station.

No Problems

'48's Mother Spared Rod With Brood

SPRINGFIELD, ILL. (AP).—Rearing a family of 10 children was no problem to the American Mother of the Year, Mrs. Helen Gartside Hines.

"I've always taken things as they came along" the silver-haired 61-year-old mother smiled.

Her hazel eyes sparkled with motherly pride, Mrs. Hines likes to talk about her eight boys and two girls ranging in age from 17 to 35.

"When they were young, each child had regular chores—taking care of the yard, the furnace, and similar jobs," she relates. "And they always had to keep picked up after themselves.

"My children were disciplined early in life," the 5-foot-5-inch mother explains. "They didn't get the rod very much but they knew they would be punished if they didn't do as they were told. They learned obedience very early.

"I read to the children at night before they went to bed. Everyone in the family still likes to read a great deal. My husband is an inveterate reader."

Her day begins at 6 a. m. in the Hines seven-room, newly built white shingle home which she keeps immaculately clean.

"I don't waste any time," she says, "and I seldom go to bed before midnight."

When nine of her children were in military service—"It was pretty lonesome," Mrs. Hines recalls. "I had to learn to cook all over again."

The family is very close. "If anyone gets in trouble, the others are all ready to assist him," Mrs. Hines says.

Only one of the 10 children—Donald Alan, a high school senior—still lives at home with his parents. Six other children are married, and three are away at school or working in other cities.

Couple Returns From Bogota

interesting thing about the fires, Senora de Mora recalled, is that Bogota is high, about 8000 feet above sea level, and it is difficult even to strike a match for a cigarette. In order to start such devastating fires, careful preparations must have been made long beforehand, she believes.

From the Armory the Minister and his wife were taken in a Red Cross car to a hotel, and after three days of wandering they reached their own hotel, where they found soap and water and a change of clothes for the first time since the start of the revolution.

The Minister agreed with Secretary of State Marshall that the conference continue at all cost, but Senora de Mora said laughingly, "I didn't share that idea—I was longing to leave."

The Moras remained in Bogota until May 1, and up till the day they enplaned for Washington they heard intermittent shots at night from different parts of the town. The atmosphere was a great strain, and now that they are home again they are one of the most blissful pairs in Washington. A safe walk through the lobby, a smiling doorman, a waiting taxi, which before went unnoticed, they take as a gift of the gods.

THE Netherlands Ambassador and Mme. Van Kleffens entertained at a dinner last evening in honor of Mme. Van Kleffens' sister, Mrs. Raymond Wilson and the Netherlands Consul General of Chicago, Jan van de Mortel.

Other guests were the Belgian Ambassador, Baron Silvercruys; the United States Ambassador to Brazil, Herschel V. Johnson; the Canadian Minister and Mrs. Thomas A. Stone, Mr. and Mrs. James Lawrence Houghteling, Dr. and Mrs. Paul B. Magnuson, Representative and Mrs. A. S. M. Monroney, Mr. and Mrs. Garrison Norton, Mr. and Mrs. David Lilienthal, Mrs. Sigourney Thayer and Capt. S. C. M. Bland.

A very popular couple in town, the Charles-Rouxs, are leaving the end of May, sailing the 26th on the De Grasse. Francois Charles-Roux has served as Counselor at the French Embassy here, and will now be stationed in Paris at the Ministry of Foreign Affairs. He and Mme. Charles-Roux are being entertained constantly at a number of farewell parties. Friday afternoon they were hosts at the last of three parties to say goodby to their friends.

We think this is news for any woman interested in reducing her figure or just proportioning it in spots. The same treatments that are given in one of the country's most famous figure salons, located at Hollywood, are available right here in this city at the Tarr System Studio.

The Tarr System Studio appointment sheet in Hollywood reads like a "Who's Who" of the stage, screen and radio.

Figure experts will tell you exactly what will have to be done to make your figure glamorous. If they do not feel then can help you, they will tell you. The Tarr System was developed over 20 years ago and is now the only coast- to-coast institution of its kind under one ownership giving this type of treatment exclusively. The Tarr System studio here is located at 1327 F street n.w.

Nature Treasure Hunt

Now that summer is just around the corner, many parents will begin to think about ways to keep the children busy and interested out-of-doors.

Nature treasure hunts may be one answer. Even in families where no one knows for sure the difference between a beech and a birch the nature treasure hunt can be fun.

If one lives near a bit of woods, home can be the base. If not, the hunt can be carried on when the family and friends are on a day's outing. A list is made of such items as (1.) The longest leaf, (2.) The whitest stone, (3.) The funniest-shaped piece of bark, (4.) A last year's bird nest, (5.) A yellow flower. Many other things can be added, of course.

When the children are ready, Mother and Dad or even one of the youngsters can announce what the first treasure is and send them off. A time limit of 10 or 15 minutes can be set. As they play, children may very well want to know the names of some of the treasures and develop a real interest in natural history. But whether they do or not, the treasure hunt is fun.

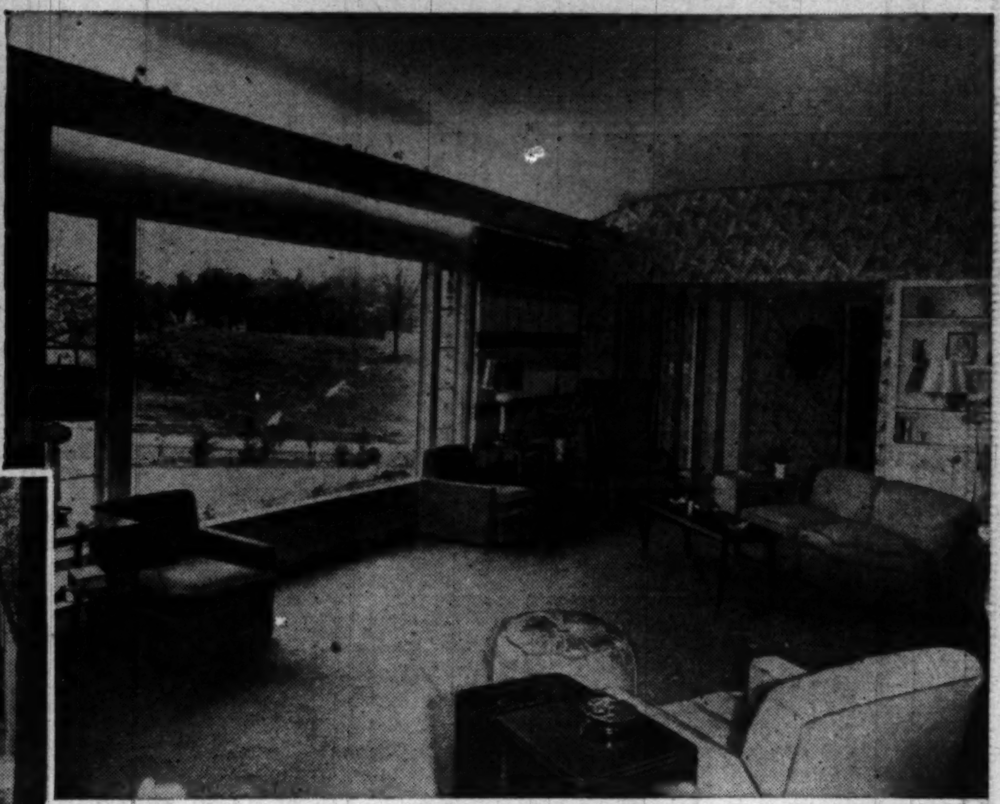
If the Floor Plan Doesn't 'Ramble', Malbrook Doesn't Want It . . .

The Malbrook residence of Dr. Frank S. Caprio rambles for 108 feet on one leg of its L-shaped plan, 68 feet on another. Designed by E. J. Muth of Bethesda, Md., the home sits on the top of a one-acre lot with a commanding view over the countryside

(More pictures on page 8)



Typical living room in Malbrook rambler boasts a very large picture window, indirect lighting, built-in furniture, lots and lots of room

This two-bedroom rambler was built of natural cypress, oiled, by A. Wedderburn for Austin Gordon. It is located in Holmes Run Park, off Sleepy Hollow rd., in nearby Fairfax County. Ramblers in the development cost from $20,000 to $30,000

Breathtakingly beautiful ramblers aren't confined to Malbrook, of course. Bethesda residents have long admired the rambler of Mr. and Mrs. John Ligon on Old Georgetown rd. Mr. Ligon designed the home and supervised its construction. Mrs. Ligon did all the interiors

By Conrad P. Harness

AFTER two and a half years of difficult peacetime home building and remodeling, builders and real estate appraisers now recognize trends in what is wanted in new postwar homes. The accent is on comfort. Americans no longer consider the home as just a place to sleep and eat. It must be a machine for pleasant living.

If the public's desires are met, new homes must have more space for recreation, more light, more mechanical work and time-savers, and better sanitation than the prewar home.

Two of the most pronounced new trends in housing lines are the desire for radiant heating and "rambler" styled bungalows. Scores of local builders are building homes heated radiantly by piping in the floor, walls or ceiling. But satisfying the public demand for homes which spread out in the style of ranch homes of the West is a different matter.

High construction costs are the bugaboo. It costs more to build out than up, therefore, most builders stick to the conventional, boxy, two-story brick dwellings so common in this area.

They Really Ramble

ONE team of local builders, however, has dedicated themselves to the rambler type of architecture. Malice & Brooks, a construction firm in nearby Virginia, feel that the boxy, two-story style home is fine — in somebody else's subdivision. They want none of it.

On their 70 acre "Malbrook" subdivision off Sleepy Hollow rd. in nearby Fairfax County, between Falls Church and Annandale, the builders have the beginning of a startling development. Only four homes have been completed, but the result will make the casual passerby emit an awed "boyoboyoboy!"

Malbrook homes really ramble. The average one spreads out 150 feet. A conventionally built home in a Washington suburb measures around 28 to 36 feet wide.

A tour through one L-shaped Malbrook home revealed it to be 176 feet in length, with 108 feet along one wing and 68 feet in another.

Malbrook homes have dozens of architectural innovations usually found only in the pages of House Beautiful or Architectural Forum. All are heated radiantly by means of pipes embedded in the concrete floor.

The project is definitely not a low-cost one. The dwellings bring from $35,000 to $60,000, with smaller ramblers in another nearby subdivision developed by Malice & Brooks bringing from $20,000 to $30,000.

A buyer must have plenty of ready cash because banks will lend only $20,000 on a first mortgage note. Builder Frank Malice said that condition sharply reduced the number of prospective purchasers. Few people have $20,000 or $30,000 to make up the difference between the mortgage and asking price.

But those that do receive the following in a Malbrook home:

At least an acre of ground. Most homes are built on the high point of sloping ground to give the occupants a sweeping view of the terrain from gigantic picture windows.

Floor plans which separate the home into three distinct centers: work, sleep and play. Noise from a party in the living room won't carry to the bedroom wing in another part of the house.

Scores of built-in cabinets, clos-

Awaits Congressional 'Go Ahead'

No Red Tape, Long Waits, At New D. C. Permit Bureau

By James Ficken
Post Reporter

FINAL BLUEPRINT for a streamlined central permit bureau has been formally approved by the District Commissioners and now awaits only a final "go ahead" from Congress.

Funds totaling $39,000 for the new setup were included in the District's fiscal 1949 appropriations bill passed by the House Wednesday.

Engineer Commissioner Gordon R. Young said yesterday that if the Senate approves the outlay, the District is prepared to begin operating the new bureau within 30 days after the bill becomes law.

Here are the advantages expected from the new central permit bureau:

All except health and recreation permits may be obtained at one office, approximately 60 per cent of them over the counter while the applicant is standing there.

Most permits for minor building repairs may be obtained in less than an hour; routine permits for electrical, plumbing and similar work in approximately one hour.

Two-Stop Service

PERMITS for most jobs involving "complicated" plans will require only two brief visits to the bureau, one to file the application, the second to pick up the approved permit and pay fees. Persons needing 5 to 10 permits for one job may apply for all at one time, be notified by telephone when they're ready, and pick them all up in one bundle.

Legion to Seek Own Changes In Housing Bill

Having agreed to support the amended Taft-Ellender-Wagner-Bill, the American Legion was moved to add its own amendments to the legislation to strengthen it as a veterans' housing measure.

Indorsement of the bill was voted by the national executive committee of the Legion at Indianapolis this week. The favorable action came after National Commander James F. O'Neil made a plea for indorsement of the bill.

A Legion spokesman said the bill as amended by Senator Ralph E. Flanders (R., Vt.) and passed by the Senate on April 22, provided definite priorities for veterans and thus removed the chief ground for Legion objections to the measure.

Realty Roundup

Charles B. Shattuck of Los Angeles, president of the American Institute of Real Estate Appraisers, will address the District Chapter of the AIREA Monday noon at the Ambassador Hotel.

SHATTUCK

Shattuck has been very active in real estate appraising in California for many years and will discuss current appraisal problems and practice.

Present officers of the local chapter are: Thornton W. Owen, president; Curt C. Mack, first vice president; William M. Throckmorton, second vice president; Frank J. Luch, secretary, and J. Albert Weinberg, jr., treasurer.

Edward P. Morgan, attorney, will be the principal speaker Monday at the regular monthly meeting of the Washington Building Congress at the Mayflower Hotel. He will discuss "The Communist Menace to American Security." The congress has announced its "summer outing" will be held at the Manor Golf and Country Club on Friday, July 9.

The Fred S. Gichner Iron Works, Inc., will celebrate the fiftieth anniversary of its founding Saturday with a party and reception at its plant at 1212 24th st. nw.

Advance registration for the National Association of Building Owners and Managers' 1948 Convention in St. Louis, already over the 600 mark, indicates one of the largest meetings in the organization's 40-year history, the association announced yesterday.

Delegates and guests already signed up for the convention, which will be held at the Hotel Jefferson, Monday through Thursday, June 14-17, represent close to 1?? cities in ?? States, the District of Columbia, and Canada.

The American Institute of Architects and the Associated General Contractors of America have established a joint committee to consider problems in building construction. The two groups recently and jointly developed and published "A Suggested Guide to Bidding Procedure" which established standards for obtaining bids that eliminate waste and misunderstanding that might lead to unexpected costs for the owner.

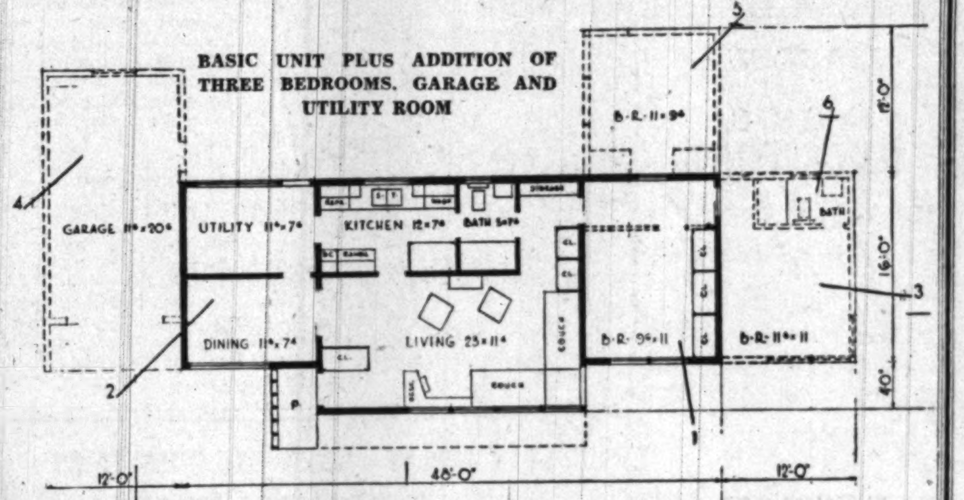
BASIC UNIT

ARCHITECTS and home planning services realize that young couples starting out in life ordinarily do not have the financial resources to buy or build anything but the minimum housing.

This plan starts out as a three-room house and expands to a large three-bedroom rambler. The basic unit, for which additions can easily be made, has a large living-dining-sleeping room, perfectly planned for a couple. The lounges become beds at night, with a traverse drape separating the sleeping area from the rest of the house.

A completely equipped kitchen and automatic laundry eliminate much drudgery for the housewife. A dressing area with wardrobe closets and storage cabinets solves the storage problem.

BASIC UNIT PLUS ADDITION OF THREE BEDROOMS. GARAGE AND UTILITY ROOM



The exterior boasts a faint hint of the modern touch, with corner windows, a straightforward design and trellises for "trimming."

As the family grows and the financial situation is bettered, additions can easily be made to the basic unit. A window in the dressing room becomes a doorway to a second and third bedroom. A garage, utility room and dining room are future possibilities.

A peek at the finished three-bedroom home shows the same crisp character of the original design followed throughout.

This unique expansible plan is available in blueprint form at Lansburgh's at $5 per set.

Unions Getting Down to Work, Builder Says

LABOR organizations in the building industry recently have increased productivity by bringing labor practices in closer accord with modern building techniques, according to a study by the Construction Industry Information Committee, Melvin H. Baker, chairman of the committee, announced Saturday.

"Many unions have moved to eliminate ingrained industrial practices that have retarded technical progress, restrictions on the numbers of apprentices have been greatly relaxed, and cooperative machinery has been set up to settle jurisdictional disputes," Mr. Baker said.

"The International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers has stated its approval of the use of power tools and labor-saving devices; the carpenters' union imposes no restrictions on the use of power tools by its members, provided they are used under conditions safeguarding the workers; the plumbers' and pipefitters' union has emphasized its consent to the cutting and threading of pipe at the contractor's shop by its members and to their use of power tools for cutting and threading pipe of any size; the International Brotherhood of Painters permits the use of spray guns where adequate provision is made for protecting the health of workers, and has removed objections to the installation of window sash which have been glazed in the factory.

Unions Cooperate

"Labor unions in almost all crafts are cooperating with management in increasing the number of apprentices and in providing for their training, with the result that the number of apprentices in the building trades now is three times greater than it was two years ago. Fully 115,000 apprentices now are in training and efforts to expand the program are continuing.

"The president of the Bricklayers, Masons and Plasterers' International Union has urged all local unions to permit as many new apprentices as are needed to meet future building needs.

"The results of the apprentice program will be a larger and better trained labor force than was available in former years and a labor force which is more productive because of a lower average age.

"Costly delays in construction arising from disputes between various unions as to which should handle various parts of a building job should be greatly reduced by recent developments.

"The Building and Construction Trades Department of the AFL and employer associations have devised a new plan for settling these jurisdictional disputes which promises to be generally acceptable both to management and labor and to have an effectiveness never achieved in earlier attempts to solve the problem.

"A basic attack on the causes of jurisdictional disputes has been made in the pipe trades where a combination of the crafts of plumber and pipefitter (steamfitter) has been undertaken by the international union and in some localities is already complete.

"'The reduction in the number of jurisdictional strikes will result in a more efficient handling of new methods in construction and prevent work stoppages, thereby increasing the productivity of labor and reducing the cost of building."

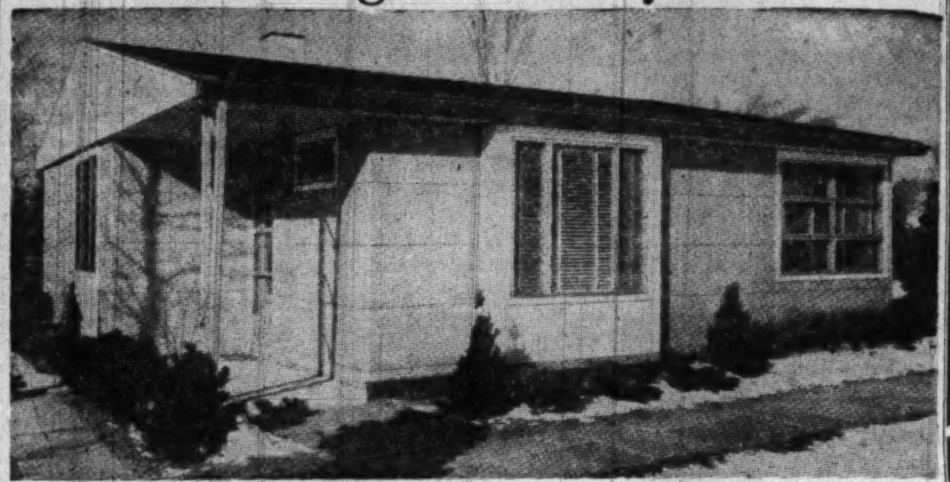
Lustron Brings Out Buyers



Exterior view of Lustron home to be erected at New Hampshire ave. and Rock Creek Parkway nw.

NEW YORK, May 8.—If Lustron Corp., manufacturers of a porcelain-enameled steel five-room bungalow, can turn out a steady flow of factory-produced homes, they can write their own ticket in the prefabricated home field.

Public acceptance of their product has overwhelmed the company. The Lustron home is expected to sell for around $8000, excluding lot.

This reporter this week inspected a Lustron model home erected on a Manhattan parking lot at Avenue of the Americas and 52d st. I talked with 38 people inspecting the unique home.

Three said the home "wasn't for them." Pressed for reasons, all declared it was either too small, or that they didn't like the metal panels. Every one else queried thought the house was "wonderful, terrific, a dream house" and several other descriptive cliches.

Out of the 38 people questioned, 11 were willing to make an immediate down payment if zoning and financing could be arranged. All 38 said the home had great potentialities.

On comparing notes with a New York reporter, the latter remarked: "Cripes, any story you write about this house is going to be just like an advertisement for Lustron." It's that kind of a house.

Lustron Model Home To Be Erected Here

A Lustron porcelain enameled steel home will be put up in Washington within the next month, The Washington Post learned yesterday. Land is now being cleared at site near the junction of New Hampshire ave., Rock Creek Parkway and E st. nw. Lustron personnel from Columbus, Ohio, will erect the structure. The local distributor has not yet been named.

Plenty of Buyers

THE Lustron home was opened here for public inspection on April 14. Since then the New York distributor has put in two additional telephone trunk lines for incoming calls, added four persons to his staff to handle personal inquiries, and doubled the size of his mailing room.

For an estimated $8000 the buyer receives a finished home including numerous built-in items, a dish-clothes washer and screens. The buyer furnishes the lot, range and refrigerator. Overall cost to the buyer, including everything, would be around $10,000.

Persons ready to make an immediate full cash down payment would have purchased the entire quota of 2500 houses allotted to New Jersey, Connecticut and New York City this year within the first five days the house was on exhibition, according to a spokesman for Karsten Builders, a subsidiary of the New York area distributor.

Full factory production at Columbus, Ohio, is scheduled for June and first deliveries are expected to arrive in New York in July. The builders have not yet accepted any orders or down payments, but expect to do so in about two weeks.

This controversial home is definitely something entirely new in the housing field. The porcelain enamel is applied to the steel at such high temperature that it fuses with the steel. Light pastel colors are used.

Lustron Corporation says the resulting enameled steel panels are impervious to weather conditions, salt air, sulphur fumes and other substances. Thus, the problem of repainting interior and exterior walls is said to be eliminated. Walls can be cleaned with soap and water.

Like all new building products many "bugs" remain. Questions such as zoning and mortgage financing are the two chief bugaboos. The basementless two-bedroom bungalow would be outlawed in many residential areas calling for homes with cellars and two-story elevations. C. P. H.

New Home Permits Zoom Upwards

Building permits to erect 522 dwelling units in the District were issued last month, according to the District Building Inspector's office. This was 382 more units than March's total of 140.

Total value of building construction authorized in April came to $4,997,069, a large gain over March's total of $3,524,728. Housing units to be constructed by areas included: Southeast, 314; Northeast, 102; Northwest, 106.

Permits were granted for erection of 124 brick homes, 5 frame homes, 35 brick apartment buildings to house 393 families, 12 private garages, 1 church and 2 restaurants.

Valley Enterprises Plan New Theater

Plans are in progress for construction of a 1000-seat theater at Columbia rd. and Mozart sts. nw., it was disclosed yesterday. Owner is Valley Enterprises, Inc., care of William K. Briley, agent, 1625 Connecticut ave. nw.

John and Drew Eberson of New York City are architects.

Construction Dollar Volume 25% Higher

The construction activity continued at a high level during the first three months of 1948, according to the Department of Commerce's construction division. Total value of new construction amounted to nearly $3,100,000,000, an increase of 25 per cent over the same period of 1947.

Currently, the report added, the volume of new private housing started shows an increase of only about 15 per cent over the early months of 1947.

Private industrial building was the only major type of construction which failed in the first quarter of 1948 to exceed its volume for the same period of 1947, with a decrease of about 20 per cent. There has been a steady decline in industrial construction since the latter part of 1946, the report said.

Public residential construction fell to only 14 million dollars in the first quarter of 1948, in comparison with 96 million dollars in the same period of 1947. The report said the drop reflected the substantial completion during the first half of 1947 of the Government's program for re-use of war housing and of other wartime structures for temporary housing purposes.

New construction activity in the first quarter was at an annual rate of over 15 billion dollars on a seasonally adjusted basis. This would be a 20 per cent increase over 1947.

A total of 164,000 new permanent family dwelling units was started in the first quarter of 1948, an increase of 15 per cent over the same period of 1947.

Martinsburg Hospital Contract Is Awarded

Plummer & Sons of Martinsburg, Va., have been awarded a building contract to erect the Kings Daughters Hospital in Martinsburg, by hospital authorities. The estimated cost of the structure is $1,361,104, of which the Government will pay $353,533.

Ronald S. Senseman, 327 Carroll st. nw., is the architect.

No Red Tape, Long Delays, In Proposed Permit Bureau

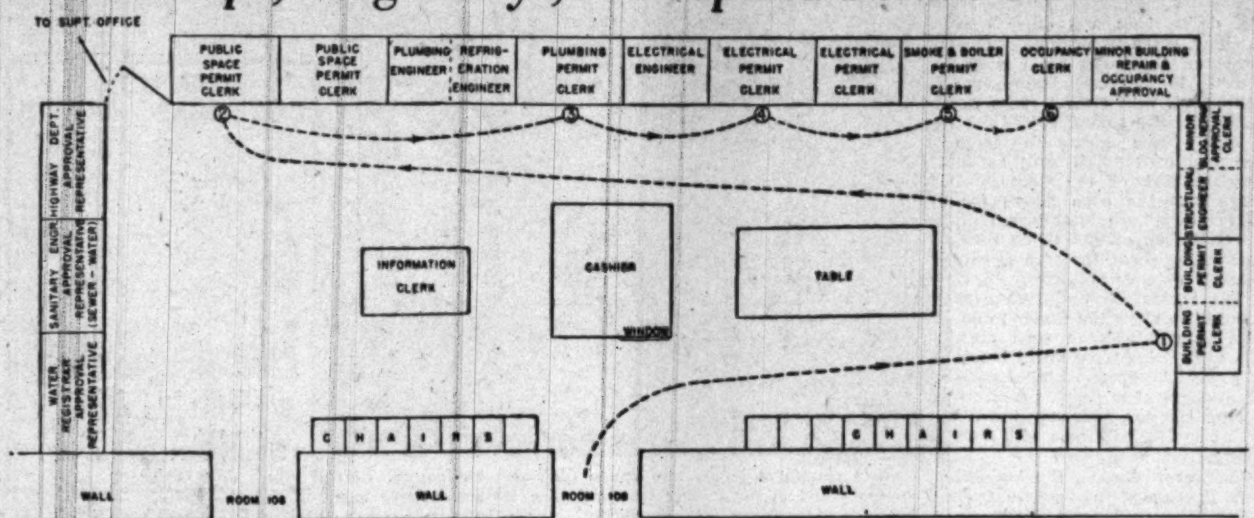

CHART shows proposed layout of streamlined one-stop building permit bureau in the District building. At station No. 1, application would file following permits: razing, excavation, new construction, barricade erection, storage shed and building material; projections beyond building line; retaining wall on private property; fencing, elevator, awnings. Station 2: driveway, parking slip, retaining wall and fence on commercial property. Station 3: gas fitting and plumbing installation; refrigeration. Station 4: electrical fixture installation. Station 5: boiler installation. Station 6: Certificate of occupancy. Maximum number of permits necessary for any one job would be 19—for razing a building and replacing it with a new apartment house. All 19 could be filed in one day at the proposed bureau—or about 4 hours if the applicant filled out the blanks in advance

All processing will be handled by District employes and additional information in most cases will be obtained from the applicant by phone or mail instead of in person.

To cite an example, a person who wants a permit for building a fence or wall on public space now must wait three days, make two trips to the District Building, and visit a total of seven offices. He'll get the same permit in about 15 minutes with one trip to the new central bureau.

Applicants seeking plumbing permits for house connections to water or sewer systems now spend two hours trudging to seven offices on four separate floors in the District Building. At the proposed central bureau, such permits may be obtained in 10 to 15 minutes—with the applicant waiting comfortably in a chair.

About three months and "several" trips to as many as a dozen offices now are required to obtain a permit to construct a new building. Only two trips to the new central office will be necessary.

37,000 Prefabs Completed in '47

Prefabricated home manufacturers produced 37,000 of the Nation's 835,000 homes completed last year, a report from the Prefabricated Home Manufacturers' Institute, 908 20th st. nw., disclosed yesterday.

Some 80 companies participated in the production of the 37,000 units, with the average manufacturer achieving a 50 per cent production increase over 1946, the report said.

John W. Pease of Cincinnati, newly elected president of the institute, predicted that more than 50,000 prefabs would come off production lines this year.

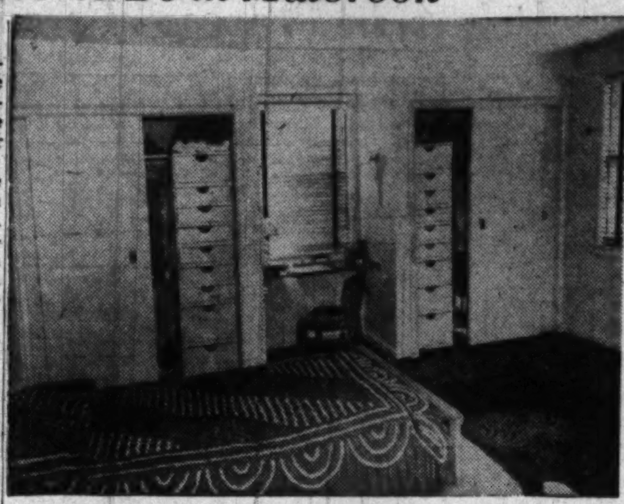
ets, desks, bars and other eye-catching, space-saving items. One closet off the living room is designed to accommodate game equipment, with special racks for folding bridge tables, etc.

Each home boasts a large screened back porch built as an integral part of the house. A large barbecue oven allows picnics on even the rainest days. With doors leading off the living room and dining room, the area is perfect for outdoor dining.

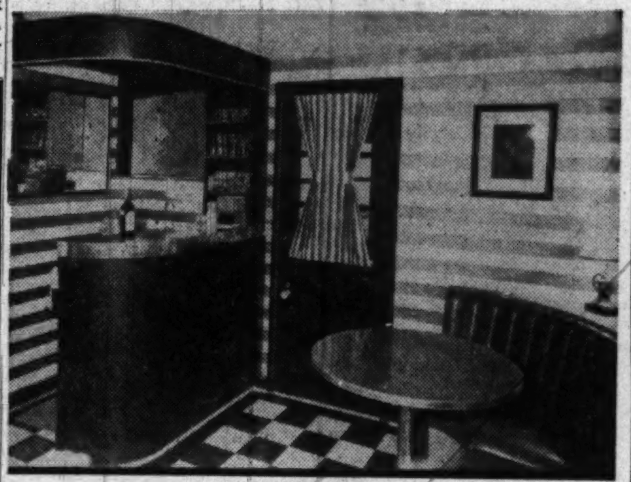
The radiant heating system is "zoned" to allow the owner to adjust temperatures in each area. Thus the living room might be set at a cozy 72 degrees, with bedrooms at 65 degrees for sleeping comfort.

Each master bedroom has its own complete bathroom with linen closet.

Besides Malbrook, the builders are developing a 56-acre tract across the road from Malbrook. Called Holmes Run Park, it is also a setting for ramblers, with six up and another six under way. Prices range from $20,000 to $30,000 for the smaller buildings.



Built-in closets and furniture are a Malbrook trademark. This double closet in the master bedroom of a Malbrook home also boasts a nine-drawer interior cabinet. Space between has been turned into a unique desk



Dr. Caprio's residence in Malbrook contains this beautiful bar, with built-in lounge and table. Room is situated between the living room and bedroom wing, with a door opening into large screened porch featuring a barbecue oven built into the house itself

Housing Flow Predicted if Bill Passes

NEW YORK, May 8.—Passage of the Taft-Ellender-Wagner housing bill would expand a trickle of new houses into a stream whose benefits would aid all citizens, Senator Ralph E. Flanders (R., Vt.), told the seventeenth annual National Public Housing Conference here this week.

The convention, held May 3-5, attracted hundreds of national and State housing leaders. Several members of Congress, including Representatives Helen Gahagan Douglas (D., Calif.), Jacob K. Javits (R., N. Y), and John W. McCormack (D., Mass.), were on the program. Senator Robert Taft (R., Ohio), was represented by a recorded speech.

Senator Flanders hit what he termed the building industry's failure to achieve the efficiency and economies of the modern industrial system. Antiquated system of distribution and other handicraft methods, inefficient failures were cited. Progressive tendencies toward modernization of production and distribution, he said, were being constantly thwarted by local laws and agreements entered into mutually by various building groups to preserve the old system.

Delegates were told that amendments introduced by Senator Flanders to the T.-E.-W. bill on March 15 would give the Government the tools to help industry reduce costs so that enough houses would be produced to serve American housing needs.

"These amendments authorize a comprehensive program of research to develop, demonstrate and encourage the use of new techniques, materials and methods and provide the financing aids needed for the establishment of mass production methods and creation of mass markets," he said.

He warned, however, that if the bill were passed, new homes wouldn't roll off production lines immediately. He hoped that builders would receive factory assembled sections that they could erect rapidly and cheaply, materials and stook items in standard measurements that wouldn't require expensive on-site shaping and cutting, and entire mechanical units, such as bathroom plumbing, which would come already assembled.

"From all these," he declared, "I hope we will get economies in construction which will result in lower prices, more sales and more production."

In discussing the controversial public housing feature of the TEW bill. Senator Flanders scoffed at its alleged "socialistic" scheme.

"I've heard it said that public housing is socialistic," he exclaimed. "I cannot see much socialism in a public program designed to take care of the urgent needs of a small segment of our population in a program that borrows private money, hires private architects and awards contracts to private contractors."

In discussing the 500,000 public housing units to be erected under the bill's provisions, he said: "I am hopeful that as this modest program nears completion, private enterprise will be doing such a good job of taking care of the people's needs that no more public housing will be needed."

One speaker, Anne X. Alpern, city solicitor of Pittsburgh and president of the National Institute of Municipal Law Officers, charged that real estate interests were overlooking a good bet in not vigorously supporting the bill. She claimed that removal of slums and redevelopment of blighted areas, as provided in the bill, would stimulate building and increase realty values.

THE GARDENER

Careful: Don't Overfeed

'String' Bean Stringless, Thanks to Plant Breeders

By James H. Beattie

STRING beans have almost disappeared, thanks to plant breeders and seedsmen, who developed fine quality, stringless varieties.

Green beans belong in every garden. The plant is easily satisfied about soil and location, and only a small amount of space is required to produce worthwhile results. Beans may be planted relatively early, and succession plantings may follow throughout the season until a few weeks before frost.

Beans do well as a catch crop to follow peas, spinach or any other plant that vacates garden space as much as seven or eight weeks before the expected frost date.

A frequent cause of failure with green beans is due to overfeeding. Land that has received heavy applications of poultry litter, garden compost and commercial fertilizer is likely to produce a heavy crop of bean foliage with very few beans. Many gardeners use the less fertile portions of the garden for beans, applying commercial fertilizer alone to the crop.

The use of an excessive amount of nitrogen, singly or in combination with other materials, is usually objectionable. On the other hand, the use of an abundance of superphosphate worked into the soil while it is being prepared for planting is wise. Two or three ounces to each bean hill or linear foot of row is usually about right.

Wax beans are considered by many to be the tenderest of all

Be Cautious With Lime

BEANS are injured by too much lime. Both beans and potatoes should be grown in portions of the garden where little if any lime has been applied. In the Washington area, beans commonly suffer from a deficiency of magnesium. This may be corrected by using about 50 pounds of ground dolomitic limestone to each 1000 square feet of garden space, or by sprinkling the bean plants with a solution of epsom salts, about a pound to each gallon of water.

It is claimed that the practice will prevent rabbit damage. Extended experience indicates that the practice is none too successful.

There's an abundance of high quality varieties to choose from. Seed of the newer sorts is not always available. Puregold, a beautiful stringless yellow, and Logan, a United States Department of Agriculture production with stringless green pods, are both resistant to the bean mosaic.

Bush snap beans: Giant Stringless Greenpod, Tendergreen, Pencil Pod Wax, Brittle Wax.

Pole snap beans: White Seeded Rust Resistant Kentucky Wonder, Lazy Wife, White Creaseback.

Pole beans may be planted along the garden fence, on a trellis, on poles or other supports, thereby conserving garden space. They require more time to start bearing and there is a greater tendency to stringiness than with most bush sorts. The planting of short succession rows of bush sorts is so simple that most gardeners confine their attention to the bush varieties.

Planting Is Simple

SOME of the common mistakes in planting beans may be easily avoided. While seed treatment with Arasan, Spergon or some other suitable fungicide is not as important with green beans as is the case with the limas, the practice does insure better stands. Bush bean plants should be about three inches apart in the rows, but to obtain this stand one should place the seeds somewhat thicker, and later on thin the plants to the desired spacing.

Bean seed practically never

Tips on Bean Culture

germinates perfectly. Too deep covering and covering with soil that forms a hard surface crust are especially objectionable. Planting when the ground is too wet aggravates this trouble. It is an excellent plan to cover bean seeds with some material that will not bake. Fortunately, garden soils in good physical condition seldom cause trouble.

Light-textured land such as sandy loams are also comparatively free from trouble. Bean seeds covered an inch to an inch and a half deep with some sandy loam, a mixture of peat moss and sand, a mixture of vermiculite and sand, well rotted garden compost or other similar materials will usually emerge satisfactorily.

It pays to sprinkle the bean row a few times until the plants emerge. Still another plan consists in covering the bean row with a mulch of straw, leaves, garden compost or other material, removing same as soon as the plants begin to come through the surface of the soil. This keeps the soil moist and prevents the formation of a crust.

Bean Enemies

IN THE Washington area the Mexican bean beetle ranks first among the enemies of the garden bean. Unless controlled it will quickly destroy the crop. Fortunately, the control of this insect is not difficult, provided one starts early. Hand picking of the adult beetles every two or three days is simple and effective. Every beetle destroyed prevents the development of a large number of larvae. Systematic dusting or spraying with a suitable insecticide provides the real remedy.

Don't use DDT for this insect: It is not effective.

Don't use paris green or arsenate of lead on garden beans. They injure the plants.

Don't use cryolite after the pods form.

Experience shows that spraying or dusting with cryolite, especially on the underside of the leaves, at intervals of about 10 days until the pods begin to form, then with rotenone dust or spray; or with the rotenone treatment from the beginning will control the beetle. It is especially necessary to destroy bean plantings that have passed their usefulness and not leave them as a breeding place for beetles.

Rabbits cause severe losses by eating the hearts from the young bean plants. The injured plants never entirely recover.

Rent Expediters Put Dark Lining On Housing Cloud

New Orleans, May 8 (AP).—There is no improvement in the housing situation in sight, the Nation's seven housing expediters agreed Friday.

Meeting here with Tighe E. Woods, National Housing Expediter, the regional expediters all reported "virtually no rentals" being constructed in any section of the Nation. Some multi-units are being built, but not for rent, and sales prices are far beyond the reach of middle and low-income groups, they reported.

Most optimistic was Russell Stephens of Dallas, expediter for the fifth region. He reported:

"The housing situation is almost as tight as a year ago, but it is gradually, although slowly, bettering."

Other reports were from:

Edgar J. Driscoll, Boston—"Extremely acute. No signs of relaxation."

P. H. Hofstra, New York—"Tighter than ever before."

Oscar Abern, Chicago—"Little, if any, housing relief."

Ward Cox, San Francisco—"Critical situation."

Kenneth Campbell, Atlanta—"Situation continuing critical."

Charles H. Queary, Cleveland, Ohio—"It's worst in the Midwest than ever before."

Average Home Buyer in '47 Earned $3600

The average family buying a home in 1947 with FHA financing had an income of $3600, the National Association of Home Builders reported yesterday. The average mortgage insured in the Washington metropolitan area was $7992, with a national average of $6718.

Nearly 1,155,000 veterans have purchased homes through the GI Bill program with total loans of more than $6,600,000,000, according to latest VA figures.

VA figures show that the average cost of a home purchased by a veteran last year was $7300. The builders' association cited the figure to show that "houses being built today are still well within the reach of most employed families."

Meanwhile, the association pointed out, construction of new houses in 1948 is rolling along at an even faster speed than in the record-breaking year 1947. The current rate of construction, according to official government estimates, bears promise of making 1948 the biggest home construction year in history.

More than twice as many new dwelling units were started in the first three months of 1948 under FHA inspection as were started under similar conditions in 1947. Reports of the Bureau of Labor Statistics show that a total of 164,000 new homes were started in the first quarter of the year, an increase of 16 per cent over the first quarter of 1947, which was itself considered an exceptional period.

MANOR CLUB ESTATES

Continental Commuter

U. S. One Big Realty Tract To This Traveling Salesman

By David G. Bareuther

NEW YORK, May 8 (AP).—The United States is just one big real estate development to David B. Gadlow.

Gadlow lives in Ross, Marin County, Calif., goes to church in Boston, and works in New York, Dallas, Chicago, Atlanta, Omaha—any place where he finds a buyer or seller for property with a value running into millions.

GADLOW

In the last three years he has sold 40 million dollars worth of real estate, specializing in all cash transactions. He says he gets the most fun closing these big deals in Manhattan, where he got his start as a boy—selling newspapers near Wall Street.

Gadlow went back to that same neighborhood recently to sell the enormous home office building of the Western Union Telegraph Company for $12,500,000, one of the highest prices ever paid for a single New York building. He hopped out to Omaha to find a buyer—the Woodmen of the World Life Insurance Society.

That was the kind of transaction Gadlow concentrates on—in which a company sells its real estate to a big institution and then leases the property right back, remaining as a tenant in a building it formerly owned.

Such deals form one of the newest wrinkles in real estate. The Institute of Life Insurance says that in the last year life insurance companies have bought 120 million dollars worth of properties under such arrangements.

Gadlow has sold properties to Yale University and other educational institutions, various life insurance companies and several charitable foundations seeking long-term investments.

"The seller," he says, "gets cash to use in his business without the expense of floating a loan. His business goes right on at the old stand by virtue of a long lease. He can deduct all rent payments as a business expense on his income tax return.

No Worries for Lessee

"THE BUYER gets a steady income on the full value of the property. A mortgage loan, on the other hand, would cover only part value, which would mean a smaller outlet for investment funds. By owning the property, such investors have no worry about possible foreclosure expenses and delays. The nuisance of managing the property is eliminated by the terms of the lease—the tenant manages the property, pays all the taxes, assessments and upkeep.

Films Couldn't Do Better by Mother

By Richard L. Coe

MOTHER, BLESS HER HEART, always comes off well in the movies—the greeting card boys put her on a pedestal, but the screen has made her a saint. Would that Hollywood treated authors as well as it treats Mother.

Consider mother. Do you catch the movies suggesting that mom is anything but a great, wonderful influence? If you wanted to go into it deeply, a case could be made that mother's hold on some of her movie children has been definitely to their detriment, but you'd have to scratch below the surface, a matter the movies never, well, hardly ever, do. Philip Wylie's "Momism" isn't touched on in the movies, nor do you dig the boys playing around with Sidney Howard's "Silver Cord" theme.

There is, to be sure, something of a class consciousness about mother in the movies. Mother of the poorer classes is always ridden with troubles, ever slaving for her little brood, or, as in the case of Ma Kettle, big brood (comic style). Irene Dunne's recent "I Remember Mama" showed up a wonderfully practical lady, and even in the screen transcription of "Tobacco Road," mother had more virtues than she did in the Caldwell original.

The Balmy Mommy

MOTHER of the upper classes is always absurd, just the balmy sort of dimwit that Spring Byington is playing on the Capitol screen these days in "B. F.'s Daughter." There must be something pathological about the wealthy movie makers' treatments of the rich man's wife. Alice Brady, Mary Boland, Alison Skipworth, Fay Holden (apart from her Mrs. Hardy roles), Constance Collier, Florence Bates, Elisabeth Risdon, Margaret Dumont and the busy Miss Byington—to name a few at random—have all reaped fortunes by limning the upper class mother who toils not nor spins and hasn't a grain of sense in her potty pate. When those ladies are playing the wives of rich men, no holds are barred on making mother a sap. A congressional committee might make something subversive of all this.

Ethel Barrymore and Gladys Cooper have become exceptions to this rule, based, presumably, on their air of gentility. No producer has dared suggest that in their youth either of these ladies would have married beneath them. Always, the Misses Barrymore and Cooper are to the manner born, Miss Barrymore's excursion into the realism of "None But the Lonely Heart" having shaken the customers.

Mothers of professional men are treated with interesting respect. Judge Hardy's wife has all the noble virtues of a First Lady and you may recall that in Moss Hart's adaptation of "Gentleman's Agreement" much footage was exploited on the crusading writer's affection for his mother. There was considerably more attention to establishing this relationship than in the book, the idea presumably being that once the audience grasped the fact that Gregory Peck was kind to mother, his sorties into troublesome territory would be forgiven.

Authors, however, must envy mother a good deal.

Films From Books

AROUND town quite a few of the current films are from books: the Warner's "Winter Meeting" (by Ethel Vance); the Capitol's "B. F.'s Daughter" (by J. P. Marquand); Keith's "The Miracle of the Bells" (by Russell Janney) and the Columbia's "The Big Clock" (by Kenneth Fearing). In each instance, the script writers, probably not at their own instance, have shifted the entire approach and tone of the author. This is not to say that an author's work is sacred; but it is certainly reasonable for an audience to expect that the title which lures them will bear some resemblance to what they are tacitly promised.

Take Marquand's story. The satirical approach to a liberal who discovers that money is fun to have has been watered down to a trite yarn about married life and misunderstandings. Because the role is played by a Metro star (Van Heflin), the hero's affair with his secretary becomes an innocent gesture of aid to a blind refugee. The result is trite nonsense.

Janney's enormously popular best seller has become a phony treatment of faith. The idea that the miracle of Coaltown was the conversion of hypocrites has been completely ignored. The result is a blatently insincere picture.

Fearing's mystery novel, which gave promise of being a tense movie, becomes sensationally incredible by the trite reiteration of marital misunderstandings.

Of Miss Vance's novel, at this writing I cannot judge, but whatever its original contents, Reviewer Orval Hopkins—with quite a few others—scorns the picture as utter balderdash.

In three of these four, certainly, the pith of a good movie was there. How most novelists, seeing their brainchildren on the screen, must envy Hollywood's respect for mother.

Musicals Draw Frowns

NEW YORK, May 8.—Last week's two musical arrivals weren't too well received . . . "Hold It," the Sammy Lambert collegiate musical, with Red Buttons, Johnny Downs and Jet McDonald, was generally described as "wan" or "dull" . . . The revival of "Sally," starring Willie Howard and Bambi Lina in the old Leon Errol and Marilyn Miller roles, also is on the slight side, despite "Look for the Silver Lining" . . . At the City Center, Jose Ferrer's group came up with another Ben Johnson revival, "The Alchemist," and despite a good deal of lively behavior from Ezra Stone, George Coulouris and Hiram Sherman, you'd know it dated from 1610

Friends of Music

Dumbarton Series Wins High Praise

By Paul Hume

THE Friends of Music of Dumbarton Oaks heard six outstanding concerts during the past season. These programs have a significance for concert-goers in Washington far beyond their influence upon the limited number of listeners who heard them.

Considerations of space and budget prevent these concerts from being heard by large audiences; for that matter, they were not designed, and are not appropriate for large auditoriums such as Constitution Hall. But their musical contents are of such inherent worth, and the manner of their performance so outstanding in a day of mediocrity in repertoire and performance alike that they deserve comment in these columns.

The series opened in December with two evenings devoted to music by Johann Sebastian Bach. In addition to all six of the Brandenburg Concertos, these programs included the D minor clavier concerto, and the concerto in C minor for violin, oboe and strings.

Brilliant Examples

GUIDING spirits behind these programs were Ralph Kirkpatrick, eminent harpsichordist, and Alexander Schneider, violinist and former member of the Budapest String Quartet.

Bach's Brandenburg Concertos are brilliant, inspired examples of the profound contrapuntal art of the great genius of the eighteenth century. The privilege of hearing them performed approximately in the manner for which they were intended and within the space of a little more than 24 hours is seldom accorded us these days. Both the manner and the realization of the artists were conducive to that exhilarating effect these works should convey.

In February, a concert of music by Franz Schubert was presented, with Doda Conrad, bass, and the Albeneri trio. Conrad contributed his uniquely sensitive reading of the "Winterreise" cycle which has been heard publicly in Washington.

Schneider and Erich Itor Kahn brought forward the late duo in A Major for violin and piano, and the trio added the wonderful work in E flat.

Salute to Mitchell

IN SOME WAYS the most remarkable concert of the series was that prepared by Paul Callaway and played by a chamber orchestra of 24 of Washington's finest musicians, with Howard Mitchell as soloist. Mitchell, for years first cellist of the National Symphony Orchestra, and more recently its associate conductor as well, emerged in this program as one of the master artists of today.

As Result of Court Decision on Movies

Two on Aisle May Cost Less

By Sigrid Arne

THIS past Monday the Supreme Court told the billion-dollar movie industry that it would have to think up new ways to sell its films. It said the old ways were making it too hard for both the independent movie companies and the independent theater owners to make a living.

The court found that the present method of selling films had set up a gross-grid of monopolies which siphoned the "cream of the business" into the hands of eight big movie companies, and into the hands of the bigger theater chains which were willing to play ball with the big eight.

The Monday decision was complicated. It was actually three different decisions, but they tied into one another.

There was one which involved Paramount, Loew's, RKO, Warner Bros. and Twentieth Century-Fox. These companies make pictures and peddle them as well to their own theaters and to houses owned by other people.

This decision also involved Columbia and Universal, which make pictures and peddle them to anyone who wants them. They own no theaters. There was also United Artists, which merely peddles pictures.

There was a second decision which involved the Schine Chain Theaters, Inc., which own houses in six States—New York, Ohio, Kentucky, Maryland, Delaware and Virginia.

The third decision involved the Griffith Consolidated Theaters, which own houses in Oklahoma, Texas and New Mexico.

The three decisions, together, told the industry that it can no longer either sell or buy pictures in bundles. Movie-makers like RKO will have to sell each picture separately, and theater owners, even though they own chains of houses, will have to buy for each house separately.

Not the Final Answer

THE case has been brewing for 30 years—since independent theater owners began to kick that they were being shut out of the first showing of big feature pictures. Ten years ago the argument got into the courts. There have been some minor decisions, but Monday's action is the climax. Yet, it is not the final answer. The court asked that some points be cleared up further by lower courts before the Supreme Court acts.

What does it mean to the people who see pictures? It can mean this:

Shows in some houses may be cheaper.

Moviegoers may be able to see first runs of the big features at their neighborhood houses, instead of piling the family downtown to the main-street houses.

What does it mean to the industry?

Curiously, Government lawyers say that Hollywood (which opposed the decision) may make more money for their pictures in the long run because there will be more theaters bidding for them.

People who run independent theaters will have a better chance to show first-run pictures, and take the profits.

Independent movies and foreign films will have a better chance of getting into the big main-street show houses. The public should get a more varied entertainment menu.

Over all, the Government lawyers say, the decision has made the buying and selling of movies a more competitive business.

Here's the machinery that the Supreme Court either said must be stopped or changed:

1. PRICE FIXING. This is now illegal. Up until now the movie companies have written contracts which prevented theaters from charging less than a fixed price to show their films.

2. CLEARENCES. These were agreements that promised a big theater that a popular feature could not be shown in competing neighborhood theaters for a certain number of days. The court said these promises are all right when theaters are in real competition and the period isn't too long. But when the agreement hurts the business of the second-run houses, then it's bad. Lawyers agree that there will have to be more court cases to clear up what is too long a "clearance."

3. POOLING AGREEMENTS. These are out. These were arrangements under which two big movie makers, like Paramount and RKO, would agree to show each others' features in the houses both of them owned. Further, where each was turning out very popular pictures, their theaters got the first shot.

4. MASTER AGREEMENTS. These were agreements under which a big theater circuit signed up to take so many movies turned out by one company and then was free to allocate them among all their theaters. These agreements are out.

5. BLOCK BOOKING. This was a system under which the big movie makers forced theaters to take a certain number of movies before they even saw them. Agreements were written as much as a year in advance. This is forbidden.

6. MONOPOLY IN THEATER HOLDINGS. The Supreme Court held that some theater companies own houses in such a way that they make it impossible for competitors to come into a town. The court said this is wrong, and some theaters must be sold. But the court said that the lower courts hadn't done enough investigating on what theaters ought to be sold. The court asked the lower courts to reopen this case, and find out.

Wardrobe Mistress Laments

Trouble Is, Chorines Know Plato, Not Men

By Ruth Constad

NEW YORK, May 8 (U.P.). — The person who has undressed more chorines than any other, said today that millionaires are not proposing to the dancing gals the way they used to.

Gone are the glorious days when every beautiful chorine danced her way into the social register, Broadway's oldest wardrobe mistress lamented.

Now, she sighed, they've developed brains and lost their seductiveness. They're studying Plato instead of men.

Agnes Ferguson, who's been undressing the show girls at Billy Rose's Diamond Horseshoe for 20 years, said the trouble is that dancing girls have gotten too smart and about the wrong things.

"The old chorines," said Miss Ferguson, "never stayed at home and studied Plato, but they sure learned how to throw their legs around.

"Practically all the new ones are college girls," she said. "Maybe the millionaires don't like 'em so smart."

"Why, I remember when Gladys Glad, the toast of her day, married Mark Hellinger, and Dolores, another show beauty, married a French millionaire. Some of the other chorines married into the Whitney, Gould and Vanderbilt families."

Now that the girls are smart, she said, it's a real shame. There are no more limousines waiting at the stage entrance, no more mash notes, orchids and diamonds delivered at the stage door.

Instead of the six-foot glamour gals drinking champagne out of their own slippers they're sipping cokes in Broadway drugstores.

"They're marrying stage-hands now," she said, "Oh, some marry fairly comfortable and raise large families but most just stay on practicing their singing and dancing."

Her girls, she said, are between 18 and 23, and every bit as beautiful as they ever were. Billy Rose's rules are strict, though, and the dancing girls are not allowed to date the customers at the club, she said.

"But I wish they hadn't gotten so interested in their careers," she added. "They'd have been better off financially in the long run, if you know what I mean."

He May Be Antitrust

Maybe Godfrey Should Edit Himself a Little

By John Crosby

ARTHUR GODFREY, a candidate for antitrust prosecution if ever I saw one, is on the Columbia Broadcasting System (WTOP) approximately all day and all night. In addition, he's on WCBS in New York around 6 a. m. and stays there for hours, I'm told. Since the last time I wrote a column about him, he's become almost as famous as Dr. Kinsey and has earned roughly his weight in emeralds.

Recently there have been bleats of alarm from the talent-hunting shows—Godfrey's Talent Scouts, Paul Whiteman's On Stage, America, and NBC's Big Break—that there doesn't seem to be enough talent to go around and the way they're burning it up I'm not at all surprised. After listening to a Godfrey show on Monday, it's not hard to see what they mean.

Godfrey presented a baritone, a blind English pianist, a Norwegian soprano, and a quartet.

The baritone was about as good as any of the music students you hear on summer nights through the open windows around Carnegie Hall. The Norwegian soprano sang "Oh, Give Me Something to Remember You By" as if she were leaning against a piano, wringing a handkerchief. The quartet dashed through "Exactly Like You" not much better than the quartets around Bleecks at 3 a. m. The English pianist was creditable on "Body and Soul," good enough, I'd say, for any nightclub.

Nevertheless there were three winners—the baritone got lost somehow—and the next day they all appeared on Godfrey's morning show (CBS, 11 a. m., Mondays through Fridays). The blind pianist played "Body and Soul," the Norwegian girl was still seeking something to remember him by; the quartet, a versatile crew, tried something new. The talent pool, in this case, was not only small but of exceedingly limited repertoire. I've no objection to Godfrey spreading himself around CBS so generously but I don't think it's wise to disperse the unknown talent all over the network that way.

Commercial Puncher

GODFREY, of course, punches commercials around and succeeds in kidding the advertising and selling the product at the same time. As a sample, here is Godfrey on Lipton's Soup Mix, which, believe it or not, comes in an envelope.

"Lipton's is a happy soup. You see, when soup comes in cans it's repressed. It can't move around or anything interesting. Lipton's Soup Mix is different. It can take a trip up to the corner of the envelope to see what's going on. It has an interesting existence. Naturally an interesting soup is going to taste better than one that has become neurotic through being canned.

"When the soup is boiling the fun really starts. The noodles swirl around on top and wash each other's backs. The male noodles teach the females how to swim. It's wonderful."

What effect this has on the Campbell's Soup people, one of the largest advertisers on CBS, who make that neurotic, canned stuff, I couldn't say.

I have a few complaints. Some of Godfrey's jokes are a little rough for the distaff crowd and

Berlin Says Luck Helped Him Write

By Saul Pett

NEW YORK, May 8 (AP).—It's rare for a man to tell stories about himself to indicate he was something less than an omnipotent genius.

That's only one reason why Irving Berlin is rare. Another is his 40-year career, in which he wrote more than 1000 songs, published about 800 and accounted for dozens of the Nation's biggest melody hits.

Interviewed on the approach of his sixtieth birthday (May 11), the dapper composer tried to dispel any ivory tower mystery that might surround the creation of song. Tunes might have become great, enduring symbols of a mass feeling or an era, but as far as Irving Berlin is concerned they were written only for a specific situation—a first act curtain or a movie production shot or a recruiting campaign.

IRVING BERLIN
. . . 1000 songs echoing

"The public does something with the tunes after that," he said. "I wrote 'Oh, How I Hate to Get Up in the Morning' just to amuse some guys in my barracks (during World War I). Look what happened to it.

Better Example

"'WHITE CHRISTMAS' is a better example. The public read things into it I never intended Of course, I'm thankful they did."

He sat down at his famous trick piano—it has a special lever which moves the whole keyboard into any key. Left to his own devices, Berlin could only play in F-sharp.

In a piping voice, he played and sang the verse to "White Christmas" — about somebody who was tired of sunny Los Angeles and the swimming and the warm weather in December and who was dreaming of spending the holiday midst snow. That was the extent of the man's suffering. No foxholes.

"You can see what that would have done to the song's future,"

Ilka Chase to Play National for a Week

A WACKY comedy, "There Goes the Bride," filled with "smart talk" and "smart people" brings Ilka Chase to the National Theater Monday night for a week's stay.

Miss Chase is known as a star of the stage and screen, she is a popular lecturer, a radio personality, a fashion expert and a successful author; her fourth book, "Free Admission," has just been published.

Ilka was born in New York City, the daughter of Edna Woolman Chase, editor of the fashion magazine, Vogue.

At 7 Ilka made her stage debut (in a convent) playing all four parts in "Puss and Boots." Her first New York professional appearance was in "The Red Falcon." Miss Chase is usually cast in drawing room roles, typed as a wise-cracking sophisticate and comedienne.

"In Bed We Cry," "Keep Off the Grass," "Revenge With Music," "Animal Kingdom" and "The Women" are her more recent stage appearances.

Miss Chase put so much realism into her portrayal of Sylvia Fowler, her acid role in the highly successful play "The Women," that audiences would go out plotting ways to murder her. She laments that her public thinks of her as a minx who maintains a tongue-in-cheek attitude toward domestic bliss.

Fank Fay Is Coming May 17 in 'Harvey'

WITH Frank Fay in the role he created, "Harvey" will be along for at least a four-week run at the National a week from Monday night, May 17.

Producer Brock Pemberton has outlined a tour of Eastern cities for the original star of the comedy that should keep him busy until the film version starts the cameras rolling. At the moment, there are two other companies playing "Harvey;" Joe E. Brown is touring the West Coast and Jack Buchanan is heading the New York company. A London version is in the works, possibly with Buchanan playing the lead.

Appearing with Fay at the National will be Dora Clement, as his baffled sister; Fred Irving Lewis, Graham Velsey and Mabel McCullum. The play was originally directed by the late Antoinette Perry.

Since its first presentation over 3½ years ago "Harvey" has become part of American folklore. As every one must know, "Harvey" is a 6-foot-1 rabbit who is seen only by his friend, Elwood P. Dowd, a genial man who has spent 40 years conquering reality and spends all his days and nights playing pinochle at the firehouses and accompanying his rabbit to most of the bars.

The National's seat sale for "Harvey" will open Thursday morning.

Color's Important Factor At Glen Echo Fun Park

COLOR, says the ruler of Glen Echo amusement park, is a big thing for fun-bound crowds.

Gleaming reds, lively greens, sunny yellows, clean whites have been splashed around at the big amusement park this season even more than in preceding ones. General Manager Leonard B. Schloss says he picks out certain colors for the psychological effects they have on his customers.

Youngsters, reports Schloss, go for bright colors on the carousel and like to hug their shiny horses. Grown-ups, too, he reports, seem to get a kick out of patting the carousel which brings them back to their childhood.

Schloss clinches his point by reporting what he heard one youngster of 55 remark to another of similar age: "I really like those bright colors. They're just like a hot cup of coffee. They perk me up and make me feed good." And "feed" was what he said.

The ballroom, Schloss continues, is more romantic in color—soft and conducive to the music of Paul Kain's orchestra and Helen Martin's dreamy songs.

'Eternal Life' Goes on Tonight

The Players' Club of Calvary Baptist Church will present Fred Eastman's one-act drama, "Eternal Life," tonight as part of the Sunday evening service in Woodward Hall, 8th and H sts. nw., at 7:45.

The play tells of a mother's courage and is based on a true incident. The cast includes Horace MacManus, Nell Weaver, Joyce Miller, Marian Chapman, Stuart O. Moretz and 7-year-old Clyde Finley Holt.

Miss Schuyler, 16, Playing Here Today

PHILIPPA DUKE SCHUYLER will play a recital this afternoon at 5 o'clock in the Asbury Methodist Church, 11th and K streets, nw.

Young Miss Schuyler, who will be 17 this summer, is not only a rarely gifted pianist, but a composer whose music has been played by the New York Philharmonic, the Chicago and San Francisco Symphonies.

Last spring Virgil Thomson, critic of the New York Herald Tribune, heard her at Fisk University's annual festival of music and said, "The high points of the festival in this reporter's experience of it came from making the acquaintance of Miss Schuyler's piano playing and general musicianship . . ."

This afternoon's program draws upon music by Scarlatti, Franck, Chopin, Brahms, Ravel, and the young pianist-composer herself.

Romberg Playing Here Tuesday

With Sigmund Romberg for his Tuesday night concert in Constitution Hall will be four singers from the country's operetta stages whose work makes them Romberg experts. Kirsten Kenyon, Donald Johnston, Marijane Maricle and Morton Rappe form this quartet which will sing with a 60-piece orchestra under the composer's direction.

Tuesday's night's concert will benefit the Welfare Fund of the Variety Club, a group whose contributions to numerous groups of the Capital have attracted national attention. Seats for the event are on sale at Kitt's, 1330 G st.

Concert Series For Youth Set

COMBINED Kiwanis Clubs of Arlington, Fairlington, and Woodbridge, Virginia, are initiating an annual series of "All-American" concerts. The programs are to feature young American artists, presenting them in recital in Constitution Hall.

WERRENRATH

Thursday, May 20, Fague Springman, native Washington baritone, who has sung many times in Washington, Philadelphia and New York, will open the series. His program will consist entirely of American music. Tickets are on sale at the Snow Concert Bureau.

The National Press Club announces a joint concert by its own chorus and the Baltimore and Ohio Glee Club. Directors Reinald Werrenrath and James Allen Dash will conduct, with assisting soloists. Saturday, May 22, in the Press Club Auditorium, tickets now on sale at the Press Club office.

AMERICAN UNIVERSITY announces a series of five concerts to be held today through Thursday. The recitals will be presented by piano, violin, and voice students of the university. Today's program is at 5:30; Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday the time is 8 p. m., in Hurst Hall, and Thursday's is at 8:15, in the gymnasium, where the university chorus will sing. The public is invited to all of these concerts.

Alexandria church choirs join in their second annual choir festival in St. Paul's Church on South Pitt Street, tonight at 8 p. m. Members of ten choirs will sing; the program includes individual anthems, and massed singing of famous old hymns.

St. Paul's Church will also be the scene of a secular concert next Friday at 8 p. m. Solos and ensemble numbers are planned to appeal to popular tastes.

The National League of Pen Women awards prizes for musical compositions, a generous gesture from an allied art. The coming days will hear performances of winning compositions by Estelle Cover, Iris Brussels, Katherine Lucke, Grace Bush, and Grace Hedge as the Pen Women meet.

The Postal Service Orchestra, sponsored by the Welfare and Recreational Association, and now in its ninth year under the direction of George E. Heisley, will give its annual spring concert in the Postmaster General's Reception Room, May 14, at 8:30 p. m. Admission will be by card to employees of the Postoffice Department, their relatives and friends.

Big Names to Grace Symphony Programs

THEBOM

TRAUBEL

NATIONAL SYMPHONY announcements for next season carry names which have meant much to music lovers for seasons.

Fritz Kreisler, Artur Rubinstein, Helen Traubel, and Salvatore Baccaloni will be heard with the orchestra in company with such newer comers as Rudolf Firkusny, Blanche Thebom, Eugene Istomin, Isaac Stern, and many more.

Music not heard every season, to which special attention attaches, includes Mahler's "Das Lied von der Erde," and Beethoven's Choral Fantasy for piano, chorus, and orchestra. To these announced novelties, others will be added as plans for the year proceed. Nell Tangeman, mezzo-soprano, heard in recent weeks in Washington in Bach's B Minor Mass, and Aaron Copland's "In the Beginning," will sing a solo role in Mahler's lengthy song symphony, sharing honors with Harold Haugh, who has sung the tenor solos here in Handel's "Messiah" for two seasons.

Marjorie Mitchell, pianist from Charlotesville, Va., will bow in with the Sunday afternoon concerts, playing Ferruccio Busoni's "Indian Fantasy." Busoni's name brings to mind also the name of Etelka Freund, a pupil of the great master; Mme. Freund will play the piano solo in the Beethoven Fantasy.

Non-subscription attractions include performances by Dame Myra Hess, and Ballet Theater. Dame Myra will play a recital, but will be joined by a chamber orchestra for Mozart's E Flat concerto, K. 271.

Prominent guest conductors are promised for those times when Hans Kindler will be in Europe. The orchestra's permanent conductor is expected in Holland and England in January and again in April.

Columbia Event Opening

NEW YORK, May 8 (AP).—Columbia University's fourth annual festival of contemporary American music, from May 10 to 16, promises for the fourth time to be one of the music season's most important events.

It will be inaugurated with eight performances of Otto Luening's new opera, "Evangeline." Among other premieres will be a mass by Roy Harris, Wallinford Rieger's Symphony No. 3, Lukas Foss's Quartet No. 1 and Quincy Porter's Concerto for Viola. Other composers to be represented are Paul Hindemith, Walter Piston, Roger Sessions, Richard Donovan, Cecil Effinger, Harold Shapero and Robert Palmer.

If you're not feeling well May 13 there's a concert you ought to attend. It will be at Hunter College, where Ignace Strasfogel will conduct the Doctors' Orchestral Society. In the orchestra of about 65 pieces there will be at least 50 doctors and nurses.

Soloist will be Violinist Benno Rabinoff. Strasfogel has scheduled one world premiere: "The Hospital," composed by Dr. Bernard M. Parris, a Philadelphia nose, ear and throat specialist, and orchestrated by Morton Gould. The story of the suite concerns a young matron about to have her appendix removed. Among the titles of the 10 short movements are "The Nurse," "The Intern," "Operating Room," "The Surgeon" and "Anaesthesia."

certo by Niccolo Porpora, and Paul Hindemith's Kammermusik No. 3 for cello and ten solo instruments, Mitchell displayed constant and thorough command of every facet of his art in a manner equalled by few musicians today. It is a shame that he has not been heard in a solo role with the National Symphony for seven years or more, for his absence from a season's list of soloists deprives the symphony's audiences of one of the rare treats in music today.

More surprising, coming as it did in something of the nature of a revelation, was the superb technical authority in orchestral conducting exhibited by Callaway. Known in Washington and throughout the country as a peerless organist and choral conductor, he astonished his audience by the breadth of his taste, and the finesse and beauty of the orchestra's performance.

A pastorale for flute, oboe, clarinet, piano and strings, by Paul Des Marais had its first performance on this occasion. The following day the young composer was awarded the Lili Boulanger Memorial Award for 1948. A Mozart Serenade for eight woodwinds, and Samuel Barber's Capricorn Concerto completed the program.

For Small Orchestra

IN ALL of these works, as well as in the Porpora and Hindemith, the players and Callaway emphasized the importance and beauty of music for small orchestra, a field which up to now has been almost entirely neglected in Washington. It is in this realm that the concerts presented in Harvard University's Dumbarton Oaks assume great significance for Washington. For in any city boasting of a truly musical culture one finds not only the large symphony orchestra, which is the central core of a community's musico-cultural life, but also those small ensembles which bring to life otherwise neglected masterpieces from our finest composers.

This same factor was apparent in the two final programs of the series, when a pair of concerts was drawn from the music of Mozart. With Jennie Tourel as soloist on both evenings, Schneider and Kirkpatrick again provided accompaniments and ensemble works of complimentary nature.

A clavier trio, fantasy for clavier alone, and the great oboe quartet in F Major surrounded Tourel's songs and arias the first evening. The second evening a chamber orchestra accompanied concertos for oboe and clavier, and played while Tourel sang three great arias.

Necessary Facet

THROUGH all the wealth of magnificent music and polished performances in these concerts, one became more aware of the need and desirability of such concerts for a larger public. Dumbarton Oaks and parallel institutions are a good and necessary facet of our musical life. The forces which bring them into being and continue to support them contribute much to our cultural life. New works are commissioned and old music revived through their ministrations.

But the honorable description of "sinfonietta," "chamber orchestra," or whatever other title one wishes to bestow upon the ensemble of 20 to 30 players, names a kind of musical organization without which our season cannot be said to be complete, no matter how great the accomplishments of the orchestras which play in Constitution Hall.

New York, Boston, Chicago, San Francisco, Indianapolis, Philadelphia, and many more centers have their various Friends of Music. Washington has appropriate places in which to hear such concerts. We hope the time may come when we have a permanent organization dedicated to the furthering of some such concerts.

Taking Pictures

NPS Is Moving to Develop New Photography Salon Here

By Ollie Atkins

Spearheading the drive to bring to Washington a nationally important photographic salon is this group, the board of directors of the National Photographic Society, left to right: H. K. Shaw, Mrs. C. A. Briggs, Gladys Hamlin, Maj. R. E. French, Captain Foy, H. B. Beville, Miss Ann-Katrine Shaw, P. F. Lambert, Louis Penland and Mary K. Bolton

DEVELOPMENT of a nationally important salon of photography in which all camera groups and individuals would be invited to take part is being studied by the National Photographic Society.

Black-and-white and color pictures will be solicited from the entire Nation to produce a showing of contemporary photography of a high level of craftsmanship.

Pictures will be displayed where the public may conveniently view them. Financing of the salon may be through sale of advertising in the salon catalogue, a customary means.

The National Photographic Society's board of directors, working with Charles Baptie as adviser, have already approved the project. A salon committee will be formed from all Washington area camera organizations to direct the task of getting the "First National Capital Salon of Photography" under way.

Baptie explains that by the Washington area is meant the region from Annapolis to Richmond. Standard salon rules of the Photographic Society of America will apply to the exhibition.

Certainly this project is one of the most worthwhile ever suggested for the photographers and picture-conscious public in Washington and the whole country. The Capital is an excellent place for a national salon. There is no reason why this could not be developed into the top ranking amateur photographic show in the country.

The White House News Photographers now hold the outstanding press photography show in the Nation. Here is the amateurs' chance to do the same thing. Or you don't have to limit it to amateurs—make it all kinds of photography and photographers. If interested, call or write Miss Ann-Katrine Shaw, secretary, the National Photographic Society, 723 Upshur st. nw., Washington (11).

A REVOLUTIONARY new sound projector called the Apollo was recently demonstrated here by Tom Jones and Washington dealers saw a projector which will put this usually expensive equipment right down in the amateur price range. It's not a "cheaply" made 16-mm. projector—savings come from new sound system and use of your home radio, without any wiring, for the speaker.

Secret of this Apollo projector seems to be in a tiny broadcasting system within the projector and using infra-red rays to replace costly and complex sound scanning systems to "broadcast" the sound signal right to your home radio.

This signal can be picked up on any "dead" spot on your radio dial, but it is not strong enough to interfere with other radios in nearby homes or apartments. Volume is controlled on your radio volume control.

Movie fans will want to see this machine which will be coming to Washington photo dealers next week.

ARE ANY camera clubs in Montgomery or Prince Georges Counties looking for a place to display their salon work? For connections leading to display space at the new Silver Spring Hecht Co., call Carl Bleiberg at National 5100. Bleiberg says some 40,000 people visited the recent art exhibit there so it sounds like a popular place to show pictures. Just club salons, not individual's, will be accepted.

Fuller & d'Albert Photo Supply Co. announces the new Rodeco 8-mm. movie projectors are on display with a host of new features not usually found on this low-cost outfit.

It has 750-watt illumination and accommodates 400-ft. reels of film. Projection is with a F/1.6 coated lens. There are no gears, no sprockets—20-second threading. It has rheostat speed control and removable condenser lens. Operation is very silent and the outfit is self-contained, needs no carrying case. No film loop is necessary. Height is 8¾ inches and weight is 12½ pounds.

Universal to Market New Home Projector

An improved model of Universal's PC-500 projector is in production and will be released this month, according to an announcement by General Sales Manager Morton M. Schwartz.

The original PC-500 was discontinued last year. However, a steady flow of requests for this popular 500-watt home movie projector prompted the release of the new model. It will retail at $75.

Tank's Price Cut

A reduction of $1 in the price of Fedco Deluxe sheet film developing tank was announced last week by Fedco Products of New York. The slash brought the retail price of the tank from $7.95 to $6.95.

10 Million to See GOP's Convention

By Wayne Oliver

NEW YORK, May 8 (AP).—Some 10 million persons are expected to be looking on when Republican delegates pick a presidential nominee at Philadelphia's Convention Hall the week of June 20.

That's the estimate of the television audience being made by industry leaders, according to Will Baltin, secretary of the Television Broadcasters Association. Thus the event is expected to be seen by more than three times as many as the estimated three million who saw the World Series last fall.

However, the television industry isn't taking sides politically in shooting the works on the GOP convention. The same coverage is planned for the Democratic convention in the same hall the week of July 11. In fact, even more may see the Democratic convention because there will be several thousand more sets in use by then.

The conventions are regarded by industry leaders as historic stepping stones for television. They expect the conventions and the Louis-Wolcott fight June 23 to give television a boost similar to the one received by radio from the broadcasts of the Harding-Cox presidential race and the Dempsey-Carpentier fight more than a quarter century ago.

Television broadcasters are putting aside past and future rivalries to pool their resources and $250,000, or more, in cash to cover the GOP convention. A pooled broadcast will be available throughout the convention to the 17 or 18 stations connected by them with the Bell System's East Coast television network hookup. A pooled film of convention highlights will be available to those stations and to others not connected with the network for showing a few hours later.

The four television networks now in operation—ABC, CBS, DuMont and NBC—as well as individual stations plan special coverage of their own. For stations outside Philadelphia, these programs will be carried on supplementary network facilities of the Bell System, the new Western Union relay between Philadelphia and New York, and the NBC-Philco Radio relay from New York to Washington.

Under the arrangement, a network may either pick up from the coaxial cable carrying the proceedings on the convention floor, or switch to its own program featuring convention sidelights.

It's expected that all but the very top regular television programs will be canceled in favor of the convention broadcast.

The past week brought new developments in the trend toward still lower priced radio sets.

Farnsworth of Fort Wayne, Ind., brought out a line of Capehart radio-phonographs ranging down to $295 and a new Farnsworth line starting at $99.50 for combinations and $24.95 for one table model radio. Five new television models included one for $395, which covers installation and a year's service for which most firms make an additional charge.

The Admiral Corp. of Chicago introduced a new lower-priced line of radios ranging down to $14.95 for a table model, replacing one that sold for $17.95 last year. Two bigger models were priced $70 and $130 lower than similar models of last year's line.

Garold Electronics of Brooklyn announced a new 4-pound battery portable for $19.95.

Westinghouse introduced a new material micarta which it said would bring a 10 per cent price saving. The company is using the material first in a table radio-phonograph selling for $89.95—$10 less than similar models with cabinets of wood. The new material is said to be extremely durable, and has the appearance of highly polished mahogany.

Companies that are members of the Radio Manufacturers Association turned out more than 52,000 television sets in March for a total of 118,000 during the first quarter. Last month's total isn't in yet, but it's expected to be well above the March figure . . . The trade magazine Canadian Broadcaster has proposed that the Canadian Broadcasting Corp. lift its ban on the mention of prices of goods advertised over the radio. The CBC board meets in Montreal May 17 . . . Paul W. Calvin of Chicago, president of Motorola, says the days of shirt-sleeve selling in the radio industry now have returned. Sets no longer sell themselves.

Air Mail Soon to Mark Its 30th Anniversary

By William M. Stuart

THE thirtieth anniversary of the establishment of air mail service in the United States will be observed throughout the country from May 15 to May 21, 1948. Postmaster General Jesse M. Donaldson has authorized the use of a special cachet on philatelic covers May 15 only, mailed from the air fields in New York City, Philadelphia and the Washington National Airport, which three offices were served on the first air mail route beginning operations May 15, 1918. The first mail consisted of only a few hundred letters, while now daily millions of pieces are forwarded by air.

Air mail plays a most important part in the postal service and the public is recognizing more and more its growing value in business and social activities, as well as in philately. Collectors are interested, not only in air mail stamps, but in every variety of cover.

The air mail service covers the globe, the field being large enough for the collector to specialize in many rare and unusual items. The original rate for air mail was 24 cents an ounce and the first route was 218 miles long. At present a nickel air mail stamp carries a letter to all parts of the country. The air mail service is still in its infancy and the future no doubt holds many surprises—and problems.

Postmaster General Donaldson has announced five additional stamps to be issued this year as follows: Clara Barton, founder of the Red Cross; 100th anniversary of settlement of Swedish pioneers; an Oregon centennial; observing the 100 years of peace between Canada and the United States, and the 100th anniversary of the arrival of the Five Civilized Tribes of Indians in what is now Oklahoma. Details will be released later.

THE Four Chaplains stamp will be issued first day in Washington on May 28. This stamp honors the heroic chaplains who sacrificed their lives in the sinking of the Dorchester in the North Atlantic in February, 1943.

THE CAPITAL PRECANCEL CLUB will meet Monday at 8 p. m. at the residence of Dr. C. R. Uhler, the LaSalle Apartments, 1028 Connecticut ave. nw.

At the meeting of the Washington Numismatic Society on Monday evening at the United States National Museum Dr. David A. Robinson of Johns Hopkins University spoke on "Ancient Greek Coins."

The Fidelity Stamp Co., 805 G st. nw., has appointed as general manager Joseph H. Spiegelberg. He replaces the late Rev. Howard S. Wheeler. Mrs. Anne Wheeler will remain as assistant. Spiegelberg comes to the company after years of Federal service in the Department of Commerce as an international trade expert. He will continue to operate the Aero Philatelic Exchange in connection with the Fidelity concern.

THE COLLECTORS' CLUB, Branch 5, S. P. A., met in Pythian Temple on Tuesday evening. The auction of 75 lots constituted the program, Secretary John C. Garver officiating as auctioneer in the absence of Ellery Denison, president. Manager Galloway of the circuit was well supplied with new books of excellent material. At the meeting on Tuesday evening, in Pythian Temple, 1012 9th st. nw., there will be a guest speaker and all collectors are invited to attend.

Video Having Its Troubles With Films

others are just a little old for the crowd. Also, for his own good, Godfrey ought to edit his activities down by about half, though heaven knows CBS would plug the holes.

Movies and Television

There is quite a furor over the relationship between the motion picture industry and television. Recently Alexander Korda sold the television rights to 24 of his old films, including such excellent pictures as "The Ghost Goes West" with Robert Donat, "The Scarlet Pimpernel" with Leslie Howard and "The Private Life of Henry VIII" with Charles Laughton, to WPIX, the Daily News station in New York.

There are rumors that NBC is after a similar deal with J. Arthus Rank, which would put Rank's films on the NBC network after their box office value had diminished. Meanwhile, the big film companies, notably Paramount and Warner Bros., are getting into television with no very clear idea where they are going but determined not to be left behind.

There is nothing particularly new about feature films on television but this is as good a time as any to consider them.

Techniques Differ

THE differences in technique are immense. Long shots which are beautiful on a large screen film are reduced on a television screen to pure eyestrain. I'm not talking about extremely long shots of 100 yards or more, but of almost any shot much longer than 20 yards.

Lighting is entirely different. Hollywood's lighting technicians are superb—on a picture screen. On a television screen, any subtlety of light or shade comes out all white or all black. On a feature film the other night, I saw a murder committed in semidarkness, a bit of action that must have been mighty effective on a film screen. On a television screen, it was invisible.

Also, screen fare is too long for home consumption. A film takes longer to pass a given point than the home audience is accustomed to. An hour-long film contains about as much story as we are used to hearing in half an hour. As for the longer films, the home audience gets figety after the first hour, no matter how good they are. At least, this part of the audience does.

WQQW Listeners Sponsor Good Music

By Anthony Catella

A RADIO AUDIENCE is sponsoring a two-hour Sunday program just to hear music it likes.

M. Robert Rogers, general manager of WQQW here, says he believes the noon to 2 p. m. program, known as the "Listeners Symphony," is the first American radio program to be sponsored by its audience. There are no commercial announcements during the two hours.

ROGERS

WQQW, which advertises itself as the "good music station," began operating in January, 1947.

At that time the station announced it would operate under a "listeners' bill of rights," which promised no more than four commercial announcements an hour, no two in succession and no commercial more than a minute long.

The idea was good from the listeners' viewpoint, but it didn't work.

"The policy had to be altered," says Roberts, "since sponsors are needed to keep a station going."

An Experiment First

"PURELY as an experiment," Rogers explains, "we played popular tunes during the early morning hours (6 to 9 a. m.) instead of our regular program devoted to classical music.

"The boogie music, when they expected Bach, caused a lot of listeners to write in to the station complaining about the change.

"They also sent cash contributions to the station in the hope they could continue to hear the kind of music they wanted."

"We offered to return the money," Roberts says. "But 95 per cent of the contributors asked that the money be kept and used by the station for listener-sponsored programs on weekends."

The first such program went on the air January 11 of this year. On that program the station announced that subscriptions to keep the program going would be set at a dollar a year.

"Last month we had to close the books on the listeners symphony until further notice," Roberts says. "Enough money had been sent in to pay for six months of the program."

The average subscription was a little more than $3. The largest single amount was $26.

Letters Encouraging

THE program comes on with an announcer saying "the audience of WQQW presents the listeners symphony." It features four major works with a 15-minute intermission, when a well known musical figure is interviewed by the director of the program.

Programming is done by compiling the requests sent in by the sponsoring audience.

Rogers would not disclose the names of the sponsors, but letters sent to the station show that the program will be supported for a long time. The note that reflects the attitude of all the sponsors said: "Whenever you need help let your listeners know!"

Sponsors of the "listeners' symphony" not only contribute cash. They lend their albums of classics to the station.

"One Sunday afternoon," Rogers recalls, "our announcer was interviewing one of the sponsors during the intermission of the program. The sponsor asked why the station did not play a certain record.

"Well, the announcer replied that the station didn't have the record, and a listener soon supplied it."

Whistle Stopping

Cruises Beginning On Potomac Line

THOSE moonlight cruises are in again. The Wilson Line announces that the good ship Mount Vernon, in a new coat of paint which is reported to invest her with the New Look, lies at the 7th st. docks nervously shuffling her paddlewheels and bracing herself for a flood of customers . . . The Ober Steamship and Tourist Agency, the Atlantic Coast Line Railroad and the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad have leased offices in the new Maiatico Building, Connecticut ave. and H sts. nw. Says here there is "beauty, comfort and convenience" involved . . . Bedford Springs Hotel, Bedford, Pa., opened Friday for the season. G. Bland Hoke, formerly at Williamsburg Inn and the Tides Inn, is the new head man . . . The Marine Terrace Hotel at Miami Beach is open from now until November at summer rates, and John B. Reid, managing director, is up with a rather uninspired prediction based on a "lack of heat waves."

AAA DEPT. They lead a tough life over at the American Automobile Association. R. J. Schmunk of Cleveland, president, and Russell E. Singer of Washington, executive vice president, sailed for Europe yesterday on the Queen Mary. They will attend the general assembly of the International Touring Alliance in Stockholm. The AAA, incidentally, has a new booklet out called "Motoring Abroad." All about what to do, where, how and even why, if you take your car to Europe with you. Some good tips, too: You can take a half pint of liquor into Ireland with you duty free. The booklet also has a blank which you can fill with squawks and send to the AAA.

A BLOND LASS from the University of Utah has been selected to attend the Atlantic City beauty pageant, but Lou Cunningham, AC man in charge of winding the siren, doesn't say who it is. You don't suppose it's—ah, couldn't be . . . It's Virginia's week: Thursday is the 341st anniversary of the landing at Jamestown; Saturday's the Loudoun Hunt Club Horse Show at Leesburg; next Monday's opening day for Virginia State Parks. The State Conservation Commission says resort prices are "about the same as they were last year," which is more than you can say about some prices I could mention . . . Peruvian International Airways has opened new offices in the Investment Building, 1509 K st. nw. . . . O Happy Roundup Ranch of Downsville, N. Y., just elected to membership in the Eastern Dude Ranches Association . . . SS President Wilson, American President Line's newest, has been warranted as a naval reserve ship . . . Canadian Pacific's SS Beaverbrae has arrived in Quebec with 770 immigrants, mostly displaced persons, who will build new homes in Canada. Pardon my great welling tears, but this seems to me a really remarkable undertaking. I guess it can't happen here, though.

HERE'S A NOTE from Ocean City, Md., which comes as close to saying nothing as anything that's reached this desk. And that's cutting it pretty thin . . . Wayne Buxton writes in with an encomium about the wonders of Maine. Wayne is a very cautious party about slang, carefully surrounding with quotation marks such phrases as "keep moving," "on the go," and "wrapped up" . . . Northwest Airlines is installing slick new seats in its DC-4's . . . A folder listing 125 young people's camps in New Hampshire has been issued by the State Planning and Development Commission at Concord . . . Cunard's Britannic, a veteran of the prewar, as well as the war service, sails from Liverpool for New York on her first postwar voyage May 22 . . . You hear mild rumblings (in 84-point type) about a "celebrities golf tournament," and now here's an outfit which is holding a "celebrities auction" up in Newport on May 17. I thought at first they were going to auction off the celebrities and was fixing to dig up a couple of bob for a round, dark one, not too small. That ain't it at all, though. What they're auctioning off is gifts from celebrities all around the country. The proceeds go to the Newport Music Club, which provides therewith scholarships for deserving music students.

London to Los Angeles on 45 Cents

Los Angeles (U.P.).—Mrs. Ralph Slusser had only 45 cents and an airline ticket in London, England, but she got back to her home in Los Angeles with 25 cents in her pocket.

Mrs. Slusser was perturbed to discover her financial plight at the end of a vacation in England. She still had her airline ticket, however, and got her friends to drive her down to the London airport.

After a flight across the Atlantic with meals free, she made a telephone call in New York which cost 20 cents.

Mrs. Slusser arrived in Los Angeles that night, still solvent to the extent of 25 cents.

Buyers' Market Back in Hotels

Atlantic City, N. J. (U.P.).—The week-end business of hotels has declined 30 per cent during the last year, according to John F. Kinerk, promotion director of the American Hotel Association. Kinerk told the New Jersey State Hotel Association that the buyers' market has returned to the hotel industry after seven years of the sellers' market.

If you'd like to get more detailed information about the places mentioned on The Washington Post's travel pages, send for the booklets offered in the ads. A penny postcard will do. Or phone The Post—NAtional 4200, extension 271—and ask Mary Smith to have travel folders sent you from the various resorts which you are thinking about visiting on your vacation. No charge for this service.

Berlin Looks Back On 1000 Songs

the composer said. "Every night I thank heaven nobody remembers that verse."

"White Christmas" has become a phenomenon in Tin Pan Alley. The most successful of all the 800-odd Berlin tunes published since 1907, it has sold 3,500,000 sheet music copies, untold millions of records. Every Christmas it sells 350,000 copies.

Berlin doesn't have one favorite among his songs. If pressed, he'll name a few which he likes for different reasons. Here are the top six, not in the order of preference:

"Alexander's Ragtime Band;" "God Bless America" (written and shelved by the composer during the first World War because it was "too sticky for the times," and then revived in 1940); "White Christmas;" "Always" (Berlin's wedding present to his wife, the daughter of the late Clarence Mackay, president of the Postal Telegraph Company); "A Pretty Girl is Like a Melody," and "Oh, How I Hate to Get Up in the Morning."

"Rex Morgan, M. D." starts Monday in The Post's comic section.

Florida
THIS SUMMER WE ARE GOING TO FLORIDA!
"Just as soon as school is out, we're off to Florida. The whole family! The Martins next door changed to Florida last summer and are still talking about the beaches, the fishing, and the variety of fun Florida has for every member of the family. As Bill Martin puts it...'We got more for our money than on any previous vacation. It's Florida for us again this summer!'"
It's true! Every year more families are discovering the multiple advantages of a summer vacation in Florida.
Florida's clear, summertime skies assure more days for healthful, outdoor play. Constant Atlantic and Gulf breezes air-cool Florida from coast to coast. Vacation dollars stretch further, because of special rates in many areas.
Best of all, Florida offers you more in the way of family fun – more things to do, more things to see – that both youngsters and grownups will enjoy.
For a complete vacation that's economical, too, come to Florida this year. See ALL of Florida. And, with a thought to the future, take time, to investigate the opportunities Florida has for business, industry, agriculture —and for happier living.

The Custom in Mehicko

Call Up Your Friends' Friends

By Bob Considine

MY WIFE and I are flying to Mexico City, and you never saw more confusion over what to take along, what and where to eat while there, how many injections to submit to, and whom to call, etc.

Consider the last item first.

"You really going to Mehicko?" a good friend asks, with an incredulous ring in his voice.

"Sure," you snap, wittily. "Is there a law versus it?"

"Not at all," your friend says, "but I was just thinking—if you're goin' to Mehicko you've got to look up my very good friend Ramon Dios Chapultepec y Don Juan. Salt of the earth."

"But I don't know her," you say.

"She's a man, you dope," the good friend says. "And, listen, if you want anything in Mehicko he's your man. He's like that with the Presidente."

The Presidente must be a very busy man. I never heard of a man who had more people just "like that" with him.

Friends of Friends

ONE OF OUR satchels will be filled with names and telephone numbers of friends of friends to call. I don't know Mexico or Mexicans at all, but I have an uneasy hunch that they are exactly like Americans when it comes to having an utter stranger call them up—out of the blue—to say hello in the name of a mutual friend.

I can just hear myself calling Ramon Dios Chapultepec y Don Juan, with the aid of four interpreters, at Teddy Hayes' place in Cuernavaca.

"Boo-ayness nautch house, Seen-your Ramon Dios Chapultepec y Don Juan," I will say. And then add, "Wee-Gates?"

Then with the aid of a Spanish-English dictionary I'll send him a little hands-across-the-border greeting, tell him I'm in Mexico for a week to write a couple of books on the Mexico nobody knows and give him some kind of cue to invite us to cocktails. And I'll keep repeating the name of our great mutual friend.

"Who'd you say sent regards to me?" the guy will ask.

"Our great good friend Adam Haddem," I'll say, with increasing frenzy, and finally the guy will say, dubiously, "Oh . . . sure, Adam Haddem. What ever became of that guy? How long you going to be in town?"

And finally Ramon Dios Chapultepec y Don Juan, if he's the gent I think he is, will say, "Well, let's get together for lunch, sometime." Without meaning to, expressly, he'll stress the "sometime."

So I'll never see him, and when I get back the first person I'll run into will be Adam—who really wanted to help—and Adam'll say, "What did you and Ramon Dios Chapultepec y Don Juan do while you were there?" And I'll be forced to say that we never got together, and may friend will be offended and say, "That's too bad."

"You really didn't see Mehicko, because he really could have shown you the ropes. Salt of the earth. He's like that with the Presidente." And he'll hold up his index and middle fingers, stuck together.

Bad Suggestion

WE'VE HAD a lot of advice about Mexico, including one simply terrible suggestion: "Don't eat a bite of food unless you're with A. C. Blumenthal," a man said.

Inasmuch as we don't know A. C. Blumenthal, this may result in the first case of American tourists starving to death in the old republic to the south.

There seems to be some doubt about injections also. "Get a smallpox vaccination," we've been sternly urged. "Do you want to come back all pock-marked?"

I keep explaining that hundreds of people I know have gone to Mexico, lived there, and come back unblemished—with nary a sign of a pock and no vaccination in advance. This means nothing to our vaccination-minded friends.

As for what to take along, the main advice is "money," which is a commodity we're fresh out of at the moment.

We are also urged to buy all the silver we can at Tasco, to be sure to fly down to Acapulco, stay in the Reforma Hotel, take along our own drinking water, refrain from plugging electric razors on Mexican electric outlets, and send 1894 postcards.

But the main thing we must do is look up several hundred people who happen to be like that with the Presidente.

North Carolina Opening Park at TVA Village

MURPHY, N. C., May 8.—A new State park on Hiwassee Lake in the western section of North Carolina will be open to recreation seekers this year, with moderate-priced furnished cottages available.

Hiwassee State Park, containing 800 acres and a number of buildings, has been created through lease of part of the old TVA village by the State Division of Forestry and Parks. Four cottages already have been made available for use, and it is expected that around 18 will be ready for occupancy by the middle of May. About 33 of the village's 63 cottages will be taken over. As soon as possible, the State Parks Administration plans picnic and other recreation areas, as well as a boat dock. At present no boats are available from the park administration, although some are for rent in the area from private concessionaires. Swimming is not feasible at the village site, but the fishing is considered excellent. Tennis courts are available, and there is an assembly room and recreation hall in the village.

There are at present no dining facilities at the village, but groceries are available near by, and all cottages are equipped with electric ranges, refrigerators, dishes and cooking utensils.

The village is built along winding streets which climb above the dam, and is located about 22 miles west of Murphy, near the Tennessee line.

Lake Hiwassee, a TVA power development, is created by a dam 1265 feet long and 300 feet high. Like most of North Carolina's mountain lakes, the water backs up into deep coves, which once were the primeval gorges of the Unicoi Mountains, a part of the Great Smokies system. The total area is 6300 acres, the shoreline is 150 miles, and at high water the lake backs up to the town of Murphy. Superintendent of Parks Tom Morse says the lake is now filling and should be at its best level in May and early June. Like most TVA lakes, it suffers esthetically from downdraw, which in the case of this lake takes place in winter.

Below Hiwassee lies a lake little known in North Carolina—Appalachia Reservoir. It is almost inaccessible due to lack of approach roads, but the water backs up to the base of Hiwassee Dam.

Trains Foil British Fog

London May 8 (AP)—New gadgets on 4,000 British trains may end delays due to fog and ease strain for engine crews at other times. The new devices make a loud noise when passing danger signals and apply the brakes at the same time. Crews continue to run the trains, but rail chiefs say the job will be easier and safer.

If after the large feathers have been picked from waterfowl or game birds, the bird is soaked in well salted water for a short time, the pin feathers will come out easily.

How to Buy a Moderate Priced N. C. Vacation

RALEIGH, N. C., May 8.—Your 1948 North Carolina vacation is going to cost you, on the whole, slightly more than the 1947 one did, but you still can buy a good vacation in this State for as little as $18 per week, provided you observe the "ifs" of the business.

The State Advertising Division, analyzing rate changes since 1947, says the higher priced places—$15 per day per person and up—have not increased rates. European plan places have not increased prices as much as have the American plan places.

"A room which went for $15 per day (for two persons) with meals last year, might cost $16 or $17 this summer," said the division. "Weekly rates of $40 per person last season usually will be found to be around $42.50 or $45. A few places will have rates running to $20 per day or more."

But a check of prices reveals scores of vacation places listing American plan vacations with rates below $30 per week per person, and quite a few below $20 per week, American plan. They are to be found in almost every community in the State, though they are much more numerous in the mountains than on the beaches. Since they do little advertising, they are more obscure than higher-rate places.

For the economically minded, the division offered the following tips to vacation seekers:

You can often get good rates at small inns, guest farms, tourist homes, usually those lying near but outside the conventional resort communities. American plan rates generally save money in the lower price brackets, generally raise the cost in the more exclusive places featuring fine foods.

Most moderately priced American plan places do not serve lunch, so your rate includes only two meals a day (this is true, however, of some of the higher priced places also).

Spend all your vacation at one place and get the weekly rate.

It costs more for one person than it does per person for two; and the larger your group, the less per person it will cost. Some places put three or four visitors in one large room. Ask about half-price rates for children.

Don't forget to ask for off-season rates. Go in May or June, or September or October. July and August are the months when resorts must make their season's profits, and if you go then you'll pay maximum rates. Some rates outside those months are 30 per cent less; some resorts will give you a dividend in extra days free.

White Bridges Found Safe

New York, May 8 (AP).—White bridges on highways might reduce auto accidents, according to the research laboratories of the New Jersey Zinc Co. Studies showed that white paint made bridges most easily visible at night. Engineers used a small model of a typical steel bridge and two small beams of light to simulate automobile headlights approaching from different angles.

The traditional Dutch windmill no longer labors to keep the sea out of Holland. Electric pumps now do the greater part of the job. But the old windmills remain an integral part of the Dutch landscape and are carefully protected from harm

Tulips Rivaled Diamonds In 17th Century Holland

WHEN is a turkey feast a Dutch treat?

In tulip time, says the National Geographic Society. The happy combination is explained by Turkish origin of the brilliant garden flower and the postwar Dutch gift of a million tulip bulbs to public gardens of America in gratitude for help in the Netherlands liberation.

And tulip time is here. April began it, although the main feast of tulip color in most outdoor gardens is reserved for May. The gift of the Dutch people, although only a tiny part of the Nation-wide tulip show, brightens parks in many cities, lines approaches to Arlington's Tomb of the Unknown Soldier, cheers thousands at Washington's Walter Reed Hospital and many other centers for veterans.

Close kin to the lily, the tulip grows wild along Mediterranean shores and eastward across Asia to Japan. Early Turkish gardeners assembled several wild species, hybridized and selected them, thus creating types now popular in Western World gardens. The word "tulip" is derived from a Turkish word meaning "turban."

Bulb Boom Beats Dutch

THE first tulip bulbs reached Holland by way of Vienna. An Austrian ambassador at the Court of the Sultan brought seed home to his country in 1554. Clusius, Dutch herbalist and court gardener to Austria's Maximilian II from 1573 to 1587, introduced a fine collection and popularized the tulip in Holland.

So fashionable did the exotic garden bloom become in the land of dikes and windmills that it caused an exciting financial boom, followed by near-panic. Bidding for bulbs of scarce new varieties mounted, turning into wild speculation.

Reaching its height from 1634 to 1637, the tulip mania found even the shrewder Dutchmen forgetting the perishable nature of the subject of their fascination. Rich and poor pooled cash in syndicates buying rare bulbs by pennyweight like diamonds, paying as much as $10,000 apiece. The Dutch government itself finally clamped on controls that stabilized the young industry.

At the Bridge Table

Champions for 1948 To Be Crowned Tonight

By Marian H. Barre

TONIGHT, at the conclusion of the tourney in Hotel Roosevelt, the city of Washington will have its bridge champions for the year 1948. Two women are defenders of the open title—Mrs. Amy Ashmead and Miss Kathleen McNutt.

Play starts at 1 p. m. with a qualifying session, and those who survive compete in the finals, beginning at 7 p. m. A special pair game will be run in the evening for eliminated partnerships and others not in the championship. Held under the auspices of the Washington Bridge League, the tourney is directed by P. E. Golden.

The league next turns its attention to business affairs, the annual meeting and election of officers being called for 7:30 p. m., May 12, also at the Roosevelt. Come early if you want to vote. Nominations will be made from the floor, there being no committee for this purpose, hence it is each member's duty to take a responsible part in the proceedings. The usual pair and team games will be played after the meeting, with a special match going on among three lineups involved in the season playoff. Boschan, Eberson, Poissant and Stone go into this final round with a 3½-board lead.

Bridge fan's own travel section: Those who pursue the master point abroad may go to Asbury Park on May 14 to 16 for the Jersey Shore annual; to Bethlehem, Pa., for the Lehigh Valley Tourney, May 21 to 23; also on these same dates to Niagara Falls for Canadian-American Championships; ending up at Virginia Beach on May 28 for a four-day session at the Mid-Atlantic Regionals.

Two nationally awarded matches will be held here on Saturday: Euclid Studio's monthly, starting at 1 p. m., while the Capital City Chess Club's postponed game will be played in the evening at Hotel Gordon.

A FIRST-TIME open-team championship at Arlington Farms Duplicate Club was won by Col. and Mrs. Henry Walker and Lieut. Col. and Mrs. Manfred Haas, with a 4½-board lead over Mrs. Ann Scruggs, David Kandel, Charles Geier and John Griffith. The winners topped both sessions, first round having been played on April 30, finals on May 2.

Mrs. D. E. Stephan extends an invitation to the feminine clientele at Euclid Studios to participate in a women's pair championship on May 29 at 12:30 p. m. Owing to limited space, reservations should be made well in advance.

At the Agriculture Bridge Club's monthly matinee event on May Day, Mrs. Edward St. John and Mrs. Alma Byrne led the north-south pairs, with Mrs. T. E. Turner and Mrs. Eula Camp top east-west. Male partnerships struggling in as runner-up were William Million-C. C. Johnson and John Luttrell-H. Shinnick.

The Walsh Club's master-point quota for May went to Mrs. Scruggs and Colonel Walker, Mrs. Elizabeth Count and Mrs. Florence Millspaugh.

THE Federal Bridge League finished its section playoffs on May 4, the Blooper line-up winning the second half of the season. Cascades, winners of the first half, and the Empire foursome, now go into the championship round, starting next Tuesday. An open section that same evening starts off the summer season, which is open to friends of members.

Teams sharing section awards are the Bloopers, Mixed Party and Off-Chance, leaders in A, B and C divisions, respectively. Second prizes go to Victory, Wild Deuces and the P. B. foursome.

The May master point team game at Hotel Roosevelt last Wednesday was captured by H. Steinbach, R. Ashton, E. G. Harris, jr., and R. McGhee, with a half-board lead over the tied foursomes. Thirty-three matches were played, the winners taking 20, while the runners-up each had 19½. These second-ranking teams were formed by Dr. and Mrs. Steinberg, Mr. and Mrs. Bernard Rosson and by Mrs. Kay Moorman, Miller Roberts, James Lazard and William Million.

At the North Carolina State Tourney in Raleigh last weekend, the District line-up of J. J. Parish, J. G. Stone, J. White and D. Murray, won the championship for teams in a tied-finish with Dr. Charles Duffy's team. (Dr. and Mrs. Duffy of New Bern, N. C., are the current D. C. open champions).

CANADA Steamship Lines will offer a series of St. Lawrence River and Great Lakes trips, lasting from three to eight days, this summer. Highlights include such places as Lake Ontario, Thousand Islands, Quebec, Murray Bay, Tadoussac, the Saguenay, Detroit, Duluth and the locks at Sault Ste. Marie. One of the most popular cruises is the six-day trip from Montreal featuring famous historic sites, shrines and eastern Canadian cities and resorts.

Kenneth Roberts author of "RABBLE IN ARMS" writes about MAINE

"There is a peculiar sweetness to this section of the world—some singular quality to the atmosphere, like that which gives the leaves their added brilliance in the autumn. The very grass has a perfume of its own, and the land is redolent of sea and pines; of strength and freshness...

"It seemed to me the most beautiful country under the sun—more beautiful than the mountains of Spain or the parks of England, than the broad rivers and the towering cliffs of the west. There was something about it that caught at my throat, that filled me with a sense of exultation—of freedom."

The Veterinary Is a Lady

She's Dr. Helen Doremus, who with her husband runs an animal hospital

HUSBAND-AND-WIFE TEAMS in the theater, radio and other fields are not uncommon, but in the practice of veterinary medicine such combinations are unique.

As a girl, Helen Borchmann of Great Neck, L. I., had two intense interests: animals, especially dogs, and scientific subjects. The merger of these interests had an unusual but wholly natural result. Helen decided to study veterinary medicine at Cornell University.

There she met Henry M. Doremus, a zoology instructor who was studying for a D.V.M. degree too. They were married shortly after Helen graduated in 1940.

Today, Dr. Helen Doremus, one of the country's 100 women vets, and Dr. Henry M. Doremus, together operate the Doremus Animal Hospital in Cedar Grove, N. J.

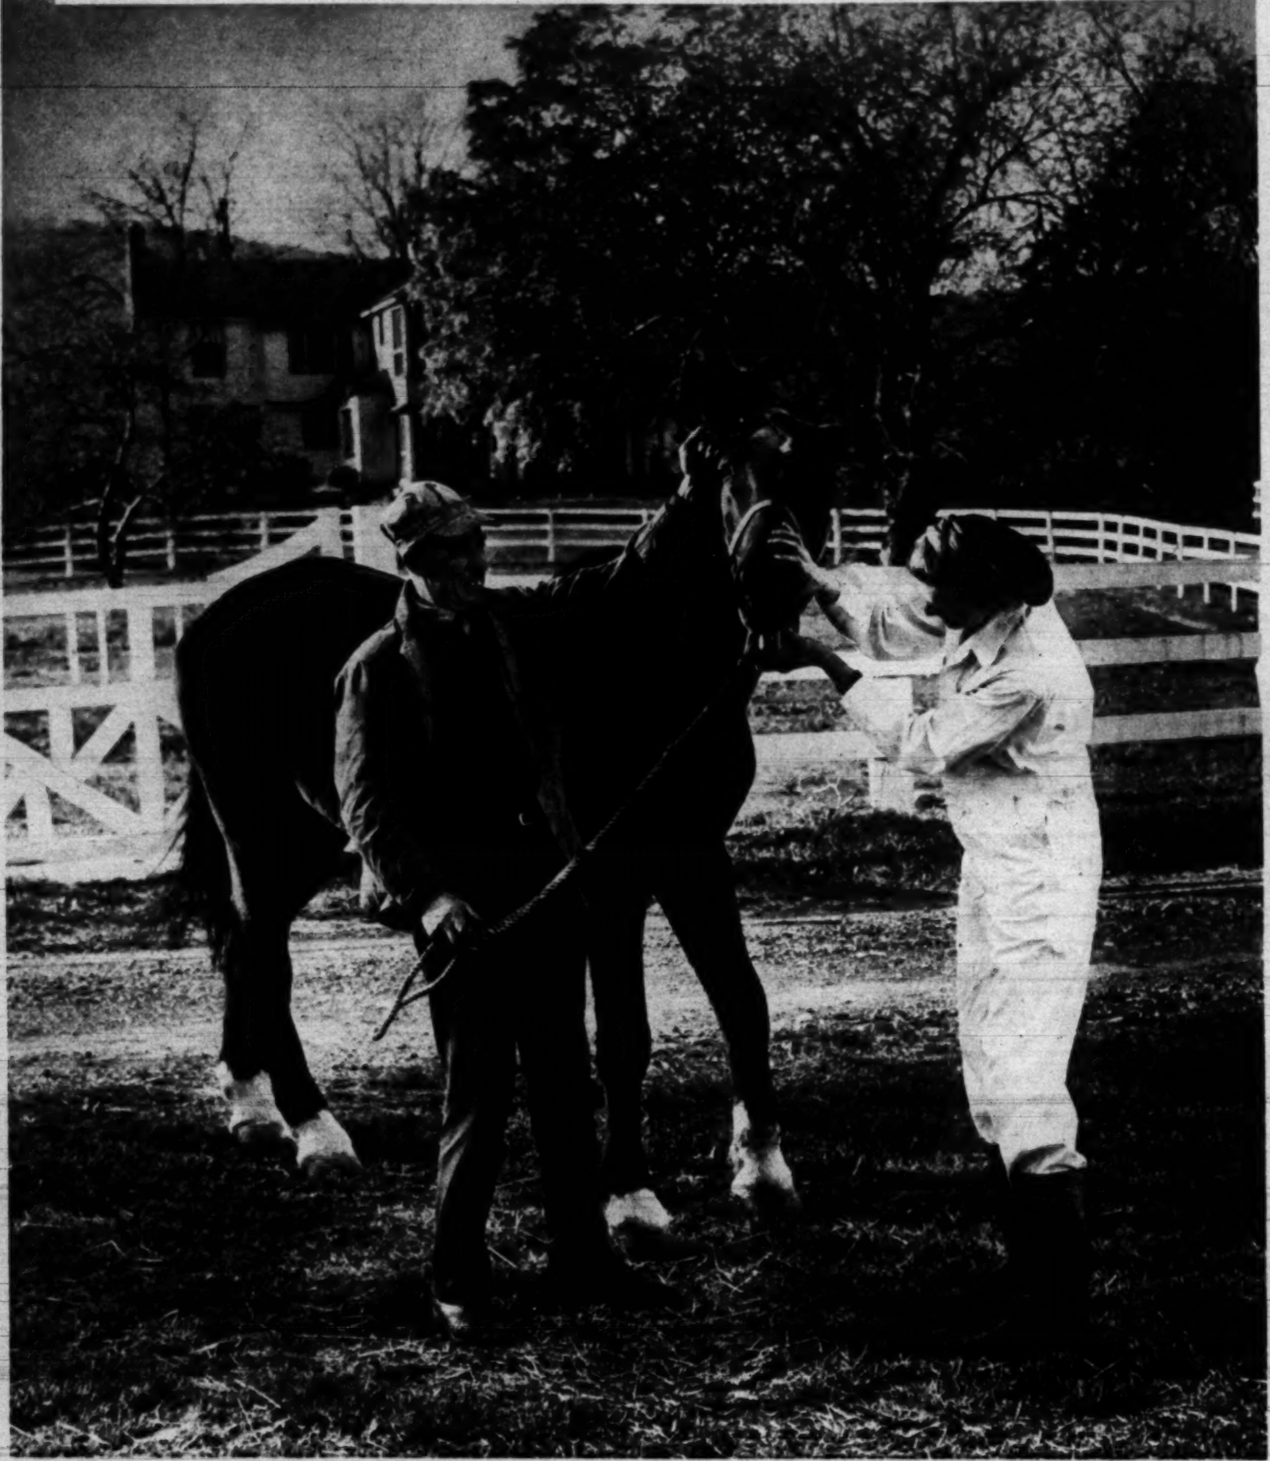
Their hospital is as well organized as one for human beings. The Doremuses in animal therapy use the latest drugs, such as penicillin and the sulfonamides, and the latest surgical techniques.

Like all doctors they have regular office hours, but are subject to emergency calls day and night. Recently, indeed, Dr. Helen was summoned to perform a caesarian section on a fox terrier at 3 a.m. Mother and pups did very nicely.

This valuable chinchilla suffered a skull fracture. Surgery restored animal's health.

A sick puppy gets a fluoroscopic examination from Dr. Henry while Dr. Helen assists.

Dr. Helen makes many farm calls. Here she gives a glucose infusion to an ailing cow.



Dr. Helen Doremus' practice of veterinary medicine ranges from determining the age of a horse, as she's doing here, to treating sick chinchilla. She and her husband, Dr. Henry M. Doremus, together operate the Doremus Animal Hospital in rural Cedar Grove, N. J.

Medicine isn't everything: Dr. Helen makes new trousers for her son Peter. THE END.

CHESTER I. BARNARD

"Whatever a man wants to do, he should do as well as possible"

Chester Barnard

WHEN HE ASSUMES THE presidency of the world-famous Rockefeller Foundation next July 1, 61-year-old Chester I. Barnard of South Orange, New Jersey, will begin a significant new chapter in a long association with public and civic affairs.

As head of the foundation, which was created 35 years ago "to promote the well-being of mankind throughout the world," Barnard will direct an institution spending more than $6 million a year in philanthropic pursuit of its basic objective—the advancement of knowledge.

Seldom in the headlines, the former president of the New Jersey Bell Telephone Company nevertheless has long been regarded as one of the nation's top authorities on the science of executive management. That he has at the same time been an energetic and tireless worker in "extra-curricular" fields, is a clue to Barnard's capacity for industry.

Perfection His Ideal

"Whatever a man wants to do, he should do as well as possible," Chester Barnard once told an interviewer. And his own career bears out an unyielding adherance to this belief.

A consultant to the American representative on the United Nations Atomic Energy Commission, the newly designated Rockefeller Foundation head was co-author of the State Department report on International Control of Atomic Energy which formed the basis for subsequent American atomic policy.

As wartime president of the U.S.O., Barnard also found time to serve as a member of the Third Naval District's Navy Manpower Survey Committee.

The story of Barnard's life is the story of hard work and success. Born in Malden, Mass., on November 7, 1886, he attended Harvard University prior to taking his first job as a clerk with the American Telephone and Telegraph Company in 1909. In 1922, he became assistant vice president of the Bell Telephone Company of Pennsylvania and Associated Companies, rising to general manager in 1923, and vice president in charge of operations in 1926. When New Jersey Bell began state-wide operation in 1927, Barnard was chosen its president.

Author of "The Functions of the Executive," Barnard in 1931 organized and directed the New Jersey Emergency Relief Administration.

Promoted to the chairmanship of the board of New Jersey Bell so that he can devote his full energies to his new office, Barnard comes to the helm of the Rockefeller Foundation at a time of world crisis. He will need all of his business acumen, and a great measure of devotion to the public good, to uphold the Foundation's record.

ON PARADE . . .

It was only natural that reports of a gold rush in the historic mining town of Goldfield, Nev., should bring photographer William Belknap, Jr., to the scene, because he has managed to be where things are happening since he began taking pictures at the age of ten. Belknap, who took the pictures for Donald Wayne's story of Goldfield on pages 19-21, was born and raised in a suburb of New York City. He first became interested in photography when his family took him on a trip to the Mayan ruins of Mexico.

As a Navy chief photographer's mate, stationed in Washington as White House photographer during the war, Belknap had a variety of exciting experiences. He accompanied the late President Roosevelt on his secret tour of the country in 1942, took the first pictures of the meeting of Allied and American chiefs of staff in 1943, and was the only photographer to cover President Truman's entire Potsdam Conference trip in 1945.

Belknap, who owns a ranch in Arizona, lives with his wife and two children in Boulder City, Nev., where he has his own photographic service.

NEXT WEEK . . .

PARADE calls upon one of America's most gifted and unconventional men, motion picture writer, producer and director Preston Sturges. As close to an all-around genius as Hollywood has yet produced, his movie methods and ideas are deeply influencing today's motion pictures . . . In the same issue will be a preview of the sweaters of 1948, and a picture story on polo, a sport with a larger popular following than most people think.

THE COVER . . .

The left-handed pitcher on PARADE's cover this week is the Detroit Tigers' Hal Newhouser who uses his right arm for everything but throwing baseballs. His left, however, is the arm which earns him an estimated $60,000 each season from Detroit owner Walter ("Spike") Briggs, who pays Hurricane Hal a salary exceeded only by Cleveland's Bob Feller and Boston's Ted Williams. For more about Newhouser, whose fast ball and curve have won 97 games in the past four seasons and who twice won his league's most valuable player award, see page 14. They Study How to Live

Toms River youngsters face the problems of living in a special—and significant—high school course

Toms River School Administration Building.

By KARL KOHRS

"WHY DOESN'T SOMEBODY tell me these things?" Teen-agers confronted by adult problems who ask that question deserve an answer, asserts Dr. Edgar M. Finck, supervising director of Toms River, N.J., schools. To that end, he has created a unique project in American education—high school courses in social behavior and family relationships. They deal with the fundamental problems of living—social adjustment, family life, marriage, parenthood, even courtesy.

The courses, significant to all U.S. parents and educators, last a regulation half-term, carry full college credit and are offered as electives to juniors and seniors. Classes, comprising some 90 students, meet five times a week for 50-minute periods. There is no special emphasis on grades, although these are given to conform to routine academic requirements. Teachers are primarily interested in behavior changes, attitudes and personal relationships. Said one teacher: "A student would fail only if he showed no improvement in behavior, attitudes or relationships with his companions."

Students meet in a large, pine-paneled living room—a place where they can relax and discuss the problems informally. Discussions are spontaneous, with the teacher acting as a moderator. A loose-leaf notebook containing outlines of the courses serves as a textbook. In it students paste newspaper and magazine clippings relating to family problems, social issues, examples of good and bad behavior—anything, in fact, that has to do with living. The book is the student's personal property and he takes it with him when he leaves the course.

Sex education as such is not part of the program. In the opinion of instructors, problems of sex hygiene and adjustment need not be emphasized at the expense of other factors. Students are, however, given every opportunity to talk these matters over in personal conferences with the teacher. An extensive reference library on sex and marriage problems is available, but students use these books only on written permission from their parents.

Divorce Record Shows Course Need

Dr. Finck and the two teachers who have charge of the classes are confident that they are helping to bridge one of the gaps in present-day U.S. education—the lack of preparation for marriage, parenthood and family living. That some sort of instruction is desperately needed is evidenced by the nation's divorce rate—upwards of 600,000 decrees in 1947, almost one for every three marriages.

Within the scope of their own experience, Dr. Finck and his staff have found an answer to the divorce problem. Questionnaires were sent to 166 graduates in an effort to determine the marital status of those who had completed the course. Answers were received from 35 boys and 123 girls, and of these seven boys and 68 girls indicated that they had married. All the boys, or 100 percent, are still married; of the girls, 66, or 97 percent, are still wed. In short, out of 75 marriages about which there was information, 73, or 97 per cent, were successful.

The family relationships course, at the moment the only one of its kind in the country, has aroused intense interest in educational circles. Dr. Finck's files are bulging with letters from Australia, England, Canada and from every state asking for information about it. In reply, he emphasizes that the individual needs of the community must be studied to give the course its maximum effectiveness.

Toms River is proud of its progressive school. As Dr. Paul Goble, local dentist, told PARADE: "I wish all my six children could have taken that family relationships course. We're mighty proud that the idea originated right here in little old Toms River!"

As for Dr. Finck and his teachers, they are gratified by the progress that has been made and hope that the courses may be expanded to extend through the entire high school curriculum and that of the grades as well. Dr. Finck believes that the idea has proved itself and that it could not be uprooted without seriously impairing the education given the students. "A course in living," he observes, "leavens the loaf."

Students ponder problems they'll face as married adults

Manners are the topic at this class session, with students in husband-and-wife roles. "Hubby" demonstrates table behavior that creates marital friction. Elizabeth Force, teacher, stands at board.

Money, discipline, family authority are some of the topics they discuss

THE TOMS RIVER HIGH SCHOOL courses in social behavior and family relationships are conducted by two teachers—Mrs. Elizabeth Force and Mrs. John Ewart. Both are pleasant, matronly women who combine the wisdom and tolerance of maturity with a youthful enthusiasm that communicates itself to their students. That is one reason why the give and take of conversation is consistently lively and interesting.

Actually, there are two courses given. They are virtually one as far as class discussions are concerned, however, because both deal with the same basic teaching: consideration for others. Girls outnumber boys by about three to one, reflecting the fact that girls begin to think seriously of marriage and actually marry at an earlier age than boys.

Students of at least one of the classes each day take charge of putting the room in order, boys and girls sharing the job of cleaning the carpet, dusting the furniture, straightening out the bookshelves and so on. Discussion begins informally, usually centering around items in the daily papers.

One remarkable feature is the relaxed and unself-conscious response on the part of the students. Mrs. Force, for example, may ask, "What is a sex delinquent?" There is none of the nervous giggling that usually accompanies a reference to sex in a high school class. Boys and girls speak their minds with equal frankness. Each question that comes up is immediately applied to personal experience. "What would you do under the circumstances?" or, "How would that problem be solved in your home?" asks the teacher.

One recent class period, under the direction of Mrs. Force, was devoted to a discussion of "Who is boss at your house?" Out of this a homework assignment was developed. Students asked their parents a series of questions, such as who decided on the type of home they wanted? Who handled money matters when they were first married and who handles them now? Who takes care of business matters? Who has the say about the children? Who has the last word? Who seems to be boss?

The students came back the next day with interesting answers. That they had received the full cooperation of their parents was obvious in the way they discussed the questions.

Students Put Training to Test

Class sessions are supplemented by "field trips." Students once were taken to dinner at a fashionable hotel, where they conducted themselves according to rules of etiquette they had mastered and learned the procedure of ordering dinner, paying the check and figuring tips. Groups of students sometimes visit primary grades to observe child behavior and to study teaching methods. They often call at the county courthouse to obtain copies of legal papers for class study.

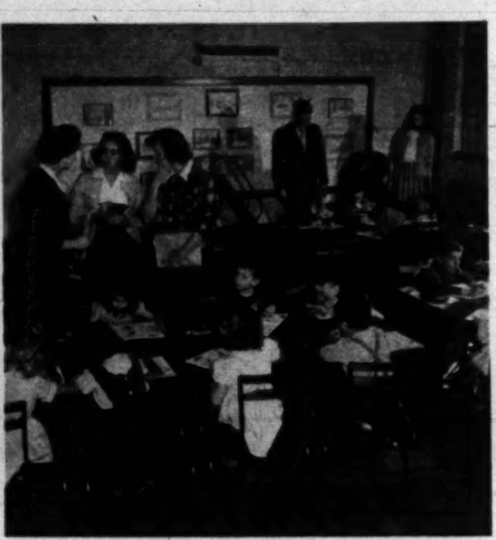
Religious questions, as they relate to family life, are kept on a strictly objective basis. Marriage ceremonies of all faiths come under discussion and copies of documents necessary to the legal routine are studied. Occasionally a procedure is dramatized, as, for example, when a clergyman is called in to explain the wedding ceremony to two students in the roles of bride and groom-to-be.

The family relationships course is kept in contact with daily living in a number of effective ways. Young married couples who have taken the course are invited to the class to discuss problems of home-making. Parents come to school to talk things over. A lawyer, doctor or merchant may meet with the class to discuss his work in relation to community life. Students are accustomed to visitors and are not shy about discussing things with them. In fact, a guest may be asked about anything from his opinions on twin beds for married people to his views on mid-week dating among students.

"You'd be surprised at the frank questions these kids will ask," commented an attorney. "You've got to give them the right answers, though, because they take things seriously."

What the students themselves have to say about the courses is eloquent recommendation. "They helped me make my family happier and to be happier myself". . . "They helped me to get along better with my family and I think everybody ought to take the course". . . "Sometimes you can talk about things in class that you can't talk over with your parents". . . Odds are that the youngsters of Toms River will have a better chance for happiness because their teachers had the foresight and courage to tackle a tough problem in high school education at its source.

Teen-age problems get priority. Here Mrs. Force and a student chat about questions raised in class.



Teaching methods and child behavior problems are observed first-hand on visits to primary grades.

At the home of Toms River couple, students on "field trip" get pointers on house planning, building.

Cleaning classroom is part of daily routine. Student Frank Brown uses vacuum cleaner on furniture.

Hat in hand, Dr. Finck chats with students during an informal visit to the class. He will retire this June after 29 years as supervising director of the Toms River public schools to take up collegiate teaching.

Here's what their elders think about course . . .

Police Chief Donald B.Grover: "I am fully convinced that the high school family relationships course has been instrumental in reducing materially juvenile delinquency here in Toms River."

Attorney Dorothy Reeve: "If the course can teach Toms River children that life is a matter of give and take, it will more than justify a place in the curriculum. It deserves full support."

Editor W. Byron Maynard: "When the course was first established there was some adverse criticism. But it has certainly proved its educational worth. Today it wins praise, not censure."

Dr. Paul Goble, dentist, and Mrs. Goble: "People realized that something had to be done to give our children an education that would prepare them for adult life. The family relationships course in the high school was the answer. It's the smoothest thing ever, The idea is so simple and workable that it is surprising nobody ever thought of it before."

The Rev. Ansley Gerard Van Dyke: "The spiritual values of the course are of the utmost importance. It speaks well for future understanding and tolerance when a group of young people from divergent religious backgrounds can sit down and talk about their ideals of home-making. Strengthened character and homes will result." THE END.

By BOB HOPE

THINKING ABOUT a holiday?

Then listen to me. As a former vaudevillian I have a Brobdingnagian (Webster's midget word for giant-sized) knowledge of America. In fact, my face has been referred to as the map of the United States and I have a scar for each major city. I even have a few footnotes on my chest where I got trampled. Of course, it's tough for me to give any details on many of the cities, since I didn't see much of them. (Usually I slipped out quietly under the first milk train just ahead of the tar-and-feather crowd.) Naturally I could write about some of the lesser known sections of the country, but why should I give away my hide-outs? Radio can't last forever.

Two cities I want to talk about are New York and Hollywood. Why shouldn't I? They talk about me.

New York is a fascinating place. It has subways and girls. I was more interested in girls, but more often I went home with the subways. A subway might be loosely termed "a nickel's worth of feudin' and fightin'." On second thought, nothing about the subway is loose. They really jam them in—so much so you can't tell the by-standers from the pickpockets. I saw one victim turn to the guy frisking him and say, "I don't mind your crowding me, but I wish you'd stop breathing down my wallet."

But I like the subway. Where else can you get your transportation, your morning paper and your pants pressed for a nickel. Now I wouldn't say they crowd you in very tightly, but the last time Sydney Greenstreet was in New York he got on a subway at Times Square and when he got off three stations later a crowd of bobby soxers chased after him yelling "Frankie!"

New York also has automats. An automat is a cafeteria with a Crosby complex . . . it grabs nickels. And they can be very confusing, too. There was one guy who got all perplexed about putting the nickels in the slots. He thought he was in Las Vegas and walked up to the window marked "Apple Pie" wearing a green eyeshade. After he put in three nickels and won a piece of apple pie, he dashed over to his bookie on 44th Street to get the odds on Cheesecake.

Hope Meets His Match

And New York has night clubs. I can't say they're expensive but the last time I was in one night club, it cost me $10 before I got the snap on my purse open.

There are other things to see, too. There's Macy's . . . that's a mixmaster with a basement. There's the Stork Club . . . that's where the celebrities go to get the dope on Winchell. And there's Times Square. At night it is a sight to behold. It has more bright lights per square foot than the father of a dozen Quiz Kids.

And they have such wonderful signs on Broadway. One blows smoke rings . . . another shows cartoons and then there's one that shoots big soap bubbles all over town. Next year they plan an even better one. When you walk by it, a 50-foot hand comes out, taps you on the shoulder and says, "You're not looking."

The city is a mecca for tourists. It's very easy to spot one of them. The tourist is one who apologizes after he steps on a lady in the subway.

The United Nations meets in New York , too. Delegates are there from everywhere. Last fall, I saw a guy wrapped in a sheet standing in the lobby of the Astor. I walked up to him and in a friendly fashion asked, "Arab?" He said, "No . . . room shortage."

Probably the most famous suburb of New York is Brooklyn, which is just over the bridge. You don't have to get a passport to get in. All you have to have is a sworn character reference from Cookie Lavagetto and a photograph of yourself standing over the limp body of an umpire.

Last year New York and Brooklyn got all tangled up in the World Series for the baseball championship. Everyone got all excited, even Vishinsky. He took one look at the headlines, "NEW YORK SLAUGHTERS BROOKLYN," and phoned Moscow and said, "Hey, Joe . . . roll out the vodka . . . It's the revolution!"

A natural-born comedian, Bob Hope surprises even himself with some of the hilarious gags he ad-libs on his Pepsodent broadcasts on Tuesdays at 10 p.m., E.D.S.T., over NBC.

The second city I'm an authority on is Hollywood, the screen capital. The reason Hollywood is the screen capital is that they have flies all year 'round.

A few streets in Hollywood have gained a reputation throughout America. The intersection of Hollywood and Vine is probably the best known. People who drive to Hollywood to crash the movies usually end up on Hollywood and Vine, crashing each other.

Wilshire Boulevard is another famous street out here. Wilshire is where you go when you want to get hit by a Cadillac instead of a Ford. I wouldn't say the prices on Wilshire Boulevard are high, but last week I saw a guy buy a fur coat for his wife and he left Fort Knox as a down payment.

Hollywood is famous for its movie stars, its night clubs and its "characters." A "character" in Hollywood is anybody who wears a coat and pants to match. They sell so many sports jackets, they're trying to make the tailors out there join the National League.

And the Hollywood premieres are really confusing. You can't tell whether those big searchlights are for a movie opening or just looking for a pedestrian who didn't come down.

Atwater Kent is a figure in Hollywood who is famous for throwing lavish entertainments. In fact, at his age he can still throw a ball faster than Bob Feller. And the studios have such wonderful parties, too. They gave me a big party just before I left for England for the Command Performance. All the big stars were there. Trigger was at the speaker's table. It was embarrassing. I mean, the way folks walked up, grabbed his hoof and said, "We expected a younger man, Mr. Hope."

Movie stars are the most famous people in Hollywood, next to Mike Romanoff. There's only one way to tell a movie star from an extra. Follow them both and the movie star will be the one that takes the direct route from the studio to the Bank of America.

But, truthfully, the most famous landmarks of Hollywood are the oldest. Those objects which will remain long after you and I are gone. They still are Graumann's Chinese Theatre, Griffith Park and Bing Crosby. Of course, the first two are still standing. THE END.

When guests linger until the dinner hour, whip up these delicious Fig Meringues Melba.

Fig Meringues Melba

By Betty Merriman

DURING THE WARMER MONTHS we can always expect the unexpected! Friends will arrive at awkward moments, when lunch or dinner is practically on the table. And a reserve supply of food is sure to come in handy.

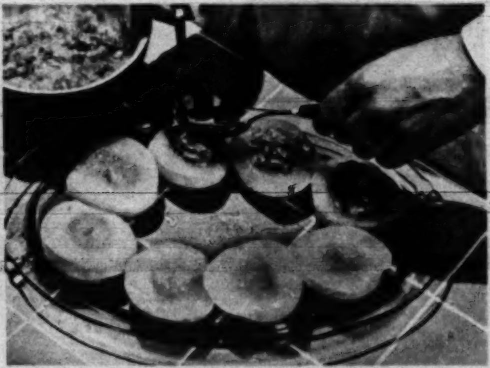
A simple "hospitality reserve" will avoid embarrassment and helps to glamorize plain fare. Thus (with supplies from your reserve italicized): Vegetable juice, wheat wafers with liver paté; hamburg patties with tomato sauce and sliced, stuffed olives combined, quick-frozen French-fried potatoes, green beans with canned broiled mushrooms; salad and, instead of plain canned peaches, tasty and easily prepared Fig Meringue Melba, fig bars, and coffee, hot or iced.

FIG MERINGUES MELBA

8 fig bars	1 egg white
Syrup drained from canned peaches	Few grains salt
8 canned peach halves	½ teaspoon almond flavoring
	3 tablespoons sugar

Crumble fig bars; add ⅓ cup peach syrup and let stand ten minutes. Fill peach halves with this mixture. Beat egg white with salt until stiff but not dry; gradually beat in the almond flavoring and sugar; swirl on peaches. Place peaches on heat-proof platter; pour remaining syrup around them. Bake in moderate oven, 350° F., 15-20 minutes, or until meringue is golden brown. 8 servings.

A package of fig bars and a can of peaches add up to a fine dessert. First step: crumble 8 fig bars.



Next, add ⅓ cup peach syrup; let stand 10 min. Fill 8 peach halves; top with meringue. THE END.

can steal a woman's beauty!

Thousands who are tired and pale can regain energy and healthy good looks with Ironized Yeast Tablets

BEAUTY fades when a woman's face grows pale – when her freshness and sparkle seem to be failing–when her energy runs low.

These signs often come from a blood condition. If you have them, you may have a Borderline Anemia, due to a ferro-nutritional blood deficiency.

The red cells in your blood may be below par in color and size – weakened to the point where they can't transmit full energy to your body. Results of medical surveys show that up to 68% of the women examined– many men and children – have this Borderline Anemia.

How Ironized Yeast Tablets build up your blood and vigor

So, if your color is vanishing – if your energy's running low and this common blood condition is to blame – take Ironized Yeast Tablets. They are formulated to help build up faded red blood cells to healthy color and size. Of course, continuing tiredness and pallor may be due to other conditions–so consult your doctor regularly. But in a Borderline Anemia, take Ironized Yeast Tablets to help build up your blood. Take them to start your energy shifting back into "high"–to help restore your natural color! Take them to enjoy life again! Ask your druggist for the big, new economy size.

Better than Feller?

Many experts say Newhouser is baseball's first pitcher

ALTHOUGH MOST AMERICAN League batters would rather wrestle with a walrus than face the sudden-death fast ball of Cleveland's great Bob Feller, there has been a growing feeling in the league during the past few seasons that the pitching wizardry of Hal Newhouser, the Detroit Tigers' stringy left-hander, is even more fearful than Feller's speed.

Birdie Tebbetts, who used to catch Newhouser's slants and now has to bat against them, is one of an increasing number of qualified observers who believe that Newhouser not only is better than Feller but that he is also the best pitcher in baseball and possibly the best left-hander in history. This appraisal, if confirmed by posterity, would place Newhouser ahead of such immortals as Ed Plank, Lefty Grove, Carl Hubbell and Rube Waddell.

"Maybe," Tebbetts admits, "Feller can throw harder, but Newhouser has more stuff and better control." Newhouser's "stuff," with which he has won 97 games during the past four seasons, includes a fast ball second only to Feller's, a three-speed curve, a slider and a change-of-pace throw that dances up to the plate like an inebriated butterfly. When all his pitches are under control, Newhouser is unbeatable, and even when his hook isn't breaking just right he's still pretty hard to beat.

There was a time, however, when Newhouser was not only beatable, but actually was beaten more often than not. During his first four years with Detroit, he had little control of his pitches and less control of himself. In that period, although he showed flashes of brilliance, he lost 51 games, won only 34, and became easily the team's most unpopular player.

"I will not say that Newhouser was actually disliked," a team-mate once cautiously remarked, "but it was probably just chance that nobody ever caressed that lovable kid with the bat-rack."

Early Promise Wanes Rapidly

When Newhouser joined the Tigers in 1939, he was regarded as one of the best prospects to come up in years. But four losing seasons, plus his inability to win friends among his team-mates or influence batters in the American League, had reduced him — by 1943 — to a position where he had almost decided to junk his baseball career and take up palmistry, philately or Persian poetry. Early in 1944 he asked the Detroit club to trade him, but the Tigers' manager, fatherly Steve O'Neill, decided to re-make him instead. He taught Newhouser self-control and Hurricane Hal began to win more games than he lost. That year he won 29, pitched his team to within a single game of the pennant, and was named his league's most valuable player. The following season he won 25 games, led the league in strikeouts, pitched two World Series victories and again was regarded as the league's best performer. In 1946 Newhouser won 25 games and last year 17.

The change in Newhouser's temperament didn't come all at once, of course, and even today he has retained a pronounced hatred of losing which has succeeded in keeping him one of the least-loved participants of the national pastime. Kyle Crichton recalls that one night while he was being beaten at hearts, Newhouser grabbed the cards, tore them up in a rage and heaved them through the window. "That's why I'm a great pitcher," he cried. "I hate to lose."

Which is really Betty Hutton?

Spark plugs also look alike, but

AUTO-LITE SPARK PLUGS

are "Ignition Engineered"

SINCE most spark plugs look alike, it's hard to tell which is best from outside appearance—just as it's difficult to tell which of the pictures above is really Betty Hutton. To make sure you get the best spark plug for your car, ask for Auto-Lite Spark Plugs—they're ignition engineered. This means they're designed by the same engineers who design the entire electrical life-line for many of America's finest cars—from battery to coil to distributor to spark plug.

Score yourself 100% if you picked the girl at the left as the real Betty Hutton, beautiful and talented actress soon to be seen in Paramount's thrilling new hit "Dream Girl." At right is Miss Chris Holly of East 65th St., New York City, who looks so much like Miss Hutton that crowds often gather when she goes out shopping.

You'll be 100% right, too, if you switch to Auto-Lite Spark Plugs, equipment on many leading makes of cars.

Children learn of Akron's continuous traffic safety campaign from Patrolman O. P. Smith.

AKRON ATTACKS TRAFFIC PROBLEMS

A committee of public-spirited citizens, working with police and courts, aids traffic safety and efficiency

"Walk-Wait" signs govern pedestrians at busy corners.

With a record number of cars and trucks choking their streets, American cities face a perplexing and arduous task in keeping traffic fluid and at the same time cutting a progressively increasing death and accident rate.

The dual problem has been attacked in various ways, but Akron, Ohio, has come up with a program that shows encouraging results, particularly in regard to safety.

Its success stems from an educational campaign for which the initiative comes from public-spirited citizens and an aggressive newspaper rather than from "tough" officials alone.

Akron's campaign started in 1945 when Lynn Holcomb, managing editor of the civic-minded Beacon Journal, brought together representatives of agencies interested in the traffic problem. They formed a steering committee, an informal shirt-sleeved forum to decide the most advantageous plan of attack.

Along with Holcomb the committee now includes a representative of the Chamber of Commerce's Safety Council; Traffic Judge Thomas M. Powers; Captain E. L. Engelhart, head of the Traffic Division of the Police; Earl Wagner, Akron Auto Club executive secretary; Tom Horner, Beacon Journal editorial writer, and Howard Absalom, Beacon Journal reporter.

So ably has this group done its work that in terms of safe driving Akron last year had but seven superiors in the nation. It topped the state in the over-200,000 population group.

Fatal accidents declined 29 per cent from 47 in 1946 to 33 last year. Of special interest is the fact that no fatalities occurred during the Christmas holiday when the Beacon Journal was publicizing traffic safety daily. The newspaper's role was recognized by a first, a second and two honorable mention prizes in the National Safety Council's most recent contest. Three were for significant photographs and one was for a cartoon.

Courts, Police Help

The carrying out of the committee's proposals is not left to chance. Traffic Judge Powers, a member, imposes fines in his court so as to teach offenders that Akron will not put up with sloppy or inattentive driving.

Akron's police also aid the committee's drive to increase safety while keeping traffic moving. Under Capt. Engelhart, 50 patrolmen are alert to watch for minor infractions, out of which, he believes, most major street accidents grow.

Steering committee for safety activities meets on short notice in office of Lynn Holcomb, managing editor of the Akron Beacon Journal.

Patrolman Ralph Eulitt gives driver a summons for "obscured vision." Car will be taken to garage where the windshield will be replaced.

When removal requires towing, two-man team goes into action. In addition to the fine, driver must defray the towing and repair charges.

Traffic violators can expect stiff fines from Judge Powers, who has little sympathy for irresponsible or inattentive driving. THE END.

LEMON IN WATER keeps you regular
AND IT'S GOOD FOR YOU!

JUICE OF ONE FRESH LEMON — IN A GLASS OF WATER — FIRST THING ON ARISING

You've always known that lemons are among the most healthful fruits. But did you realize that the juice of a lemon in a glass of water, when taken first thing on arising, is all that most people need to insure prompt, normal elimination?

No more harsh laxatives that irritate the digestive tract and impair nutrition! No more worrying: "Shall I take a laxative today or wait till tomorrow?" Lemon in water is good for you every day!

Generations of Americans have taken lemons for health—and generations of doctors have recommended them. They're among the richest sources of vitamin C; supply valuable amounts of B_1 and P. They help prevent colds, alkalinize, aid digestion.

Not too sharp or sour, lemon in water has a refreshing tang—clears the mouth, wakes you up. It's not a purgative—simply helps your system regulate itself. Try it 10 days.

Frank answers to some questions about Tampax

When something very different appears (like Tampax monthly protection) you "want to know"

Who invented Tampax—and why? The doctor-inventor of Tampax, by an ingenious patented device, has made the principle of internal absorption available for women's monthly use. How "different" is it? Being used internally Tampax (unlike external pads) requires no pins, belts or other supports. Only pure surgical cotton used — very absorbent. How does its use affect the spirits? The wearing of Tampax means increased freedom and reassurance. Users know there cannot be any visible bulges or ridges. Also Tampax causes no odor. Is it comfortable? Tampax is "more than comfortable" because when in place you cannot feel it at all. No chafing possible. Quick to change and easy to dispose of. Where is Tampax for sale? Drug stores and notion counters in 3 sizes: Regular, Super, Junior. Month's supply slips into a purse. Tampax Incorporated, Palmer, Mass.

PARADE's Guest Quiz...

BILL CULLEN

BACK AGAIN as PARADE's Guest Quiz Master is popular Bill Cullen, the interrogating master of ceremonies who presides over "Winner Take All"—(CBS, Monday through Friday, 4:30 p.m., E.D.S.T.). Feel like matching wits with an expert? Here's your chance. Just to make it more interesting (and difficult, too) radio-man Cullen has selected the following brain-twisters from his stock of questions which have occasioned more than the usual amount of bewilderment when they've been addressed to show participants on the air. You can check your answers at the bottom of the page.

1. In Washington, there is a memorial to a great American which bears the inscription: "I have sworn upon the altar of God hostility against every form of tyranny over the mind of man." Who is this man?

2. If you and a friend were lost in the woods at night, and your friend said, "We're all right now, there's the lodestar," which star would he be talking about?

3. There's a recently released British picture now being shown called "The Tawny Pipit." Just what is a pipit?

4. Who was the last king of Italy?

5. I am going to name three characters from opera. Which one does not belong in the same opera as the other two? Yum Yum, Pitti Sing, Cho Cho San.

6. Which member of the President's cabinet is the top man of the U. S. Lighthouse Service?

7. You remember the old football expression, "I'd die for dear old Rutgers." Just where is "dear old Rutgers"?

8. Can you tell me how many separate events there are in the decathlon in the Olympic Games?

9. How do people drive their cars in Latin America—to the right, as we do, or on the left, as in England?

10. At the Winter Olympics at St. Moritz, Switzerland, Barbara Ann Scott of Canada came away with an important championship. In which group did she top all others?

11. You find shoe trees in closets, and hat trees in hallways. But where do you find whiffletrees?

ANSWERS TO PARADE GUEST QUIZ

1. Thomas Jefferson.

2. The North—or Pole—Star.

3. A pipit is a small, lark-like bird.

4. King Umberto. He is the son of King Victor Emmanuel III, and reigned for a short time between his father's abdication and the formation of the Italian Republic.

5. Cho Cho San is in "Madame Butterfly"; the others are characters in "The Mikado."

6. Secretary of the Treasury. The Lighthouse Service is part of the Coast Guard, which in peacetime is under the Treasury Department.

7. New Brunswick, N. J., is the home of Rutgers University.

8. Ten.

9. To the right.

10. In figure skating. She became the women's figure-skating champion of the world.

11. On a wagon. It's a crossbar to which harness is fastened.

THE REBIRTH OF A GHOST TOWN

Goldfield, Nev., comes back as mines open anew

By DONALD WAYNE

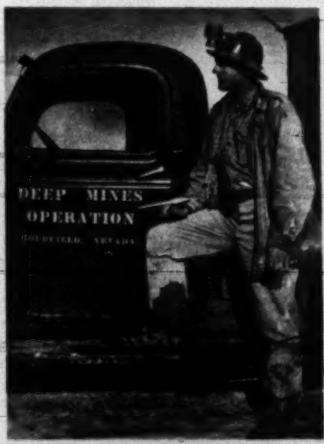
IN THE GOLD RUSH DAYS of the early 1900s, prospectors stampeding the Nevada desert created the roaring camp of Goldfield. By 1908 Goldfield had grown into the leading city of Nevada. It was twice the size of Reno and contained a fourth of the state's population. Then the gold gave out and everybody left. That's how ghost towns were made in the West, and Goldfield, no exception, became a ghost town, remaining one almost ever since.

About a year ago geologists of the Goldfield Deep Mines, a subsidiary of the Newmont Mining Corporation, began poking around in some old shafts. On the 300-foot level of the old Florence mine, famous gold hole of Goldfield's boom days, they hit a broad vein of andesite rock with yellow seams. It was a strike, and although the company tried to keep it secret, the news broke.

Since then the whole Goldfield district has sprung to life, with prospectors and mining companies staking claims for miles around. The air of what until a few months ago was a deserted, derelict community is today charged with a feverish restlessness that recalls the days of the original strike.

Optimists declare the new find a bonanza surpassing anything in Goldfield's fabulous past. Conservative opinion differs considerably, calling the ore just minable.

But one thing is certain. Any gold rush that develops will be motorized and law-abiding. Goldfield may rise again as a substantial western community, but the old frontier regime of gun fights and mining claim feuds will stay strictly dead.



Mine foreman Bud Taylor, newcomer to Nevada, heralds boom.

F.T.D. provides the service for decorating military graves in foreign countries...

We are pleased to announce that individual graves may be specially decorated on Memorial Day, May 30 and on any day thereafter.

Only graves of Military and Naval members located in U. S. Military Cemeteries in the following countries can be served: Alaska, Belgium, France, Holland, Italy, Luxembourg, Philippine Islands.

Special Wreaths for Memorial Day

Because the Military request a standard type of decoration for all graves on Memorial Day and as florists adjacent to serve military cemeteries in the above countries will be handling a large volume of orders for Memorial Day, arrangements have been made to fill all orders with very lovely wreaths.

The minimum price of wreaths placed on the graves will be $10.00 plus either air mail or cable charges.

How to Place Orders

Simply visit your local F.T.D. official florist, who displays the Winged Mercury Seal (shown below) on his shop window. He'll handle your order easily and efficiently. You should supply him with information the War Department has given all next of kin; the boy's name, name of cemetery and country, plot, row and grave number.

Important—Order Early!

• All overseas Memorial Day orders placed up to May 17 will be transmitted by Air Mail. This will save you money. If you order a $10.00 wreath, your only additional cost will be 55 cents to Alaska; 65 cents to European countries; or 75 cents to the Philippines.

• All overseas Memorial Day orders placed up to May 22 will be transmitted by night cable letter. If you order a $10.00 wreath, your additional cost will be $2.55 to Alaska; $2.80 to European countries and $3.25 to the Philippines.

• All overseas Memorial Day orders placed after May 22 will be transmitted by straight cable rates, which are higher than air mail or night cable.

Echoing a lusty past, Goldfield prepares for a new boom

IN HER HEYDAY GOLDFIELD was a combination of thriving metropolis and wild frontier town. Splendid stone buildings lined the streets, and primitive autos chugged past desert burros. The town was wide open and blazing guns settled arguments. It was the twilight of a lusty era which began with the California gold rush and covered the West, ending here in the Nevada desert.

In 1907, her peak year, Goldfield had two stock exchanges, six newspapers, a Turkish bath and the biggest hotel between Denver and San Francisco.

Orchestra in the Sagebrush

The plushy Palm Restaurant featured the only string orchestra in the Great American Desert, and the cornerstone of the Montezuma Club, a renowned Babylonian resort, was laid by moonlight, toasted with buckets of whiskey. Senators and Wall Street wizards walked in Goldfield, and twice the national limelight focused on the town. The Gans-Nelson fight for the world's lightweight title was staged here, promoted by a saloonkeeper named Tex Rickard, who then rose to spectacular fame as a sports promoter. Goldfield also saw two of Jack Dempsey's earliest bouts. The second big event was a labor strike of gold miners in 1907, which was broken up by bullets of the Nevada militia.

Almost nothing of these and other memories can be recaptured in Goldfield today. After the gold petered out in the mines, the great enemy of ghost towns—fire—finished the job. In the summer of 1923 a blaze demolished more than half the town. The desert has since encroached upon the rest, except where a residual citizenry of 300 has kept it from their doorsteps. These have been the stubborn dreamers who always believe in Goldfield's renaissance. Now it looks as though their dream may be coming true.

Few Jobs in Town

As a ghost town Goldfield has been without industries, so its people held jobs in nearby Tonapah or worked for Esmeralda County. For years it's been a regular pastime to prospect in the deserted mines outside town. From slag and leftover ore in the Silver Pick, Red Top, Combination, Florence—holes that once gave out over $1,000,000 a month—town gleaners mine a little pin money and keep in prospecting trim. Practically everybody in Goldfield has staked claims of his own.

The original Goldfield strike in 1903 was in Columbia Mountain, overlooking the town. The present gold strike lies a bit farther north. Geologists see a connection between the two, but romantics firmly insist the new diggings are virgin and will prove to be the richest lode since the Comstock, which was after all in Nevada and actually in the same chain of mountains. Who can say? One thing about gold hasn't changed a particle. It's still where you find it.

Goldfield Elks clubroom is scene of nightly game of pan, popular Western card game. Influx of miners is seen as vanguard of a new rush. Goldfield had three railroads, now has none. THE END.

How Does Polo Fit Into The Sports Scene?

Traditionally a game for rich men who can afford the cost of keeping several horses, polo has never had a broad popular following. Within its own limits, however, it has produced sports figures on a par with Babe Ruth and Ty Cobb. Read about it in PARADE next week.

Hollywood's Enchanted Cottage

Movie children's wonderland

De luxe dresses and playthings fill Gail Patrick's enchanted shop

Enchanted Cottagers: Actress-proprietor Gail Patrick displays summer wardrobe for actress Ruth Warrick's daughter, Karen. Store caters exclusively to children under age ten.

WHENEVER A SOPHISTICATED Hollywood youngster tires of his platinum meccano set, blooded Shetland pony, and private swimming pool, like as not he whistles for one of the family limousines and is driven to a brightly painted, red and white shop in Beverly Hills known as The Enchanted Cottage.

A sort of year-round Christmas toyland, with rocking horse wallpaper and peppermint-striped furniture, it is run as a profitable business enterprise by actress Gail Patrick and is patronized almost exclusively by the offspring of Hollywood's top-drawer society.

Virtually everything to delight the childish heart nestles on its shelves, runs on tracks in its playroom, or opens and shuts its eyes in the model nursery.

The grassy yard contains a miniature log cabin and a miniature Tyrolean chalet, each as large as a small garage; and a miniature store with a miniature cash drawer, Hollywood's standard symbol of enchantment since the Keystone Cops.

A good deal more than a toy store, the Cottage has an almost Parisian effect on juvenile fashions. Selling, in addition to standard items at standard prices, hand-sewn organdy dresses bearing titles like "Ring Around The Rosy" and "Button, Button," it is prepared to outfit a child from the cradle to the age of ten, wrapping everything in hobbyhorse paper and silk ribbon.

For Smart Younger Set

In the two and a half years since its establishment, The Enchanted Cottage has become more or less the juvenile equivalent of such adult places of fashion as the Mocambo, L'Aiglon, and Romanoff's. It is an extremely dull day that does not ring with the laughter of Candy Bergen (daughter of Edgar) and Roy Rogers' Cheryl as they skylark on the hobbyhorses hand-painted by Maureen O'Sullivan. Enchantress Gail Patrick is proving that there is a nice market for enchantment.

Window shopper Candy Bergen, with mother Mrs. Edgar Bergen, points excitedly at gaily-draped window.

Fashion-conscious Jeanine Roose, of Los Angeles, debates whether to buy taffeta robe or new pajama set.

Twirling airplane gets try-out from shopper Mark Cook. Children are free to play with all toys in Cottage.

Doll with three faces on rotating head fascinates Sharon Harmon, daughter of ex-football star, Tommy. Mother, Elyse Knox, former actress-model bought her a dress called "Ring Around the Rosy." Goods at Cottage are top quality.

Alana Ladd (daughter of you-know-whom) tries out a toy xylophone. Pink and blue dress is from the Cottage.

Paddy and Maria Farrow, children of Maureen O'Sullivan, try out portable slide. Mother helps design new playthings.

Party furniture enchants two-year-old Marilyn Flint and cousins Karen and Jon, children of Ruth Warrick. THE END.

Don't Be Fat !

Have the SLIM attractive figure you want

New R.D.X. tablets help you to help yourself reduce

If you've been putting off reducing because you have more than your share of "human nature" and can't seem to resist fattening foods, here's what you've been waiting for!

R.D.X. tablets are made to help you curb your desire for fattening foods. You eat many foods you choose and like.

No longer need you torture yourself with violent exercise or take the risk of dangerous drugs. No longer need you have pangs of conscience—and be fat!—because you can't stick to a reducing diet.

The R.D.X. plan may help you lose unwanted pounds while you eat three meals a day of certain foods you like and choose.

How R.D.X. Helps Reducers

You don't like what you see in your mirror. The clothes you can no longer get into are a constant reminder that you are stouter than you should be. But it's hard to stay on a reducing diet when you crave fattening foods.

Here's how R.D.X. tablets help you. Taken before meals, they safely help to curb your appetite for unneeded foods. Taken between meals R.D.X. tablets help stave off the hunger pangs that cause you to over-indulge in fattening snacks. Thus reducing becomes more pleasant, a more enjoyable way of eating.

Your Doctor Should Approve

Has your doctor told you to take off weight? Then ask him about the wonderful new R.D.X. tablets and Reducing plan in each package.

R.D.X. tablets contain no harmful drugs and are a new development of a known nutritional principle.

R.D.X. is a dietary supplement for reducers, consisting chiefly of a high concentrate of ascorbic acid in a high grade protein base.

Let The Scales Show You

You do want to lose weight, don't you? Perhaps nothing could make you happier than trimming off some of your extra body fat. Then do this: Buy a package of R.D.X. tablets. Read the R.D.X. Reducing plan enclosed—and follow it implicitly for just ten days.

See if you don't actually feel better and look better while the scales show how unwanted pounds disappear!

What's more, the R.D.X. plan helps you to keep your weight where you want it, without depriving yourself of many foods you enjoy.

NOTE: R.D.X. is not a reducing drug—R.D.X. is a dieting aid designed to help you control your appetite for fattening foods.

SAVE MONEY!

Sold at all drug and department stores featuring fair trade price.

Which of These "Human Nature" Habits Is Keeping You Fat?

Can't Resist Fattening Foods? Eating more than you need for your energy requirements puts pounds on you. R.D.X. tablets should help you to eat less.

Eating Between-Meal Snacks? Too many tidbits and sweets may pile unwanted fat on you. R.D.X. tablets should help satisfy between-meal hunger.

Icebox Raiding At Bedtime? It's only human nature to want something to eat at bedtime. R.D.X. tablets should help you to curb this habit.

R.D.X. TABLETS HELP YOU EAT LESS AND STILL ENJOY THAT SATISFIED FEELING!
